NEWS FROM THE MERSEY.

Liverpool, April 7, 1870.

As there are such a large number of Liverpool men settled in the River Plate countries, it has occurred to me that a tew lines about the old town and things in general might be of of Queens Bench. The unfortunate have been out long enough to have lost any feeling of home sickness; at least I know when I was in the camps, any thing in the way of news, however trifling, was of interest to me, particularly if my regular papers did not turn up; and whenever I met a townsman of my own I was eagerly asked the question-"Any news from the old place?" For this reason I send you this epistle for insertion, if you think it worth while, and I shall be glad at times to send you a scrap or two of news, if you think the Dicky Sams would like it.

In the first place I will mention, for the benefit of those who have been away for six or eight years, a few of the alterations that have taken place in principal streets; to commence with of the advertisement "Notice Relative the way of buildings in some of the the Exchange.
