AT RIO SEGUNDO.

REPORT OF THE STA. FE COMMITTEE. On the 15th December we assisted at Rio Segundo, in company with the Minister of Instruction, the Directors of the Exhibition, and delegates of the other Provinces. Among the machinery on the ground were patent reapers by W. A. Wood, Buckeye, Dodge & Simpson, Samuelson, A. Jackson, and Hornby, some of whom obtained prizes at previous exhibitions, and have since improved their machines. These are, in fact, the finest in the world, and did their work the best for large establishments are the combined Reapers-and-Mowers. The land was divided into 3,000 square at the same time, and fourteen peons working in another part of the field with reaping-hooks, doing as much as are arming energetically. Russia one machine. It was not possible to make an exact comparison between the machines, the systems being different, and the horses unequal in training; nevertheless we may say that each machine cut about 6,000 square yards per hour, equal to the work of twenty men, thus effecting a saving of $20 Bolivianos per day, which in thir-Spain every day, although the Carlists ty days would pay for a patent reaper and eight horses (£100).

From the 15th to the 17th we tried the Steam Threshers of Rushton Proctor, R. Garrett and Sons, Sufford all of which worked admirably. On of these machines, worked by twelve men, can thresh from eight to teu fa negas of grain per hour. EDITOR'S TABLE.

The unexpected and exciting inteligence of the intended capitulation of Paris and the defeat of all the French armies endeavouring to march to its relief caused the most profound impression in town on Friday afternoon. The news by the Germany, which after the English comparsus, Nelson and all seems to have made a good passage from Lisbon, records, if true, the overthrow of France; for, although tial strains of 'Rule Britannia' and 'the many think that even the fall of Paris will not induce France to cry Hold. The teleday, but meantime if important news grams published are said to be taken rom Lisbon papers, a source not always reliable. There seems little doubt, however, that Paris had offered to capitulate; but the resumption of the bombardment on the 25th, M. Jules Favre's visit to Versailles being made on the previous day, proves that the Germans had refused any terms but those of unconditional surrender. All the remainder of the intelligence per Germany is of trifling importance compared with that from Paris, though the victory of Bourbaki at Belfort might have serious results for Germany if everything had not been lost elsewhere in France. The details of the bombardment to hand, such as they are, confirm the intelligence published by the STANDARD, when the Douro arrived, to the effect that the Prussian shells had reached the centre of Paris. well, in proportion to their price; but One of our highly esteemed French colleagues favoured us on the occasion with a somewhat censorious sermon on the advisability of not exaggerating yards for each machine, all beginning the news. To speak quite seriously, we are of opinion that Great Britain has trifled quite long enough with as and her own fortunes in the matter of relations with the United States, and it is high time that some solution should be arrived at which is intelligible and dignified to both parties. The building itself is gloomy and undesirable as a residence, and but for the English pleasure-grounds laid out by the late Princess Elizabeth, it would have but few attractions for Her Majesty and her daughter-in-law. They both live in very simple style and keep only small establishments.

The Queen is very partial to France and the French language.
