GOLD FROM CUNAPIRU. A gentleman from Hamburg recently travelling on the Brazilian frontier of Banda Oriental was struck with the extraordinary richness of the quartz near Santa Ana do Livramento, reminding him of what he had seen at Ballarat and other parts of Australia twenty years ago.

He soon learned that he was in the reputed gold region of Cunapiru, that a few natives now and then occupied themselves in washing out grains of gold dust in the streams of the Arcaud and Cunapiru valleys, and that Gen. Goyo Suarez at intervals employed 30 hands in the same pursuit.

He does not seem to have met the two or three English miners who were working there some ten years back; but made a collection of two dozen rough samples as they came to hand, with the idea of showing them to his friends in Montevideo and Buenos Ayres, and putting them on exhibition to attract proper notice towards so rich a field of promise.

The sample now before us is a rough piece of white quartz, from which the gold crops out on all sides, and Mr. N. declares it of richer quality than anything he ever saw in Australia.

The entire rocky formation, he says, is of the same description, and if there were hands to crush it, he computes that Montevideo could draw ten thousand ounces of gold weekly for a long time, until the hill-side were exhausted.

The locality, he adds, offers far greater advantages for gold-digging than at Ballarat: the quartz is obtained close at hand, with abundance of water-supply; and the gold could be sent down to M. Video (300 miles) with comparative ease, under a slight escort.

All these facts were urged by Mr. Rogers ten years ago, when he came to B. Ayres to form a company; the samples he produced being so rich that some people supposed they were got up for the purpose, and not really taken from Cunapiru.

He failed to enlist any of our capitalists in the venture, although a sounder business than Bolsa speculations and calling for a comparatively small capital for commencing works. Probably his failure was attributable to the unsatisfactory result of our San Juan silver-mines: at any rate, Mr. Rogers was soon forgotten, and Cunapiru regarded as mythical.

In 1867 Messrs. Jackson, Ramirez and other wealthy men in Montevideo got up a company and sent Mr. Bankart to England for machinery and miners. Nuggets from Cunapiru had been exhibited in shop windows, and Mr. Bankart's report on the mines was to the effect that they surpassed whatever he had seen in Australia or Guatemala during 15 years of gold-mining; he was a man of scientific education and much experience, but afflicted with such an unhappy temper that he made enemies on all sides, and soon after his return from England was put in prison by the Directors for unwarrantable language.

His skilled workmen were so disheartened that they returned to England, and the machinery which he brought out is still lying on the beach at Salto, never having reached the mines. The company burst up, after great outlay, not from any failure of the mines, but owing to the hasty temper of Mr. Bankart and imprudent severity of the Directors. Meantime Cunapiru has remained a sealed book, except to the few gauchos who pick up grains of the precious metal, which they traffic with the "pulperos" of the neighborhood for a bottle of brandy or other occasional requirement.

Our friend from Hamburg believes that before long the Cunapiru valley will be crowded with the tents of gold-diggers. Even with the rudest appliances for crushing he says anyone can earn £15 or £20 a week, and if we had here a mining population as in Australia the whole Cunapiru hill-range would speedily be crushed and converted into gold-dust.

At a distance of 300 miles from the gold-field it is difficult to say whether these promises are too brilliant or otherwise. It must also be borne in mind that solitary miners would probably be murdered as soon as they could get a little gold together; the lawless condition of Banda Oriental, especially on the frontier districts, is equal to that of Mexico. Again, it is difficult to see how machinery could be conveyed to Cunapiru without great outlay, and any project of a joint-stock company must face the discouraging history of that formed in 1867.

Under these circumstances we are inclined to believe that Cunapiru is probably the richest gold-field in South America, and quite equal to Ballarat, but we can hardly expect to see its riches uncovered to the world for some years to come, when Santa Ana de Livramento becomes better known on the atlas.

The sample of our friend from Hamburg is on exhibition at this office.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES AND DEATHS.

The returns recently published by D. Manuel Trolles, Chief of the Statistical Department of Buenos Ayres, are for the year 1868, but may afford food for much speculative study to anyone who compares the various tables of figures that Mr. Trolles gives us with our comment.

The city of Buenos Ayres, with the parochial registers of its 11 parish churches, and of the 4 Protestant chapels, is the immediate subject of our attention, and shews the following figures:—

The births registered in 1868 were 6,099, equal to 4 per cent. in a population of 150,000 souls; but as there was Cholera in that year the deaths exceeded the births by 465, so that there was no increase, unless by immigration.

The births may be classified thus:—

Table with 2 columns: Of Argentine parents, Foreign, Mixed. Rows: Boys, Girls.

This shews that only one-third of the children born in the city are of Argentine parentage, two-thirds being foreign or mixed. It is also remarkable that the former show 4 males to 3 females, whereas the children of foreigners are even as regards sexes.

Perhaps we should except the English-speaking or Protestant community, which shews only 3 males to 5 females, viz:—

Table with 2 columns: Male, Female. Rows: German, Scotch, English, Mixed.

Of the total 6,099, there were 5,352 legitimate and 747 illegitimate; of the latter only 24 are registered as children of foreigners, it being difficult to arrive at a correct return on this head. The figures may be summed up, as regards sexes thus:—

Taking the various parishes, we find Concepcion, Monserrat and San Nicolas give the greatest numbers. It is worthy of note that the Merced, Colorado and Piedad parishes show 2 males for 1 female, whereas Socorro, San Telmo and San Miguel have the sexes even.

Marriages.

There were 1703 marriages in the year, including 89 Protestants, 3 mixed and 39 of colored people. The proportion as regards ages was:—

Table with 2 columns: Under 25 years, 25 to 35, 35 to 45, 45 upwards.

Under the head of nationalities we find as follows:—

Table with 2 columns: Argentine, Foreigners, Mixed.

This shews that two-thirds of our adult population are foreigners, or that the latter are more given to matrimony than Argentines. It is, moreover, interesting to study the relations of intermarriage between natives and foreigners, thus:—

There were 130 foreign men married native wives, and 36 native men took foreign wives. In other words, the total of persons married was:—

Table with 2 columns: Foreign husbands, Native husbands, Wives.

This number of 1703 marriages was considerably in excess of any previous year, and nearly double the returns for 1861:—

Table with 2 columns: 1861, 1862, 1863, 1868.

It is remarkable that the marriages in the second half of each year are much more numerous than in the first.

Deaths.

The mortality of 1868 was much increased by the cholera, the total of 6,564 being equal to 40 per mil, or 150,000 inhabitants, or double the London ratio.

The returns shew as follows:—

Table with 2 columns: Whites, Catholics, Do. Protestant, Colored, Catholics, At hospitals.

The effects of the Cholera are very visible in the returns of January—1,296, whereas February fell to 462, and the ratio for the rest of the year was equal to only 30 per mil, the above figures not including the hospitals. If we study the ages we find:—

Table with 2 columns: Under 4 years, 4 to 10, 10 to 15, 15 to 20, 20 to 30, 30 to 40, 40 to 50, 50 to 60, 60 to 70, 70 to 80, 80 to 90, 90 to 100.

Cases of longevity are very numerous, for we find 23 persons had passed 90 years of age. The mortality among

Protestant residents was not so heavy among children as with the natives:—

Table with 2 columns: Under 4 years, 4 to 10, 10 to 15, 15 to 20, 20 to 30, 30 to 40, 40 to 50, 50 to 60, 60 to 70, 70 to 80, 80 to 90, 90 to 100.

The deaths of Protestants exceeded the number of births by 21, viz.:—

Table with 2 columns: Births, Deaths.

As regards seasons the healthiest months were from August to November inclusive. Whether owing to climatic influences, or to the habits of the people the natural increase of population is trifling, the births little exceeding the deaths:—

Table with 2 columns: Births, Deaths.

This is a gain of only six thousand in a period of 9 years, or 700 per annum, say 1/2 per cent on the population.

These figures deserve the careful study of our physicians and rulers. To our view the large mortality among infants is the reason why these tables shew such unpleasant comparison; the climate is not only agreeable but salubrious, at least for adults, and if you deduct 50 per cent. of the mortality (as corresponding to infants) it will be seen that the ratio of adult life may compare with most cities on the Continent of Europe.

OBITUARY

Of the late WILLIAM WHEELWRIGHT, published in the N. Y. Herald of Oct. 2d. 1873.

WILLIAM WHEELWRIGHT. Mr. William Wheelwright, whose death was announced in the Herald's cable dispatches of the 26th inst., is an American by birth and sentiment, sprung from some of the oldest New England stock, is identified with the principal public works of South America, and therefore deserves more than a mere passing notice.

If you ask any intelligent citizen of Chile, Peru, Bolivia, the Argentine Republic or any of the South American republics who William Wheelwright was, he will tell you that more has been done by this enterprising American for the cause of civilization and progress in those countries than by any other man, living or dead. He built the first railroad on the South American Continent more than twenty years ago, the first telegraph, the first iron pier, the first gas and water works in any of these countries. But more than all this he was the father and founder of the most successful and largest steamship line in the world—viz., the Pacific Steam Navigation Company, running from England to Lisbon, thence to Brazil, the River Plate, through the Straits of Magellan to Valparaiso, Callao and the Isthmus of Panama.

This company has been in existence over thirty years, and was inaugurated by Mr. Wheelwright, who had so much faith in the enterprise that he embarked in it all his private fortune, which, though not large, was for those days considerable, and had been acquired by hard labor and industry as a merchant, engaged in the coasting trade on the Pacific coast in a small brig, patriotically styled "The Fourth of July." Convinced by the experience thus acquired that steam navigation on that coast was practicable and necessary, he came to his native land to launch his enterprise, but found no capitalists who would invest in so chimerical a project, as it was then considered. He visited England and for four years labored unceasingly to establish a company, meeting with every conceivable impediment, but was fortunate enough to interest the late Lord Abinger and other prominent men, and he himself travelled through England, Scotland and Wales, and induced shopkeepers and others to buy even one single share to further the enterprise. He succeeded in having two small steamers built from the funds so raised, and to-day the company owns fifty steamers which, as a fleet, surpass anything afloat. The last great labor of Mr. Wheelwright's life has been in the construction of the Great Central Argentine Railway, running from navigation on the Atlantic to the city of Cordova, in the heart of the South American Continent. This is the first section of a railway designed to cross the Cordilleras and unite the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. The magnitude of the works in which Mr. Wheelwright has been engaged the past fifty years can only be properly measured by those who are familiar with the Spanish republics as they were at that time—convulsed with chronic revolution, with unstable governments no ambition to progress; inert, lethargic, torpid; even Englishmen, having no faith and little knowledge of those countries, laughing at and ridiculing his projects as the dreams of an insane man: and yet he conquered all difficulties, and has triumphed in every great enterprise he has undertaken. He spent thousands of dollars more than twenty years ago in surveying the route across the Andes which is now being followed in the Transcontinental Railroad referred to, and has at last become a victim to his own untiring energy and devotion to a work he loved with all the enthusiasm a man could feel. But his private virtues are perhaps the best monument he has left behind him, and though known to the few, in comparison with his public acts, yet his memory will be fondly cherished by many who have benefitted by his munificent charities, which were distributed not only among his own kindred, but his liberality also found its way to the cause of science and religion in various parts of the world, including donations to benevolent institutions and the printing of the Bible in the Turkish tongue which he was chiefly instrumental in procuring. The sad tidings of his death will be sincerely mourned by men of every station and degree throughout Spanish America, and it is fitting that as his name and fame are especially identified with South American countries, his own countrymen should know that it is to an American citizen that South America is chiefly indebted for her resurrection from the chaos and lethargy which characterized it fifty years since. Mr. Wheelwright was born in Newburyport, Mass., in 1798, and, consequently, died at the age of seventy-five. Ripe in years, unceasing in the exercise of his indomitable energy, he has crowded into his life as much of vicissitude, persevering toil and achievement as almost any other man of this country, and has made the name of America honored wherever he has represented her.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

Hurray! Cunapiru! redivivus! We had a visit yesterday from a Hamburg merchant who is in the Plate on important business. He has just returned from a visit to the Cunapiru gold mines, and unhesitatingly declares that the Plate has in these mines a source of wealth far greater than Ballarat has proved to Australia, in which country he passed twenty years of his life in practical gold-mining. The opinion this gentleman has formed of the producing powers of Cunapiru quartz is dazzling. We give his own words:—"Ten thousand ounces per fortnight can easily be obtained from these mines. No steam power is required for work stamps, as the water power is superb. Any man with a pickaxe, shovel and small hammer can earn £20 a week as easily as he can walk a mile; it would be imprudent to hire a peon, who would start on his own hook the moment he discovered what can be done; beef is cheap, and the only thing necessary for the adventurer to take would be a barrel of flour. The yield from some of the quartz at Cunapiru is two lbs. per ton. In Australia two ounces per ton is considered splendid, and quarter of an ounce a right good return. You are not worth your salt here, or these splendid mines would be producing you ten thousand ounces every fortnight." This is pretty high testimony in favor of Cunapiru. This Hamburg gentleman, it is needless to say, has no personal or any other interest in the mines, which he visited from curiosity as an old miner. We should be glad if Bauda Oriental gave the world a rouse in the gold mining way. This datterling opinion from a perfect stranger is not unlikely to attract renewed attention to Cunapiru. We may add that our visitor kindly promised us a paper on the subject of these mines.

THE BRAZILIAN CABLE.

A general system of telegraphic communication throughout Brazil is being rapidly and successfully completed. On the 14th of June last the Hooper steamship left the Millwall Docks with the length of cable to be laid between Pernambuco and Para. She arrived at Pernambuco on the 30th of July, and was joined by the Great Northern at Para on the 30th of September with shore ends. After having completed the section, she returned to England, arriving at Millwall on the 4th Nov., having made a very successful voyage. The Hooper is a new vessel, and was especially built for laying the cables of the Hooper Telegraph Company. A description of the vessel, as well as of the Hooper system of telegraph cable, appeared in the Times upon the occasion of the vessel leaving upon the expedition which has been brought to so satisfactory an issue. It need therefore only here be mentioned that the vessel is of 5000 tons burthen, has three large cable-tanks built into and with her hull, and is perfectly equipped with paying-out and picking-up machinery, and other necessary apparatus. The peculiarity of the Hooper cable is that the core is of indiarubber, which practice has shown to be a very reliable and enduring covering for the conductor. After the completion of the section referred to, the Great Northern remained at Para for 30 days, when, the tests showing the cable to be in excellent condition, she returned with the electrical staff of the Hooper Co., arriving at Millwall on Monday last. The Hooper is now loading the second section—1,500 miles in length—of the Brazilian Cable in the Millwall docks, and she is to start on her important mission next Tuesday. Her work is to lay a cable from Pernambuco to Bahia to Rio de Janeiro. At the latter point the Hooper cable will be coupled up with the Plate-Brazilian Company's line, which company will lay a cable from Rio to Maldonado. From the latter point the Montevideo Company will lay a cable to Montevideo, which will be united to the Buenos Ayres cable which already exists in connection with the Trans-Andine land line company connecting with Valparaiso. The Brazilian Submarine Company are laying a line from Lisbon to Madeira, and from the latter place to St. Vincent, and thence to Pernambuco. Thus, in a short time, the entire coast of Brazil and of the Argentine Confederation will be brought into direct telegraphic communication with England. In order to commemorate the successful laying of the first section of cable and to wish good speed to the second, there was a general gathering of officers and gentlemen interested in the question of electric telegraphy on board the Hooper yesterday. Besides the gentlemen officially connected with the Hooper Company, who are manufacturing and laying the cables, and of the Western and Brazilian Telegraph Company for whom they are being made and laid, there were present General Treuenbeler, Colonel Millward, Colonel Campbell, Colonel Stothard, Colonel Galwey, Captain Luard, Lieutenant Watson, Professor Abel, Sir F. Chapman, Mr. Danvers, of the India Office; Mr. Erichsen, representing the Great Northern Telegraph Company, and others. A general inspection of the ship by the visitors and an examination of the various sections of Hooper cable already laid was followed by a luncheon on board, at which Mr. Hooper, the managing director of the Hooper Company, presided, being supported by Mr. J. Hough, the Chairman of the Western and Brazilian Company; Sir W. Thompson, Mr. Cromwell Varley, &c. Complimentary speeches were made, in which testimony was borne to the care exercised and the anxiety shown by the staff of the Hooper Company in laying the first section. The staff includes, Captain Edington, in command of the Hooper, Mr. France, Mr. Warren, and Captain Chevalier, the three officers in charge of the expedition. These gentlemen will occupy similar positions with regard to the second section, the successful laying of which is anticipated with much interest and with equal confidence—interest, as forming a link in a very important scheme of telegraphy, and confidence inasmuch as both staff and vessel have been fairly tried and have not been found wanting.—Times.

We are informed by a friend of ours that the other night when two of his most intimate "amigos" were passing Calle Libertad corner of Cordoba they were stopped by a motley crowd who shouted out "La rebajada" and then surrounded and threw stones at them; but the young gentlemen who are admirers and constant readers of ours had the "STANDARD" luck to escape unhurt. It is a pity that the "blues" under command of our great and good countryman Mr. O'Gorman can't or won't stop this oft repeated nuisance, committed by the rising generation of this great Metropolis.

We are glad to hear that Mr. William Gibbins, son of Dr. Gibbins of Ranchos, is very much better. It was only a day or two ago we heard the particulars of his case, which are these.—Desirous of finishing shearing some sheep that remained unshorn at siesta time, so that a new flock might be commenced after "siesta," he induced his shearers to continue working, and one of the catchers complaining of the excessive heat, Mr. Gibbins took his place, when he was struck down by a sunstroke. The capataz, a native, believing that the best thing he could do to carry him to his father's house at Ranchos, placed his master on a horse, and after five hours travelling in a broiling sun over 13 leagues of unsheltered country, he arrived at his destination; this exposure brought on brain fever; nevertheless he is now entirely out of danger.

The Chinese Gong auction by Messrs Balbin and Ploves on Thursday and Friday is already bearing fruit. The Public must have taken our advice to buy the Gongs freely, and are already practising. Yesterday a Teutonic subscriber rushed into the Court at a very early hour and asked breathlessly for a bulletin. We told him there was nothing new, no news, neither "bola" nor "bolotin." "Der Teufel," said he, "I heard the Gong." "Not the STANDARD Gong, Mein Herr," said we; but our subscriber persisted that he had heard a gong ringing like mad, and, of course, rushed to the Court for the first news. We at once surmised that the purchasers of Messrs B & P's gong were at work. We wish we had n't recommended the public to buy them so freely.

We hear from Central America that the revolution in Panama is down in the city, but up in the country round it. During the scrimmage a four-pounder was stationed opposite the office of our esteemed contemporary The Star and Herald. It burst one fine morning into 50 million of pieces, but, thanks to the lucky Star of the editors, they and all their employees escaped a premature visit to that undiscovered country from whose bonnie no editor, or anyone else, returns. We congratulate Mr. Boyd and his men on their narrow escape.

Here's another French riddle. It is awfully easy; and we hope to have a lot of answers for Tuesday's issue.

for the sake of his wife and children, and feels that the verdict will be against him. His eldest son, 5 years old, keeps him company, sleeping in a tiny bed in the Marshall's apartment; the whole house is littered from top to bottom with toy cannon, chasse-pistols, drums, sabres, &c.

The population of the city being now a moot point, we refer to the matter in a leading article which is likely to upset any extravagant theories as to the 'natural' increase of our population.

We are happy to hear that the new Irish Convoy of Mercy at Mercedes in this province is finished, and the good Sisters have taken up their abode and commenced their mission, which promises so many moral blessings to the town and district.

The ball and supper to have come off at the Club at Lomas last night was postponed; we believe on account of the atrocious sea of Mud in which the unfortunate place is immersed.

Daws again. This indefatigable caterer for the Public in the way of mental pabulum has ordered from his correspondents at home an extra number of all the most popular and fashionable English and American periodicals, and requests early application on the part of his patrons.

The bathman next door seems muzzled at last. The fine must have had an effect on his stubborn nerves, for the tin chimney gave but languid signs of life yesterday.

We erred on Friday in stating that Mr. Fabre's new jewellery establishment in Calle Piedra is a branch of the well known house in Calle Florida. It is not so.
