The Wisp that leads them many a weary dance round town and its vicinity...

The Rev. Mr. Law and his wife left in the Illuvani. It is a pity, as in time they would have got to like the place...

One of the really 'happy thoughts' which occur to an individual perhaps once or twice in a century...

Not the least enjoyable was the musical part, in which several distinguished amateurs took part...

SCOTLAND.

A most wise B A hath sp k n, Ho di l once in Scotland dwell, Knoeth well its lack of learning,

Adam Smith and Dugald Stewart, Are to him but empty sounds,

Who'er heard of Scott of Eldon? Hurray Eddins, who was he?

How can'er a low d' center, Brought up in St. Andrew's gloom,

For all wisdom is collected By the 'twiss and the Cam,

Where are fledgins ever training All amidst in time to damn.

Fiery Johnstone take thou pity On this offspring of my pen,

As for thee, thou worthy Newman, What for Church and Queen do rat,

Thou art not like St. Andrew Special, Spare my doggerel, aye thy cant.

I am but an Ayrshire ploughman, Head of lead, and hand like horn,

As a country without learning, With its manners under ban,

Where its words without a meaning, Is that grand one, gentleman.
