THE SUNDAY WATER WORKS.

There is nothing of more absolute necessity in Buenos Ayres than good, cheap and permanent supply of water. Projects upon projects have come before us but until the other day, we have seen only which offered assistance to the citizens that the water would be clean and the supply abundant.

The idea of supplying Buenos Ayres, with drinkable water from the Plateno matter at what point, within the immediate vicinity of the City, was as absurd as it was dangerous. Whether at this or the other side of the Retiro it matters not, for the change of the wind, makes all the difference, and what might be drinkable in the morning, might be poisonous or perhaps worse, in the afternoon.

To avoid this was the great difficulty, and until the last few days we have heard nothing feasible proposed.

The proposition at present before the Municipality, has for its object the supplying of Buenos Ayres with clear, drinkable water, taken by means of a Canal, from that part of the river Luxan or Plar which passes through San Fernando. The cost of this canal has been most minutely gone into. The cost of a proper reservoir, pipes, jets, tanks, &c., have been calculated, and we were informed, on good authority, that, estimating the number of houses in this city at 20,000, each house can be supplied at the interval of one day, by a figure of two paper dollars a day, a sum which every household in town can well afford, and which, to poor families, would be considerably less than that of the present abominable stuff, called water, costs the citizens.

One of the greatest blessings which the Municipality could confer upon the poorer portion of the citizens would be to have this measure at once passed. It may meet with opposition from a few of the richer class, who have their abodes full, at present. But a water supply for a populous city is a subject of no small importance, and great and supervening interest should be attached to which would justify the municipality in rejecting this measure.

A good supply of water is however wanted by the Municipality for its streets. Supposing that the house in town had an algahe, in summer it is perfectly impossible to walk the streets with the dust. We need a better and novel mode with which the streets were watered last January for the entry of the National Guard.

Such a system of watering a populous thriving City, as Buenos Ayres, South American, and the sooner it is abolished the better. Luckily this City is seldom visited with such bad houses as beginning to be built now as a very different model, and the day is not far distant when the houses in this City will have as much wood in them as in Europe. Probably when some of the newest and finest houses in the City, are burnt to the ground the Municipality will learn that a copious supply of water is one of the most necessary wants of the City of Buenos Ayres.

Town-Talk.

We understand that the Government has received another proposal for the building of this road, and that Mr. Lumb has inferred to deposit one million paper dollars, for the full performance of his contract, provided the concession is granted him. The position for the new contract are Messrs. J. C. Simpson, E. Murray, and Le Lievre, who offer to construct the road ten per cent. cheaper than Mr. Lumb, and with a Government guarantee of only 6 per cent interest on the capital expended.

Colon Theatre, on Friday night, the audience attended not more than 200 admirers of Mme. Parodi being present. This is perhaps owing to the proximity of the "Fetes de la Victoria" meanwhile, suffer a cruel disappointment in the temporary disappearance of their stars behind a cloud the charming cantatrice has been knocked up, having begun to sing too soon after her trying voyage, and it is possible that we shall witness a few more of her discomfitures for six or eight days. After this repose we are confident she will come out with increased lustre, dazzling all who come within range of her fatal gaze or enchanting vocalism.

It is still a betting subject whether the Chamber have Congress on the 25th, but the general opinion is affirmative: the "Tribuna" gives a list of Deputies already on the ground:—B. Ayres, 14; San Juan, 13; Santiago, 14; Tucuman, 15; Mendoza, 23; Catamarca, 1—on all, 25, which, as we have said, is the number of the daily quorum, with others still expected, will give us the number wherewith to open the National Assembly.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

The New York Chamber of Commerce and Mr. Ericsson.

After reading the letter Captain Ericsson said that, in relation to the point immediately under consideration, which the Monitor was expected to destroy the Merrimack, he would say that, had the project of the Monitor been adopted a little earlier, we would have sunk the Merrimack. Mr. Sturges calculated the distance, but he put his gun in such a position that when she struck the Merrimack she glanced off, instead of penetrating as she would if they hit him point blank. He fired fifty shots, and some of them took effect; several, no doubt, entered the Merrimack. Two recent shots of the Monitor will be nearly parallel with the water line. He felt sure that the next time the time the Monitor got an opportunity to attack the Merrimack, and predicted that she would do it the third round. There was another thing to be considered. They had on the Monitor fifteen iron-clad guns, while the Merrimack was either disarming or retreating.

A member of the Chamber asked how often these guns could be fired. Captain Ericsson said that they could be fired in one minute and a half. The next time the Monitor will use its full force, and the Merrimack will be either disarming or retreating.

Mr. Weir asked whether Captain Ericsson had heard of the two boats of the Merrimack which were killed, including Captain Buchanan.

Captain Ericsson replied that he had not heard it. He had no doubt that the guns of the Monitor could penetrate the sides of the Merrimack.

Another member asked whether a battery on the principle of the monitor turret could not be erected on shore. Captain Ericsson replied that a movable water battery would be far preferable, as it could move in shoal water, and assail a vessel like the Warrior all the way on its passage into the harbor.

Mr. A. A. Low offered the following resolution, which was adopted:—"Resolved, That this Chamber would not fail to acknowledge with honor the self-sacrificing devotion to duty of the officers and men of the frigate Confam, who continued to fight her guns till that ship was totally submerged, and to commend the service of that ship's company, and the brave men on board the frigate Congress to the honorable remembrance of the country."

The following resolution, offered by Mr. F. W. W. was also adopted:—"Resolved, That the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York gratefully recognize and desire to place on record its profound sense of the obligations under which Captain Ericsson has placed the people of the United States. To his genius and activity is due the adoption of the iron-clad design, and from disasters from which otherwise there could have been no remedy." "Resolved—That the Chamber of Commerce respect that the Government of the United States will make to Captain Ericsson such suitable return for his services as will vindicate the gratitude of a great nation."

Captain Ericsson said that all the remuneration he desired was simply given in the success of the enterprise, together with the compensation received from the Navy Department for the construction of the vessel.—(Daily News.)

London, 2nd April.—Advices from New York to the 23rd March, state that a great combat has taken place. The operations of the Federals against Ish No. 10 in the Mississippi are going on. The Federals are making a great advance, and the decisive advantage having been obtained.—News from Vera Cruz announce that all the English troops have left Mexico, with the exception of a hundred men.

Constantinople, April 2.—The accounts from the Piousa announcing the surrender of the citadel of Nampolia to the Turks. It is only held out for four months longer, and the 130 men who are in it will treat with no one but the King, from whom they demand the dismissal of his Ministry, the dissolution of the Chamber of Deputies, the resignation of the National Guard, and the designation of the Sultan.

Rome, April 2.—Morris, Crisp, Grubbe and Doghlin, in Alabama, have been destroyed by fire, and all the Turks massacred. The Christians were spared. Five steamers have arrived at Scutari; and twelve others are expected.

St. Petersburg, April 2.—The Bank of Russia announcing the issue of a quarter of a series of bonds, at 200 rubles each, at 4 per cent interest, from the 1st February. The amount of this issue will be 12 millions of roubles.

A MONSIEUR CASTEL or Uvernes, a correspondent sends the following remarkable story to the Dallas Evening Mail:—"This is the age of discoveries, and one of such a startling nature has just been made in an English county that it seems out of place in the pages of a paper of color. Get me, purely to the atmosphere of the three-volume novel. Here are the circumstances, the names for the moment I am not at liberty to indicate:—"The Earl of married not long ago, and brought it a bride home to one of the family mansions which had been the English aristocracy regard with an affection amounting to veneration. The lady, however, after a short residence in the apartments appropriated to her use, expressed a wish to have a bedroom in the vicinity of her room. The Earl was glad to comply with the request, but, upon examination, it was found that the room sometimes happens in antique buildings, were so awkwardly distributed that by no conceivable plan of re-arrangement could the desired location be attained. The Earl, however, was determined to have the room necessary to involve professional assistance, and an eminent architect was summoned from London. He examined the house narrowly, and said there seemed to be nothing for it but to build one, though at the same time he could not resist the impression that the Earl was not so much as to build one somewhere in that wing of the mansion. The noble earl laughed at the idea; the other servants and retainers of the family were questioned, and declared that they had never heard of a rumor of its existence. The Earl, however, was determined to be resolute, and the architect, still the architect retained his conviction, and declared himself ready to stake his professional reputation on the result. The earl at last consented to let the walls be bored, and when opening had been made, not only was the room found, but it was presented itself almost without attempts at description. The apartment was fitted up in the richest and most luxurious style of 1500 years ago. A quantity of lady's apparel lay about the room; jewels were scattered on the floor, and, but for the faded tapestry, and everything which the chamber might have been tenanted half an hour previously. On an enchanted bed the most curious sight of all was seen, and this it is which affords the only clue to the mystery. The couch held the skeleton of a woman, and the skeleton of a man, and half in and half out, by another skeleton, that of a man, presenting evident traces of violence, and proving that, before he expired in that position, he must have received some dreadful injury. The secret connected with this tale of blood has been well kept, for not merely had all tradition of the scene faded away, but even the existence of the room itself was forgotten.

The survivors probably valued the apartment at the time, and its contents remained so, until the present day, when the late calculations, after the lapse of a century and a half, after the house had accidentally penetrated into this chamber of horrors.

VIENNA. HONORABLE "MISERABLE."—A correspondent who has just returned from the capital at Vienna, has introduced as the miracle. Tired and way-worn, he arrived at night in a little town in the south of France, and immediately proceeds to the mairie to get his passport valid. The rumour immediately spreads that a dangerous character has arrived, and before he has the police officer he is a marked man. He goes to an inn, and asks for food and supper. The landlord asks him suspiciously, sends to make inquiries, and then in a subdued whisper tells the wretched wanderer—"I know who you are—not wish to be accused of anything, but I will send a knapsack, and marches forth in close night. Every door is closed against him. At one place he is told—"You are the man?" at another he is told—"You are the man?" He wanders forth into the country, climbs a snug little cottage, with light gleaming through the window. He draws near, and looks upon a sunny picture of domestic happiness. A young, blooming, vigorous peasant, seated by life, young wife, a child prattling on their knees. He looks at the woman, and wants food and shelter, I am able and willing to pay." "Why don't you go to an inn?" "They are all full." The peasant grows suspicious. "Surely you are not the man." The convict drops his head, and begs in a wretched voice for a glass of water. The peasant looks at him, and goes out the convict again wanders forth, with rage and bitterness at his heart. In this mood he goes back into the town, without going into further particulars, it will suffice to say that he, the man who finds a refuge in the house of the blind, the play priest, who treats him as an honored guest. The character of the village is beautifully drawn; and the savage headstrong nature of the brutal policy alone, surprised and awed at the sight, gradually softening under the treatment he receives, and goes out in a manner worthy of Victor Hugo.

—For the sake of the Russian Government but of common humanity we are glad to say that the story of the fearful scourging inflicted upon Alexander Zamyatki in the prison of Warsaw is entirely untrue. The contradiction is a document published in the "Official Gazette" of Warsaw, dated the 2nd inst. If this document be not what, we cannot possibly think it a tale and gross fabrication, it certainly disproves the charge against the authorities. A commission appointed to investigate the matter visited Zamyatki in his cell and questioned him upon the subject. Zamyatki stated that no one had ever said a hard upon him. One of the commission asked him if he made this statement through any fear; upon which he replied that he was not afraid of any punishment. The commission, however, declared themselves satisfied. We are happy to believe that the story of the scourging—of which, indeed, we always expressed a doubt—was untrue.

Two new editions of public bonds have taken place since the last message—one for $24,000,000 of the six per cent in accordance with the law of 8th June 1891, and another for $20,000,000 of 5 per cent, in fulfillment of the law of 20th January ultimo. pure care for the Sheep in Sheep.
 The undersigned has the pleasure of announcing to the Wool Growers of this country, that he has now received a large quantity of the celebrated South Down Sheep Wash.

This valuable preparation is highly recommended for its safety, convenience, utility and economy. It is a concentrated extract, and of a quality which is equal to ten pounds of tobacco, retaining in this compact form all the properties of the raw material, at the same time saving the very dissoluble and tedious operation of preparing the wash as is usually practiced in this country. The only labor required with the article now offered to the public, is to stir the paste into the quantity of water needed for the Sheep that are intended to be dipped. This Sheep Wash is highly recommended and extensively used by the wool Growers of Australia and South Africa. The Samples that have been used by some of the Estancieros of this Country, have given the most perfect satisfaction, and are recommended by them as the most efficacious remedy ever used in this country; a further sample will be supplied either personally or by letter to—
