RESIGNATION OF MINISTER AVELLANEDA.

To the Minister of Interior. The President of the Republic and Your Excellency are already aware of the motives which impel me to abandon the high post that I have held in the Cabinet since its first formation.

This resignation is due to President Sarmiento and Minister Avellaneda, and although we feel a passing regret at the retirement of the latter we feel convinced that his country will again command his services.

As our readers may remember, it is something more than a month since the six years' labors of the committee were successfully brought to a close, but the official ceremony was much delayed pending the action of Congress with regard to the subscription of a million dollars to complete the capital.

We do not know if this was done merely for effect, or whether the first 'patio' really is meant for a drying ground; one thing is clear, that to prevent the cloth being stained by the dust the yard must be paved.

in the same condition as they use in Europe. The enterprize most likely to succeed, more especially as the committee instead of attempting a general opposition to the imported article will confine itself merely to coarse cloths at first, then improving and refining the efforts as they go along.

The invitations numbering some five hundred were given early last week to the distributor, but owing to some delay several parties did not get them.

At half-past two H.E. President Sarmiento, Minister Tejedor and some other dignitaries arrived, as well as His Grace Dr. Aneiros, Archbishop-elect, who were received by Messrs. Billinghurst, Terrero, Esteves Segui and others of the Board.

Already a large concourse of ladies and gentlemen had assembled, and were engaged in inspecting the machinery. The scene reminded us of a day at the Crystal Palace, or a flower show at Kingstown.

At a signal from the President the machinery was put in motion, the bands of the Provincial Guard and city police played, and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed amongst the visitors.

The inspection of the machinery over, a move was made for the upper end of the hall. There where the wool should be, now stood some of the greatest men in the land, backed by the youth and beauty of the nation.

At this moment Dr. Aneiros blessed the establishment, after which President Sarmiento addressed a few words of congratulation to the shareholders on the successful completion of this great and useful undertaking.

Dr. Esteves Segui president of the committee followed with an eloquent address. In a masterly way he traced the origin of cloth and its use to man, following up the improvement in dress from the days of our first parents to the present day.

Mr. Billinghurst's toast—"the Argentine youth" hoping that they might steadily follow the footsteps of their fathers whose goal was progress.

General Madariaga—long life to Dr. Esteves Segui (cheers). Dr. Esteves Segui—replied, that not to him, but to the spirit of progress of the nation, was due the celebration of to-day.

Mr. Perez del Cerro, Carulla, and others followed in fervid strains, keeping up the feast until 6 p.m.

unalterable resignation of the portfolio of Justice, Worship and Public Instruction.

I have the honor to remain, Nicholas Avellaneda.

Department of Interior, August 19th, 1873.

Let the resignation of Dr. Avellaneda of the portfolio of Justice, Worship and Public Instruction be accepted, at the same time that the most cordial thanks are given him in the name of the Government for the important services rendered by him during so lengthened a period, and that we signify to him that the only reason for which we accept his resignation is that of the general good to which he points in his note.

MONTEVIDEO.

INAUGURATION OF CLARK PUNCHARD'S DREDGE.

The powerful steam-dredge 'Montevideo,' belonging to the eminent firm of Clark Punchard & Co. of London, was launched on Saturday at the foot of Calle Andes, in presence of a large and influential assemblage of natives and foreigners, chiefly belonging to the mercantile community.

When I first undertook to clear the port of Montevideo I knew that it was an arduous task and one requiring a heavy outlay of capital, for I had before me the remembrance of the Company formed some 40 years ago for this purpose, the remains of whose works we must begin by removing from the bed of the waters that we now look upon.

But I was not intimidated, for I felt that it was necessary to make a great effort; or else this port, the key to the commerce of the River Plate, would in a short time be blocked up beyond remedy, and foreign vessels obliged to anchor outside, as many now have to do, in an open roadstead.

Assuming all the necessary responsibility I went before the Legislative Chambers, and having obtained the proper sanction directed my steps to the world's emporium of London, where I found prompt support from the great house of Clark Punchard and procured the requisite capital towards carrying out the important work of clearing, deepening and canalizing the port of Montevideo.

ment. The Bonapartists, like the old Romans, never cry, except after a coup d'Etat, and then for joy.

It is the foreign policy of the Government, influenced by its Ultramontane supporters, that causes most anxiety, and the increasing little success of the Carlists will only accentuate that policy more, and which so far inspires the liberal press of Italy and Switzerland to defy the clerical powers of France.

It appears no public rejoicings, such as banquets to Thiers and kindred "conspirators and disturbers of the public peace," will be tolerated to celebrate the final departure of the invader, and the Government declines accepting addresses for effecting the liberation of the territory and the reorganization of France, which is ordinarily attributed to Thiers.

spelling 'Chah'; they have discovered that the former is an English corruption; the latter comes from the Gaelic, which obtained it from Rhameses, who engraved it on the obelisk, at present erected in the Place de la Concord.

Any other spelling henceforth than Chah will be unpatriotic. Littré in his dictionary, anticipating qu'arell, spells the word both ways.

M. Tholozan, the Shah's medical adviser, read a paper before the French Academy of Sciences, pointing out that Persia, no more than any other portion of the East, was not a first-rate port for plagues; that epidemics were not localised. He has found cholera in the richest portions of Persia, and fever and dysentery in the famine-stricken districts. It would not be too rash to assert that epidemics find a home wherever hygienic arrangements are neglected.

The view of having the scandal brought under the notice of his Majesty, the 'savants' present complained of the Germans ridiculing the priority of their discoveries, while appropriating them all the same.

The Germans, not unnaturally, pay a sensitive attention to French military subjects, and appear to conclude from the result of the late war, that the military spirit is dead in France. This is a great error, for that spirit is just what the misfortunes of the war never destroyed. Defeats disheartened France, as they well might any country, but the masses were not averse to fighting had they had the means and the training.

Further, the interest taken in the military review in honour of the Shah, by the spectators, with all France behind them, is proof that the army is loved and honored. The future fight, when it does take place between France and Germany, will find the match more equal, and in reality not a button wanting on a French soldier's gaiter.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

We publish in another column a full description of the inauguration of the joint stock cloth factory on Wednesday. We are glad to perceive that the fair sex was unanimously represented at the ceremony. This is a decided step in the right direction, as, however much ladies may be in the way where business 'pur et simple' is going on, when it is combined with pleasure their presence is a decided acquisition, and assuages the misery inflicted by windy speeches and indifferent refreshments, not that we mean that either of these were going to any insufferable extent at the inauguration on Wednesday.

Our Paris Letter in another column is fresh, and as interesting as usual. Our French friends did not go into half the ecstasies about Mr. Nasreddin that the Londoners did, and we opine the Gauls displayed the better taste.

The European circus at the Mount gives a benefit to-night for the British Hospital in that city. All the local English world, his wife and small fry are going. An interesting feature of the evening will be the presence of the crew of H.M.S. Pylades, two wealthy English merchants—Mr. D.—and Mr. B.—having generously offered to pay for the admission of the gallant tars.

The Dart has returned to Montevideo from the rivers; H.M. Ohargé, Mr. St. John, is still in the sister city.

Another carving match occurred on the Southern Railway on Wednesday evening. As the 3 p.m. down train was approaching the Lauro station two raw boned specimens of the equine race got on the live in front of the locomotive. No amount of unearthly whistling could induce them to get out of the way, and the result was imminent to the animals and a shock to the passengers in the train. Several of them who were craning from the windows to see what the whistling was about got well sprinkled with blood and bones, and for a moment or two fancied it was their own remains they were looking at. It is seldom people get such a slap-up fright as this; such feelings must be experienced to be properly appreciated.

Papa Martin was performed at the Opera House in Montevideo some nights since, and was a most brilliant failure. The audience was as thin as weak gruel, and Bottero the only singer worth listening to.

A terrible tram-reek took place on the Flores line on Wednesday evening. The car, which had a full complement of homeward bound business passengers in the saloon and a large number on deck, started from the Plaza about 5 o'clock, and made a magnificent run up to the Club, weather fine with a fresh breeze. On passing the Sala things began to look squally, and the man at the break had enough to do to keep the car's head to the wind. Shortly after rounding the curve to the starboard track, the car being under easy mules, and her course SSW by W and a quarter S, she gave an awful lurch to port, and Captain Marr of the Colina, who, fortunately, was on the bridge, roared out in stentorian tones, "look out for the lee roll!" Too late. At the moment the Captain's trumpet voice was heard the car rolled heavily to leeward, the mules jibed, the jibboom ran into the yawning mouth of a gas pipe, and the car was stuck hard and fast in the gully where the mains are being laid. A scene that baffles description ensued, and Captain Marr took the command. The shouts from the wretched passengers on the hurricane deck were awful, and a rush down the companion ladder was made, while the crew in the saloon made frantic efforts to escape. By this time the car was quite unmanageable and would answer her break "Stop her!" shouted the mate (mayoral

"Full speed astern" yelled the Captain, and the mules lashed out like mad, to the imminent risk of any brains there were amongst the passengers.
