NEW CAMP ADMINISTRATION The rural districts of Buenos Ayres have the peculiar privileges of a Co-vernor, Cabiner, and two Legislative Chambers. We should naturally expect that, counting on a splendid reall the elements necessary for good government, these executive and delibermive authorities must be calculated to frame wise laws and enforce popular respect. Unluckily, the case is othervise: for our Provincial Government seems to impre the robers of its proper action, and the camp is abandoned to a set of men, some kind-hearted and timid. others active and vicious, a few honest and energetic, and mony both ignorant and unscrupulous As a natural consequence, law has become a paredy on justice, and order, for the most part, is The only kept by a pocket pistol. greatest sarcasm on South American society is to say that Gov. When exils, however, touch an extreme point, there is always hope of a speedy reform; and the state or life and property in the camp has become so scandalous that even the culpable parties can no longer shut their eyes to its deformity. We want no 'sensation' discourses, no painful repetition of enermities, no estalogue of murders unpunished, no description of backsliding judges or lawless officials, to have a perfect idea of the monstrous sins of omission for which our rulers must answer, if not before the tribunal of public opinion here, at least before that of injured civilization, and of the Su-preme Ruler. We are alone in calling for camp reform, the native press, either thinking rural interests insignificant or else so disagrecable a subject us to be else so ottagreeaure a studect as to be beyond here of remedy.
