THE HUNCHBACK.

Few of our readers have not heard of the "Jorobado," his daring feats, great ingenuity, and general success in all predatory undertakings. He was by birth an Italian, but in sentiment was a citizen of the world, for he fought lustily on every battle-field for the cause of creed, color, or nationality. In like manner he chose his assistants: a Chevaliere d'Industrie indiscriminately—a smart Portuguese, a negro slumper, a couple of Italian and Argentine fellows—all these made up the light-fingered corps. To record their various exploits would be a long task: suffice it to say, they bullied, pillaged, plundered for a considerable period, and the name of Jorobado struck terror for their safety; although no deeds of blood are reported of him.

He frequently robbed the Custom-house officers of ever bulky merchandise, spurning detection or pursuit. He paid occasional visits to private dwellings, stealing articles from the Sra wending the family to the Jew jewellery shop in Calle Victoria, and carried off a splendid bounty, almost under the noses of the police. At length the Jorobado got a low estimate of his worth and all his gang, and a sentence was passed on them of imprisonment for life. At Parodi alias Jorobado, was on an image escort in cuadra Bonaparte prison than committing burglary paid or was "three threes or four clover-leaves from the city prison, followed by an easy reception, took to the field himself in confinement at the outbreak of 1868, when by overpowering the guards, a large number of prisoners got them-elves free. Our hero, being of these, took a trip up the river for change of air, but was again seized in the following year and sent in irons under a strong escort, to Montevideo, where he had become well known to the authorities in former times.

His old bad fortune attending him, he either bribed or intoxicated his guards, and got away. It was remembered slightly, however, that at the time when the Chief of Police, Moreno pounced on him, and then on transmitted him to Buenos Ayres. Latterly, it was believed he had not resolved to pursue his natural calling, and he took up his residence in Montevideo, where he was employed as a police detective, which shows the misery to which the low himself can be reduced, though, perhaps, this is a slander on the memory of our hero, just deceased.

His physiognomy was strikingly unprepossessing—a large head, with a thick mop of hair, set on his body with a hump, seeming, however, to compensate for the enormity by an unusual peculiarity of intellect to which a careful examination of the true qualities of an accomplished leger-de-main. He had the bump of Acquisitiveness largely developed, and but for a little shortness in the muscles of the carefully gouged, he might have proved a valuable citizen. Genius, the Sapeurs had his misfortune to give him birth, and Jupiter Ayres supplied the charity of a garret. He closed his chequered career last week at the Men's Hospital, the year of life age being unknown. His mendicity were published some two years ago, but he hardly expect to see a posthumous edition by any of his admirers—fellow-to lend none.

TRIALS FOR MURDER.

It is time that the judges of the country should know that their judicial functions are watched and criticised by an independent tribunal, and it is time that the free censure of the Republic should learn that the "Standard" watches, with a jealous eye, everything that transpires in that wholesale deposit of crime and stamp-paper. It is time that the bench should be aware that their decisions are subject to the searching scrutiny of an impartial writer to whom no authority says, "Thus far shalt thou go," and before whom a plentiful reform must be made in the tribunals of Buenos Ayres.

Two cases of thwarted public justice have been just decided: the evidences of the one, the dying statement of one of the murdered men, the incidents attending the atrocious deeds, the decision of the judges, are before us. We take these cases up in possession of all the facts: we are to try the accused, but the judges of this land, and to demand from the public their verdict.

On the 6th of December, 1869, a gang of robbers numbered in a house of ill fame, by a gang of young men, two of opened the house for two different purposes. It appears that, one of these young men, named Benavencheo, took offence at a joke of one of the girls about his new military dress, and struck her a violent blow over and on the female. Merlin, the fiddler, who happened to be in the room at the time, immediately interposed, and was in the act of the attack a young man, or cause a disturbance, as he was afraid, and would send them all to prison; whereupon a young man, named Ramon Vasquez, stepped forward, and said he was looking for a (vasque) fighting character, and glad to find one. The fiddler told him that he could not, and must go elsewhere. Thereupon Langenheim knocked the fiddle over the chairs, the girls all fled, and the two men fell to. The unfortunate man was literally perforated with stabs: all these young men, it appears, being armed with knives and daggers, and, some of them with swords.

The testimony of the assassinated pleado was taken, in evidence of the fact, and that of the girls, and those of one of the prisoners, Ramon Vasquez, who proved most clearly that Millan and wounded the victim, the statement of the dying man, who witnessed the whole affair, and proved that Barcaccia had also wounded the pleado. The dying declaration "was proved" blame against the accused, the judge, Benito Bayrenechea, Langenheim, and Millan to your years imprisonment, all of whom may state have long since fled the country, and we believe are in the Banda Oriental.

The second case which we refer to is more appalling. In the 20th July, 1869, an unfortunate woman named Tercera Roma was murdered in a near Calle Montevideo, a tween Calle Cangallo and Piedad, proved from the evidence that some six or seven young men had been out amusing themselves, that about eleven o'clock they were returning from the house of Calle Tacuari, and after spending some time in a confiteria and a house of ill fame, and creating great disturbance in the street, they arrived at Calle Cangallo, between Cuyo and Corrientes, where one of the group Rodriguez, entered the house of Tercera Roma, and demanded a drink of water, which was refused him, whereupon he struck the woman down on the pavement, and then, with the assistance of the rest of the party, commenced a most unmanly and brutal attack upon the prostrate woman, which resulted in her death. The evidence of the dying woman, who identified the prisoners, and the testimony of the police officers, who arrested the prisoners, and the doctor who examined the body, all tend to prove the guilt of the accused, and the jury found them guilty of the charge, but in defiant justice and rescue the murderers from the gallows.

COTTON IN CORRIENTES.

We had a visit, yesterday, from the two gentlemen, Messrs. Smith, Corrientes, from Curuzu and Garzon. These gentlemen have a lively interest in cotton prospects in Corrientes, and their respective provinces large tracts of arable land, which may with trifling labour and little capital be turned into plantations of gossypium arboreum. Sor. Orita has 1200 squares (4,000 acres) of well-irrigated camp, but the enormous distance of the capital from a market, and the consequent high freight, prevents the hope of realising a profitable enterprise in that remote region. Sor. Smith reopened Trenton engines, or Cochin China, having for the purpose to cheap and ready communication with our river ports.

The Province of Corrientes comprises 11 leagues of fertile land on the banks of the Parana, about 40 leagues above the city of Corrientes. It has a fine natural harbour, where the largest Paraguay steamers, or small sailing craft, might easily take in cargo, the charge of freight to Buenos Ayres being about $18 gross silver, or less than 4 dollars per arroba, the price paid for conveying wool from Villa Lucero, a distance of only twenty leagues. The climate of Corrientes is admirably suited for cotton, the trees yielding crops for 15 to 20 years without other trouble than annual pruning. In fact a plant from 30 years old has been known to give 30lbs seed-cotton. Hands are not very common, labour is cheap, and instinctive men will be found in the province of vegetables and fruits growing in tropical abundance, and I unblock can't grow only four silver, coal are Corrientes. Regarded the cotton question in the aspect of cotton raising, the unlessforeign capital, thickly and energetic men to introduce and carry on the cultivation on a scale requiring the employment of successful enterprise are they will abandon the cultivation of maize, bean cane, and devote their new staple. Foreign colonists might succeed in the attempt under Pujol's administration was a failure, the Swiss settlers growing, as they still do, sugar-cane, and killing the manager, after which they left off agriculture to become simply cutters and vendors of wood.

Dr. Pujol has a splendid sugar estate which would prove highly advantageous to capitalists or immigrants anxious to make a turn in this valuable staple production. Corrientes can grow a million cotton-bills in a league of its land, and sell the crop to any buyer who will moreover assume the cost and risk of shipping it. We wish Sor. Smith rent the land to a joint stock company on condition of their planting land at the rate of 100 acres per annum, and we will go halves with you with all the expenses and profits of planting half a league or a league. On the will be taken as the basis of division of capital profits, giving them house, beef, and vegetables for the first year.

He has brought us a beautiful specimen of cotton, picked by a race only 3 months old, which had reached the height of 8 feet. It was planted in December and plucked in March, although the season for picking cotton in September is the best month for sowing. Hi pecu common wooden roller-gins, but purposes taking a Mauritius steam gin for his projected plantation. The Corrientes seed somewhat resembles Sea-Island, but is a little smaller: the cotton is white as the driven snow. In New Orleans, (2222 per lb.) middling cotton is worth 19 cents, in this country. Considering the cheapness of land, cost of labour, abundance of water, and great facility of conveyance, we could only expect that this staple would yield far greater returns than Buenos Ayres' wool, which is liable to be cut by a race of 3 months old, which had reached the height of 8 feet. It was planted in December and plucked in March, although the season for picking cotton in September is the best month for sowing. His of about 7,000 acres occupied and for the most part under cultivation.

The terms of agreement were that, within a [illegible] years, five hundred families should be likely to comply of not more than five persons, were to be brought out at the rate of one hundred families per year. But the original settlers did not number five hundred persons, whilst the addition, taken a short time before Parliament brought forward the subsidiary bill, only amounted to 1,100 souls. The land was to be 20 shillings per acre (or about 20 francs) for cash, and with this a small house, 9×24 feet, a cow, two heifers, two sheep, a sow and mare, with a hoe and eight axes. The contractors were to pay to the Government 1,000 francs for each lot, whilst every head of a family agreed to pay to him (Sir Christopher) one-fifth of the produce for five years, when the deed-poll right to the property in perpetuity, was to be granted to the occupier.

Note the meaning of that clause, people of have been in the colony for only 7 years, and the Clearing for first two or three years of any cultivated ground only from drought, as well as from frosts, destroying their crops, they produced in the year 1861: 02—

4,712 bushels of Wheat;
615 ... Barley;
3,019 ... Maize;

with [illegible] beans, and potatoes and various vegetables in abundance. If any add that, according to Sir Woodbine Parish's figure is about four English imperial bushels.

Amongst the other articles in cultivation, I find hemp introduced by Sir Mayn, the Justice of Peace of the colony, that they have got two and 800,000 young vines. Whilst I was there the steam ship Dejectilla brings down from Santa Fé large quantities of eggs and butter from the colony for Buenos Ayres Market, and with all their comforts—if only to grind their corn, and troops of cows and horses, they are in a condition of manifest prosperity.

ON 'CHANGE.

August 25th.

Ounces opened at half-past eleven o'clock at 430 1/2, and declined to 425 before one o'clock, they then got a little firm and rose to 427 1/2, and at the closing hour of the Bolan they fell off, and closed weak at 426 1/2. Cash sales 2000.

Very little business was done on this account owing to the very unsettled state of affairs; it would seem as if no one was willing to speculate on the future. If the losers fight we trust the people could settle their way more clearly, but with new versions each day of the Pillibuster. With a difficult religious revival nearly at its climax, it is impossible to say what things will tend to.

The sale of Wool for the coming clip, which we hinted at a few days ago, was not effected. The offer, we understand, was made for the wool, which is what they sell Uddersfelt, but the owner refused. From observations from Baraga and Nivarro Jr. it seems that there are buyers going about in the camp offering very good rates. One man asserts that he was offered 100 dollars per arr., but refused to sell, as he got more last year.

It was supposed on the Bolan that the Kaylay was coming in from Baraga but it was found to be a mistake.

Some large sales of cabinets have been made in the north at 48 and 50. The animals are in very good condition, and free from the scab.

Our Packet number will be ready on Thursday morning, and will be sent round as usual to subscribers' houses.
