any equal, for staying powers to those of the Pampas, and the introduction of mares from this quarter for breeding would give us an improved race in this respect, and it is just in this particular that horses of modern times are deficient. It is proposed to purchase, charter, or build if necessary, two or more steamers specially adapted for this ocean cattle trade, in which will be introduced all modern improvements in the means of shipping and landing cattle, as also a thorough system of ventilation in the holds and tween decks, so as to introduce the cattle into this country in a healthy and vigorous state.

In the meantime, the directors will commence operations by the charter of one or more suitable vessels. It is not, however, intended to limit the operations of the company to the trade with the River Plate. The unlimited supply of horses and cattle there, and the nominal prices at which they can be put on board, naturally point to this as the first sphere of the company's operations, but the directors will not be bound to any particular port in the Americas, but will avail themselves of any advantageous markets, and will import corn or other grain and produce from America or elsewhere, so as to utilize every available part of the vessels. We have carefully examined the estimates of profit which the company has made, and though they promise unusual returns, we consider them exceedingly fair and reasonable, and in the name. of the underfed thousands of Great Britain, we wish this company greater success than its promoters have ventured to anticipate.
