A book entitled "The Lost Bourbon" has lately appeared in New York and created a great sensation. It professes to demonstrate that the Duc de Reichstadt, King of Rome, was not the victim of Elzler's conspiracy, as History has supposed, but lately expired in the States at a ripe age.

One of the most stupendous feats of newspaper enterprise is credited to the New York Herald in connection with the Vienna Exhibition. Rather than be defeated by their energetic rival, the Tribune, the managers of the Herald gave instructions to their correspondent, Mr. Edmund Yates, to "spare no expense."

In order to steal a march on the Herald, the Tribune telegraphed to Queens-town, so that "the copy" might go on by rail. Mr. Yates, however, telegraphed right through; and the charge for the message amounted to the nice little sum of two thousand guineas!

The frost yesterday morning was terribly severe, and water left in exposed situations during the night was found covered with a thick coating of ice at day break. The sun soon made short work of it, however, and dashed up the mud in a way to make a shoeblack's eyes twinkle.

A terrific "escandalo" is reported from "dear dirty Dublin" in private letters. "On die" that Sir Arthur Guinness Bart, head of the great brewing firm which makes Double and Treble X for all creation, and pays income tax on £150,000 a year, has thought it convenient to make "the grand," or some other name, the wife of a noble lady, and now turns out in doing so he went in for a little bigamy, having been previously "spliced" to a peasant girl on his father's estate.

We had mails from the W. Coast on Thursday; also from Central America. In Chile there is a mild row going on about the National Institute. Alarming predictions as to earthquakes and other desperate events seem to occur in Chile as of late.

At Serena a candle fell from Heaven through the roof of a hut, or a sign, or something, and the people are in error at the supernatural occurrence. There was a slight earthquake jolt on the 14th ult, and the terror of the people was awful. Congress has done next to nothing since it opened.

A locomotive at Iquique exploded on the 25th May, blowing twenty four persons into "Kingdom come" and little bits at the same moment, and maiming eight more for the term of their natural lives.

We perceive that the Victoria Journal has been started in England as an organ of woman's rights. It is said that in the first number there was not a single allusion to bonnets, ribbons, furs, flowers, feathers, or any other of the highly important and ornamental topics which form the principal topic of conversation among many of the sex.

A Frenchman, soliciting relief of an English lady, said generally to his fair hearer, "Madame, ne venez pas me dire que j'ai un vilain petit nez!" (Do not tell me I have a bad nose!)

Mr. Forbes's noted establishment for preserving meat (Marcos Paz) was the scene of a very gay party on Wednesday last. After a most sumptuous dinner had been served up, toasts became the order of the evening, during which several of the guests showed forth their oratorical powers.

Mr. Lopez, of 40, for Buenos, the German steamer Buenos Ayres is expected hourly. She sails on 21st.

The status of General Belgrano in Plaza Mayo has not yet been unveiled, but remains covered with an old poncho rather the worse for wear, wind and weather. The general opinion of the statue as a work of art, is, according to our Argentine colleagues, not favorable.

Messrs. Lucas Gonzalez and Carlos Olivera write from 10 Angel Court, London, to the Minister of Interior, under date May 7th, that they published notices in the leading London papers, calling for proposals for the 5 new narrow-gauge railways, but that nobody seemed to care about the matter, as no surveys or plans existed of the proposed lines.

Two more mad men were bagged by the police on Wednesday; both were sons of the Sud—not the "old Sud" thank goodness, but the R. P. Sud.

at present between any of the little "repubs" clustered about the Equator. From Mexico we have a piece of news of the deepest personal interest to our colleagues and ourselves, viz the establishment of an Asylum for superannuated and indigent editors. The exportation of coffee from Mexico is assuming enormous proportions. Look to your laurels Brazil!
