Alea jacta est.

"The die is cast." We are in for a war as sure as fate. Buenos Ayres is not afraid of Urquiza and Saa, and the National Government takes little pains to conciliate this Province, as deem her either incurable or only to be corrected by a sanguinary castigation. For some days back affairs have been ripening to a crisis, and both parties were preparing for, or at least antici-pating a rupture. The Saltena steamboats did not arrive when due, and our government, has refused to pay the million and a half stipulated, At the same time, Mitre and his ministers issued a manifesto that passes for a polite declaration of war. The natural effect has been a rise in ounces, discontent among foreign merchants, fiery feuilletons in the daily press, and visions of Pozitos and San Juan to the nervous. But most people hope that the tournament may come off at Cordova, and be soon over. If so the cards turn, we shall be spared a siege, and the pampero over, all again will be "merry as a marriage bell." Like prize fighters, both will shake-hands; and some will be led to think that as a storm clears the atmosphere and connubial squabbles enhance matrimony, we shall be all the better, after we have had the tussle, and understood each other. The Nile overflows its banks once a year, and public spirit must periodically find vent for noxious political gases. But we should prefer to irrigate the Argentine provinces with anything else than blood, and let foul vapors escape otherwise than keeping them pent up till they grow pestilential.

We could make a bet on the issue, and we have strong sympathies; they are neither for Parana nor Buenos Ayres, but for our foreign brethern who foresee an eruption, as fatal as that of Mendoza, that paralyzes commerce, and makes this fine country anything[but an El Dorado for those who come here to seek a peaceful livelihood and enrich Buenos Ayres while making their own fortunes. If the enemy of mankind wished to ruin South America he would try to banish foreigners, and as we do not mean to study military science we cannot look on but with pain at a contest equally prejudicial to combatants and spectators. Neither party will ascribe to itself the cause of the war, yet either must be in fault, perhaps both. It looks like two schoolboys falling out about which of them is the bigger, when they might be more usefully employed. We trust that let who will lick his adversary, he will not strike the man that's down, for we do not feel quite convinced of fair-play in the San Juan business, notwithstanding the absolution pronounced by Congress and we deprecate alike such a repetition or its retaliation.

Monarchy versus Republic.

Practice is better than theory any day. A man may not comprehend the theory of digestion, but we all understand our dinner. Not that theory is unimportant when united to practise; but some things have paradoxically a magnificent ground-work of principles that are attended with a ruinous application. The English constitution is the noblest bulwark of human liberty. the wisest and most beneficial policy, the guardian-spirit of advancement and felicity; yet in Ireland it has been attended with misery and emigration. Now the idea of a Republic is, in the abstract, perfection itself, but in its working most imperfect. Nothing can following diplomatic changes: D. Jose he more just, withing spere reasonable Amaral to be Minister in Perú; Don dhan that the people shapid elect the Jose Lisboa to be removed from Lima right man in the right place; for, since to the Ministry of Montevideo.

vocate of monarchy runs the risk of blindly submitting to a royal fool, who possesses the blood, without the brains, of his glorious predecessors. And the Scripture says that "God in his anger gave the Jews a King." But the Jews too were forbad to eat bacon. So that this point is lost, unless we eschew royalty and salt pork together. However, it may be said, we can eat bacon and leave out crowned heads. Hic labor hoc opis est. The voice of the people has been ever fickle, and the majority of votes does not represent a majority of intellect, for the masses do not always know what is good for them. Adam and Eve were Republicans, and the idea is good for a golden age or Utopian expedition to colonise the Moon. But we live in a matter-of-fact period when dreaming gives place to money-making and we judge of the future by the past. Referring to history we find indeed that the Republics of Greece and Rome lasted for centuries, and in later times Venice and Genoa rose to unequalled opulence. But, Athens is now fallen, the Capitol in ruins, and Venice and Genoa fifth-rate cities while there still exists in the Far East a monarchy that witnessed the birth and demise of all the Republics that ever sprang into being. The Empire of China goes back almost to Nosh, proving at least that Monarchy is more durable than a Republic-

Chinese institutions, and if a Republic he not so durable, sive us a medium. Let us avoid both Scylla and Charybdis, Why not an elective monarchy? This involves the same difficulty as a Republic, since it is alike whether you eall the Ruler, King or President, when the succession is disputed. Two nations Ireland and Poland (see Macauley) fixed on the juste milieu; they said we will secure the succession in one family, but elect the fittest member of royal blood, for king. Alas! Ireland and Poland were the scenes of constant civil war, for the people could not agree on the right man, and both countries became a prey to their monarchical neighbors. Therefore history is not in favor of Republics.

But, it may be objected, we abhor

If we look to the present, we find Europe (the centre of civilization) universally adopts Monarchy, there being but one pigmey exception, in a list of 20 states. France tried a Republic three times, and three times preferred Monarchy. In America we have had several Republics, but they have ever been celebrated for civil wars, excepting the Model Republic of the United States, now severed, and threatened with all but annihilation. There are two countries in South America more praccable than the rest, one, the Monarchy of Brazil, the other, the colony of Guiana. It is therefore with great reason that Europeans have little sympathy for a Republican government We accept the constitution under which we live, and do not ask the lords of the soil to change it, but we entertain a strong preference for European monarchical institutions, not from any native prejudice, but that the history of the past and our experience of the present are calculated to nonsuit Republic and give a verdict for Monarchy

Dates from Asnucion are up to the 1st. President Lopez was prosecuting the railway with praise-worthy activity. By executing some assassins, he has shewn himself no advocate of the abolition of capital punishment or misplaced p!-ilanthropy. Cold weather had set in. Imports for May 95,0008, exports 198,000.

Chile.

The failures which occurred in March have proved gigantic and threaten to make the country bankrupt. In Santiago over twenty commercial houses have closed with liabilities exceeding 200,000 dollars each. The President's enemies ascribe the ruin to his bad administration, and say that unpleasant disclosures will be made, implicating the government.

Banda Oriental.

President Berro has, (Cromwell-like) turned out all the Ministry; the exact motive is not known, but wise-acres in town assert it is to give room for partisans of Urquiza. With respect to Argentine family brails he promises to maintain an armed neutrality, but it is asser:ed he entertains a natural leaning to the Federal cause, and Diogenes Urquiza is buying arms in Moutevideo. We read in the "Prensa Oriental" that Colonel Baigorria had brought a quantity of money and arms to Cordova, that Cordova, Santiago, Jujuy, Salta and Tucuman were resolved to side with Buenos Ayres and had fixed on General Rojo, governor of Salta (soldier of the Independence), to head their united forces. On the 2d and 3d inst. more than 600 emigrants, principally from French ports, had arrived at Montevideo. The military governors recently appointed are Lamas in Rio Negro, foronel in Cerro Largo, and Olid in Maldonado.

LATEST NEWS.

A letter from Cordoba, quoted by the "Nacional" of Monday gives these remarkable items

"The Government of Cordova has just learned that some of Saa's forces have penetrated as far as Rio Cuarto to surprise Igarzabal. We are again in arms to meet them. Derqui has despatched a courier to San Louis order. ing Saa to invade Cordove. This is the fulfilment of the Presidents expedition. Molinas is national commissioner in Rosario, where confusion holds her saturnalia; and two batteries are constructing on the river-bank. The "Pam pero" is arming at Paranà."

The upper provinces are in a ferment. In Santiago the national guard had been called out by Taboada, who, in his zeal to resist invasion from Paraná or Entre Rios had expelled the comandante Urquiza from fort Urquiza, thus endorsing the cause of Buenos Ayres. In Tucuman General Rojo had a conference wi:b Zavalia, as the cradle of independence has shewn discontent at the approval of Saa's butchery. Other provinces are but waiting the signal which will divide the late Argentine Republic into two nameless confederacies, almost coual in strength, and resolved to shed each others blood. Our river steam-transit is almost stopped since the Salto Company's boats do not come to Buenos Ayres, and Governor Mitre makes sure of the few remaining which, report says, have been purchased at a high figure. The Chamber of Deputies has voted the emission of 25 millions currency a 6 p3, but this is understood to cover the deficit, as a much larger sum would be requisite for declaration. declaration. In view of the threat this year, unless he comes "the overland made to the province of Cordova route," . In view of the declaration

And whilst protesting before them as on its part is does, it declares that it is disposed to sustain with entire decision the rights and guaranties which the National Constitution has secured to all, to that end co-operating with those other sister provinces who sustain them, so that they may become a reality, and will lend to them for the purpose of obtaining such great benefits, all the aid which that of Buenos Ayres as a confederated Province may and can afford. BARTOLOME MITRE.

Declaration of War.

(From the Tribuna.)

The Paraná government has addressed Buenos Ayres, with a bill demanding authority to mobilise the forces of the whole Republic, in order to compel Buenos Ayres to fulfil the treaties of November and June. The Senate had already sanctioned the projected decree on the departure of the "Salto de Guayrá," and a speedy ratification in the Chamber of Deputies was certain.

This, as will be seen, is equivalent to a Declaration of War, and Buenos Ayres must at once equip all the military elements she possesses.

Argentine forces & munitions.

San Luis has received, through Urquiza's agency, over 3,000 carbines. pesides the arms taken from San Juan, and a supply of several thousand lances hourly expected. Corrientes possesses several rifled annons, thousands of firelocks, &c.

Santa Fé can command ten or twelve thousand muskets, thirteen or fourteen pieces of artillery, many thousand lances and other warlike implements.

Entre Rios has at least 50 pieces of cannon, 20,000 guns, as many carbines and lances; besides a standing army of 4,000 men ready (says the Captain-General) to make the Constitution respected

But Cordova, which is hourly exosed to Saa's onslaught, is without arms, the National government not having returned the munitions lent by that province in the last campaign against Buenos Ayres.

The Globe announces the probabilities of a crisis. A conference of European representatives held a sitting at St. Petersburgh, from which Prince Gortschakoff demanded that a permament commission should be constituted at Constantinople for the protection of the interests of the Christian population of Turkey and the general supervision of the administration of the territory of the Sultan. The Globe says this news is highly probable, and adds that any such demand on the part of Russia would be met on the part of England with as decided a negative

as the conventionalities of diplomacy

would permit. A friend, says the Ami de la Religion, who has access to the highest sources of Catholic intelligence in the French capital, and who regards with the keenest interest every political movement in the interest of his Holiness on this side of the channel. writes to an Irish gentleman in London at the same date :- A most curious piece of information transpired here yesterday. The whole Irish brigade is said to be resolved on opposing the Cabinet on their Papal policy. Lord Palmerston has even sent word to the Sardinian government to select Florence for their capital for the time being. This piece of news is given out as certain, as pesitive, even at headquaters." How far is it truth, or no? For God's sake, let us know. The matter is too important to be left in the dark.

General Collineau of the French army in China was buried with military honours on the 18th, and a funeral oration pronounced over his grave by Colonel O Malley, of the 102nd regiment, who now succeeds to the command. All the officers of the English army attended the funeral, as also did her Majesty's minister, the Hon. F. Bruce, C. B., and the members of the Legation.

Two Cardinals, five Archbishops, and fourteen Bishops of Naples, have addressed a protest to the King of Sardinia's Lieutenant-General, the Prince Eugene, of Savoy Carignon, against the abolition of the concordat, and the oppression of the church, and the robbery of the religious orders. This document is signed by the Cardinal Archbishop of Capua, the Archbishops of Rossano, of Trani, of Amalfi, of Acerenza, and of Salerno. Also by the Bishops of Puzzuoli, of Sessa, of Anglona, of Oria, of Andria, of Telesa, of Ruvo, of Ischia, of Calvi, of St. Agatha, of Nola, of Caserta, of Capacciovallo, and of Aversa. ## ENGLAND AND ROME.

The Ami de la Religion says:son to believe exact, the British govern ment has addressed to Turin a despatch strongly counselling the Sardinian go. vernment to abstain for the present from every attempt at annexation in reference to Rome. This unexpected modification of the English policy is due, as we are assured, to the attitude of the Irish members of parliament, who have hitherto lent their aid to the Cabinet and who threatened to abandon it, if her Majesty's ministers associated themselves to the designs of Piedmont against the capital of the Catholie world "

General Paninkin, the Military Governor of Warsaw has published a proclamation sternly prohibiting the ing of political emblems, and limiting the followers of a funeral to the family of deceased. The city of Warsa's is ordered to contribute daily the sum of 2.000 roubles for the maintenance of the troops and pay 1,500 roubles to defray the expense of burying those who fell in the recent disturbance.

The report of the Syrian Commission is so voluminous that it will be sent back for revision and abbrevia ion. All the commissioners, wi h the exception of he representative of France, recommend the appointment of three caimacans for he Lebannon, viz., a Druse, a Maroni e, and a Greek. The French Commissioners insist on the appoin ment of one caimacan, to be a Maronite. The commissioner are to remain at Beyrout.

It is reported that a note has been addressed by Sardinia to the French government, praying the latter to use its influence to induce the King of Naples to quit Rome immediately.

The French Senate has decided upon making the memorial of the Syrian population an order of the day, and as such it will be discussed accordingly. The Paris correspondent of the Times anticipates that every oposition will be offered to the withdrawing of the French troops on the 5th of June next, whether the country is tranquil or not.

THE DURE D'AUMALE'S PAMPHLET.

Paris, Saturday Evening .- An extraordinary event has happened this eve-At Dumineray's, 78. Rue Richelieu, there has appeared, without any previous announcement, a pamphlet entitled "A Letter on the History of France," written by the Duke d'Aumale, ond signed by him ostensibly, "Henri d'Orleans." The pamphlet purports to be a reply to Prince Napoleon's late attack in the senate upon the Orleans family. It is in fact a flerce philippic against the empire and the Emperor. That it should have been allowed to appear in France is one of the most extraordinary events of modern history. I have heard it asserted twenty times over that the publisher will be prosecuted. The whole edition was bought up at a rush, and copies are selling about the streets at five francs, instead of the cost price of one franc. I subjoin a few salient extracts :-

Whatever may be said, there is no such thing as a parvenu now, either at the Palais Royal or the Tuileries. Sovereign houses-and you, I suppose, claim to belong to one -know but one parvenu - their founder. That title. for it is one, history will give to the obscure sub-lieutenant of artillery who, fitteen years after he left the school of Brienne, placed on his head the crown of a Charlemagne. But the man who set up his hereditary right at Strasbourg and Boulogne, who passed wi-thout transition from exile to power, and who calls himself Napoleon III, is no parvenu. You talk now in very magnificent terms about the coup d'Etat of Dec. 2. But you were not found on that day among the group of faithful followers who assembled at the Elysee to commit themselves courageously to the fortunes of the new dictator. Neither were you with the representatives of the nation who protested at the mayoralty of the tenth arrondissement and elsewhere against the confiscation of the laws of their country. Where were you then? To this hour nobody would know, were it not that among the resolute men who debated in that trying hour whether it was not their duty to fight behind the barricades, there are some who remember having seen you appear for a moment, but only to disappear when, fortune having pronounced, the police came to arrest them in the name of the conqueror. Believe me, don't boast so much of your tardy zeal, and, in your retrospective enthusiam, beware, out of regard for your Italian friends of instituting between the lucky conspiracy in question and Garibaldi's enterprise a comparison which probably would not be to the taste of the patriot of Caprera. One thing astonished me, and that was that the Duke of Orleans, my grandfather, found no favour in your sight, for your like him, sat on the left side of a republican assembly. There indeed the resemblance stops, for he expiated his fault. He left the National Convention to mount the scaffold, while you descended from the benches of the Mountain to enter the splendid mansion in which the Duke of Orleans was born. He thus alludes to the battle of Cas-telfidardo:

And it is noon the victims of this fa tal encounter that the reproach is cast of having fought under a general "se parated from the government of his It requires a marvellous country." sang froid to hold such language, and to affect ignorance of the fact that Lamoriciére, doubly guarded by his character of representative and by a stainless life, was one fine night torn from his bed; that racked with pain, the result not of a life of pleasure passed in great cities, but of eighteen years of his limbs cramped in one of the parrow cells set spart for convicts on their

broken; that he was cast into prison and from prison led into exile; and that by putting his return to his country at the price of his honour, he was kept in a foreign land till his son died far away from him. This is what is called, in these times of confusion and falsehood. "a general separated from his coun-You treat affairs with as much justice as you do persons, and in dwelling upon the outward appearances of parliamentary government you have had good reason for rejecting its reali-The first necessity of a government which stands in the presence of a free assembly is to have an avowed policy, and to defeud it against the opinion of one party by leaning loyally upon the opinion of another; but your policy has hitherto consisted in deceiving everybody, and refusing promises and hopes to nobody. You have two faces, and you daily show them both You say to the catholics. "Do you not know me any longer? I am the government which sent the expedition to Rome which loaded the Pope with its sympathies before, during, and after the war, which signed the peace at Villa-franca, which reinforced the garrison at Rome, while it recalled its ambassadors from Turin, which alone kept it's fleet before Gaeta." You say to the extreme supporters of the Italian revolution "Why do you suspect me, and object to the presence of my troops at Rome? Have you forgotten that I originally consented unwillingly to the Roman expedition; that I wrote the famous letter to Edgar Ney; that the peace of Villafranca has been a dead letter in my hands; that I wished him who set out for Casteifidardo bon royage; that in the end I recalled my fleet from Gaeta, and that there is now neither Roman States nor a kingdo of Naples." Finally, turning to France, and 'routing out both parties caressed and deceived by turns, you extract from the very confusion of your acts a last vanity; you erect this contradictory conflict into a system, and you say. "See what complaints are brought against me; am I not moderation in 1 erson? Have I not contrived a prudent equilibrium? Am I not the just milicu resuscitated? Casimir Perrier would be satisfied." And it is to play a part in this comedy in the face of Europe that you have given freedom of speech to the deputies of France. You had better have left, what you have done for ten years, the fragments of the tribune fallen beneath the hands of your soldiers for a moment hesitating. When the Bonapartes threaten to shoot people their word may be relied upon. And note this, prince, that of all the promises made by you and yours, that is the only one upon which I would rely. For it must be admitted that the present French government, all fortunate as it has been in many respects, is less successful as regards the fulfiment of promises than in other things. One man only swore to the republican constitution, and that man, was the author of December 2. The same man said. "The empire is peace;" and we have had the wars of the Crimea and Lombardy. In 1859 Italy was to be free to the Adriatic; Austria is still at Verona and Venice. The temporal power of the Pope was to be respected; we know what has become of that, and the grand dukes are still waiting for their restoration, which was announced by the peace of Villafranca. After your philippic against the elder and younger Bourbons you indulge in a panegyric on the Napoleons. The Napoleons! Paterson trial this use of the plural number is somewhat surprising.... Dont you fear to diminish the proportions of your demigod-the Emperor by attempting to involve all the family in his glory. We know wha

contemporaries thought of the Empe-1 ror's brothers. Have you forgotter that it was found necessary to take away the crown of Holland from Louis to remove Joseph from the command of the army of Spain, and Jerome from that of the corps which ie was leading to Russia? Have you not a cousin named Louis Lucien, if I mistake not who in the very crisis of the continen tal blockade was born in England whi ther his father was a refugee? and Murat in 1814. But here I stop. Fo he at least led our squadrons to a hundred times over; and, moreover we have that respect for the conquered and the dead, which you so imperiously demand for the fortunate and the living You, prince, dream of great changes in Europe. I form a wish for France, and that is that my country may be relieved from a state which renders her liable to be launched into great enter prises which she does not sanction be fore and, a state which leaves her asleep under the regime of protection to awake up in the arms of free trade; to pass without transition from peace to war, from prosperity to ruin; that she may, in short, be delivered from the regime of "good-pleasure," under what ever form it may be disguised. When ever the nation, whenever every French man shall enjoy the same securi y, the same liberty, the same inviolability then we shall have a right to inscribe at the head of our constitution the principles of '89, freed from the utopias of '91, the crimes of '93, and the hypocrisy of another epoch. I stop-it is useless to add a pang to the sorrows of exile, to dwell too long on the woes and dangers of one's country. But you who treat with the arrogance of good fortune and the injustice inseparable from undererved success, those ancient races which reigned so long over a generous nation, and which, successively rejected and restored by the tide of revolutions, were fully associated with her liberty as they were formerly with her grandeur you, who enjoy the aceu mulated fruits of so great labour, of so much wisdom, and so much glory, and who every day imperil the destiny of the nation, be well assured that if you do not quit the bad paths in which you are so deeplyjen angled, it is not to the Bourbons, it is not to the Orleanist, who were never obnoxious to such a reproach, but it is to you and yours that the words of your uncle to the Directory will be applied-"What have you done with France.?"

THE DUKE D'AUMALE'S PAMPHLET. The foot note to this pamphlet does not point to any permission on the part of the government, but the difficulty of getting the printer and publisher. The government was taken entirely by surprise. The pamphlet was printed at St. Germans. The Paris publisher sold off nearly the whole edition before the authorities got any wind of the matter. Report says when the police came to the shop only 10 copies were found. The premium on a single copy has risen to thirty francs. Not one of the news-papers ventures to make the slightest allusion to the existence of the pamphlet. A prosecution will be very embarrassing, as the sting lies in the undeniable truth of the dry and very unpleasant facts stated.

CHAPTER II.—NORMANDY.

The North of France, like the south of England is celebrated for its cider. and the appearance of the country is similar. A slightly undulating surface, well wooded and watered, with yillages interspersed and now and then an old baronial seat like the relics of Norman edifices still seen in the British Isles.

The Norman peasantry are simple rural labors. On entering Arques, the men and women respectfully saluted the Abbé Moriarty, and a few accompanied us to his vicarege. This is a pretty cottage-residence, containing only a select library and flower garden. The church stands close by, and is remarkable for some excellent carved oak-pannellings and a pulpit tastefully designed. In the middle ages Arques was a place of importance: at present it is an obscure hamlet. The last relic of its greatness, is the magnificent chateau now in ruins, and although the steep ascent is rather fatiguing on a summer's day, and swarms of mendicants guard the access, I felt more than recompensed by the unrivalled perspective to be had from the donjon summit. Passing the port-cullis, you enter a massive gateway, and a pensioner accompanies you through fallen arches, and roofless chambers, till you reach a spiral stair that leads to the battlements of the donjon. Leaning through the moss-grown embrasures, the eye embraces a delightful panora ma: in front is the wide plain, bounded by a forest, on which the rival armies of Huguenots and Leaguers had one of their deadliest encounters. Here the valiant Due de Mayenne suffered a complete overthrow; for, though Henry of Navarre was all but worsted in his brilliant onset, the artillery of the castle threw the Catholic forces into confusion, and decided the fortune of the day, A graceful obelisk rises on the spot, to commemorate this victory of Henri Quatre; it was erected by the Duchess D'Angouleme, who was wont to sit for hours daily, musing on the picturesque and historic association of the scene. The bastions of the castle include a spacious area, and command every approach; a subterranean passage leads in the direction of Dieppe, but in 1789 the French republicans stripped this venerable edifice of its ancient glories and materials, and it has long since lost its value as a military stronghold. During the two days that I was the usual French blouse, and sing at their guest of the Abbé, I visited some French families of the neighborhood and was received with the characteristic courtesy of the nation. On leaving for Paris I promised again to see my Dieppe friends, but fortune willed otherwise. The railway to the capital intersects a diversified rural picture, and several of the guards along the line are women. I found my fellowpassengers of a conversative turn, and learned much of French manners as the train whirled on to Rouen. Here I stop to review the quaint old capital of Normandy, once the centre of English possessions in France. The year erable cathedral of St. Ouen is in the prevalent Gothic build, with porches decorate! with statues and relievos that have suffered terribly during the French revolution. The contour of the structure is still august, but all the saints have been turned into John Baptists having lost their heads. Such was the the republican rage against even monuments of religious and artistic estimation. A more than usual awe seizes you, as you survey the arched aisles and see the light reflected through stained glass oriels. There are several chapels at the sides, but before the high altar is an inscription particularly in teresting to Englishmen. "Here be neath is enshrined the heart of Ri chard Cœur de Lion" The hero of Palestine, the terror of Moslems be queathed his lion-heart to this his na tive city. Not far off is seen the monu-ment of the (in) famous cortezance Diana of Poitiers, with the sarcastic legend Indivisa tibi quondam et fldissimo conjux ut fui in thalamo sic et in tumulo "My dear husband, united to thee in the grave as I was alive. For a never lived with him, neither is buried with him. and industrious: they dress in the

THE TEMPORAL POWER OF THE POP

In the House of Lords, "In

The Earl of Ellenborough asked her Majesty's government were takin any steps towards reconciling the sp ritual authority of the Pope with temporal power of the King of Ital There was but one city worthy of bein the capital of Italy. Unfortunated that city was occupied by the French Unfortunatel who thus prevented the realising Italian unity and the complete estal lishment of constitutional governmen The French troops went to Home support the Pope, but they remaine there to demoralise and degrade in aut ority. No one recognised more fully than the Emperor binself the false position which they held, and h trusted the French government would see the necessity of withdrawing them as soon as due provision could be mad for the exercise of the Pope's spiritus authority. Adverting to Austria, he defended generally the conduct of the power, but her possession of Italy had been a constant drain upon her resour ces. While Italy required Venetia sh openly nor effectually interfere in matter so vitally affecting the Roman Cstholic population. At the same time the government looked with much so tisfaction on the present state of things While the Erench force occupied Rome the temporal authority of the Pope wa nominally respected, but it would cease from one end of his dominions to and ther the moment that force was with drawn. He should be glad to se France withdraw her troops, but England could scarcely interfere in nego ciations affecting the spiritual domi nion of the Pope. This, however, could only be done with the coi sent of France. He belleved short French occupation of Rome was no unpopular, and that, if England inte fered to put an end to it she would b charged with selfish motives.
