TELEGRAPHS.

The frequency with which is repeated among us a deed which almost all the nations of the earth punis has a crime, induces us to devote our attention to-day to investigate the cause and point out the means which would diminish the abuse, if not entirely suppress it.

We refer to the injurious and malicious custom of cutting the wires of our telegraphs, which is becoming every day more general, principally affecting the wires of the River Plate Telegraph Company, which on account of the important services which it renders at the present time, appears to attract the malevolence of those experienced in committing such offences.

During the few days that have already transpired of the present month, the company to whose charge is confided the telegraph which unites this capital with Montevideo have had to repair the following breakages.

He who violates or abstracts correspondence entrusted to the post-office has fifteen and twenty years penal servitude it accordance with the laws of the most advanced nations. Well then does he who cuts a telegraph wire commit a less serious crime than he who throws a railway train off the track, or he who attempts to violate correspondence;

he who pretends to prove it may as well' sustain that the earth is square, since there is as much truth in the one assertion as in the other. The telegraphic institution by its permanency causes all to depend upon it for their business, the care of their interests and matters of private life, and he who suddenly deprives the public of this means of communication, besides the felony he commits against foreign property, inflicts grave injuries on the public in general, which cause great misfortunes and entail a series of troubles to individuals as well as to the Government and public.

Between robbing a letter and impeding the transmission of a telegram what is the difference? Between detaining the train, and cutting the telegraph communication between two towns, what distinction is there?

In our judgment the difference between the one crime and the other, if there is any, is small in the extreme and a judge would be compelled in view of the results to administer the same penalty to the one who throws a train off the track, as the one who cuts a telegraph line.

Passing to another phase of reflection, the question naturally arises, to what causes, should we attribute these | ment. acts which speak so little in favor of civilization and the advancement of the people.

Some 20 years ago ignorance was an apology, but superstitious ideas were not prevalent amougst us at the establishing of the telegraph in B. Ayres, as was the case in Venezuela, Mexico, and even in Chile, and lastly neither the preventions nor jealousies of industrial competition can be alleged in the present case to explain the fact. No; the evil has a higher origin.

Commanders-in-chief there have been who have refused to celebrate agreements for the neutralisation of power of industry over nature, to Swit-

Governments there have been who have wished to place the telegraph beneath their especial care.

. Editors of newspapers we have known who have openly boasted of their intention to cut the telegraph are loth to believe it, yet it is a fact, and public opinion endorses the same. Persons very well known in our society have attempted and carried to a termination on various occasions the It must almost certainly be practical. neutralisation of the telegraph.

When an assassination is committed in the country districts, no matter how distant the place may be from the centre of population, do not the authorities who intervene use all the means in their power to arrest the assassins? Surely yes; but the crime is already condemned by law. The cutting of telegraphs should be declared a crime; the authors of such a deed should be previously made responsible for the injuries which they may cause; severe punishments should be established for Continental States, the increasing upon to send in their claims before the 28th, those who commit such violence; the greatness of Russia, even though it perpetrators should be pursued with activity and energy to the remotest embrace, ought to be hailed as the incorner of the republic if necessary, so as to save the respect due to authority and demonstrate the wish of making sia is secure. PROGRESS.

LAS MENSAGERIAS DEL PUERTO Now consists of five steamers, all constructed Now consists of nvo steamers, all constructed for, and specially adapted to the harbor work, such as the landing of passengers, parcels, and baggage, and for towage and special trips in the harbor, or to Colonia, Tigre, the Islands, or, in fact, to any more distant point.

It will be the Manager's special endeavour to give entire satisfaction to those who may employ the steamers, and, as he can scarcely believe any one will hesitate between sail and steam, when one will nestate between sail and steam, when the tariff is about the same, he may reasonably expect a good portion of the harbor work. One of the steamers will leave the Mole daily at 7 a.m., and one will remain in the Outer Roads, for the accommodation of Ship Captains arriving.

The Steamers will always be ready by Day or Night, and the terms are about the same as the whaleboat tariff.
