ALLIANCE WITH PERU

It was not without reason or foresight that the Cabinet of Lima sent its agents, last year, soliciting alliance with the us regarded the proposed Amphietyonic Council as a captice of Peru, or the ex-uberance of South American patriotism and aversion to monarchical relations. Nevertheless the case was highly in-portant, and Chili felt her fate more or loss involved in that of her rejulibor and therefore warmly advocated the Continental League. By singular good fortune the Argentine Government refused to commit itself to an alliance offensive and defensive with a country so perpetually in hot water both as regards internal and external relations.

After Mexico, the republic of Peru has been most dissergnably notorious for diplomatic ruptures and local disor dera. The English Minister, Mr. O'Sullivan, was barbarously murdered in his residence at Lima, while sitting at dinner; the assassin was not taken r soon after, the commander of an English war-steamer came to a like trugic end, the perpetrator of the crime as usual escaping. It was not long before the French, who are less patient than our Government, came to loggerheads with the republic and made an imposing naval display, for moral effect. A war between Peru and New Gramada succeeded, compromising the internal security of the country; and finally we have a 'question' with Spain, the results of which are more striking than any that have gone before.
