BUENOS AYRES.

The immense advantages of Accounts Current are now an generally felt and appreciated in the two great emporisms of the River Plate. Montevideo and Buenos Ayres that there are very few Merchants who fall to keep one at the bank in which they place the nost confidence. The Bank of Maud and Co. in Montevideo has already provided for the working classes in that city a safe and profitable depositary for their savings.

The sums deposited in that most important institution are daily increasing, and already reach a very large amount.

These advantages have not hitherto been enjoyed in this city by an immense number of clerks, artisens; working men, and servants of all classes and conditions, who are equally interested in putting their savings out at interest, thus providing themselves with a reserve fund in case of nead, sickness, or old age, instead of epending them in the immoral gambling, in letteries, and other frisolities.

The Bank of Mauá and Co. of this city, following the noble example of their firm in Montevideo, now after the same facilities in this city, and will open a Savings Bank at Na. 103 Calle Cangallo. from Nine am till Three pun on Week Day, and on Sundays and Holidays from Ten am: to Tockne m., for the reception of the savings of the classes already mentioned.

The Bank will deliver to each depositor a pass book, in which will be entered the amount deposited and withdrawn.

deposited and withdrawn

The depositor is permitted at any time to withdraw the whole or part of the sum deposited; in the former ease the interest will be calculated up to date.

The Bank of Maua and Co is sufficiently known to the Public by the benefit derived from the course of its operations, which are regulated on the strictest and soundest principles, and always directed to promote the general welfare.

The ank of Maua and Co. are also persuaded that this new branch of their business will render immense service to the working classes of Buenos Ayres and its neighbourhood.

THE BRITISH HOSPITAL Buenos Ayres, Feb. 16. To the Editors of the 'Standard.'

Gentlemen, In reading over the report of the secretary of the British Hospital, I was much surprised at the statement "that ing, would seem to be determined on many poor Irishmen were admitted often on the recommendation of Irish clergy nen." I have never recommended any poor Irishman to the charity of that hospital, for the simple reason that I could not administer the Holy Sacrament to him when dying. I have endeavored to provide for every sick countryman that called on me, either in the Irish or native hospital, as circumstances required.

The appeal which the Sisters of Mercy made to the Irish people last year for support for their hospital, met with little success, they scarcely received five thousand dollars from subscribers: they received two dona tions which enabled them to erect three rooms, and they are still ex pecting that some charitable country man will enable them to complete the buildings.

If the directors of the British Hospital would refuse admittance to the Irishmen that would refuse to pay. they would avoid the expense which they now complain of. The Sisters of Mercy are doing all they can to fit up wards both for men and women: many of the latter come in from the camp. and cannot find a place sufficiently adapted to their circumstances. Many poor girls in town also are similarly circumstauced.

I would be glad to see both th hospitals well supported, as they are calculated to do an immensity of good to all poor, destitute, British subjects. I am, your obedient servant,

A. F. FAHY.

ADVENTURES ON THE NORTHERN RAILWAY. Buenos Ayres, Feb. 15. To the Editors of the 'Standard.'

Gentlemen,

use for that purpose:

Railway, the last train to town, and on Thursday evening at 6 p. m. stood there, at say half past seven, consulting with the civil and obliging station-master as to what I had best to do under the circumstances. Wishing to reach Buenos Ayres that night, there was no way, at least as far as Belgrano, but that of marching on foot upon the railway, and, having been cautioned by the said gentleman, regarding the many 'puentecitos' as the moon was not yet up, I started on my journey.

At first it was rather pleasant. The air was cool; innumerable fire-flies alongside the road delighted me with their flashes, whilst the shrill chirping of myriads of crickets, the untutored harmonies of the frogs, and now and then neighing of horses between, served to entertain the ear. I picked my way carefully over many 'puentecitos,' passed successfully the Rivadavia station, and advanced considerably beyond it, when I now came up to the iron bridge on a high embankment, with broad ditches on either that the bridge cannot be passed over by either man or beast, but only by its the rella, which ere lying across wide millions a year.

I reached and passed Belgrano station: but drawing nearer Palermo werse misgivings than even the iron bridge had caused me, were now in store for me. These arose from frequent assaults of bands of dogs who, to judge by their ferocious barkeating me up. Fortunately, they li mited themselves to noise only, as I took care not to show the slightest notice of them; but I could not but feel Ri at times alarmed, and this was particularly the case when the last villain ous set of them came on, led by a co lossal brute, whose deep, roaring voice alone would make a worthy successor of 'Cerberus,' should that respectable beast of canine antiquity perhaps be no longer at his post. How I wished my Palermo persecutor to be chained up for him, or along with him! At ast he fell off with his company, and I vowed to avoid coming in his way

After the lively impressions I thus had had to enjoy, I reached my home in the Calle Florida at half-past eleven, safely, and thanking my stars for it, I take the liberty of giving you this ac count, as it may serve as a warning to other beedless persons.

Holy See and the establishment of vir ire to depart this life in peace.

The correspondent of the "Times" writing from Rome, after describing the gorgeous scenes witnessed at St. riodical literature far exceeds that of Peter's on Christmas Day, draws attention to the state of public feeling in Rome as to the Pope's letter. Many of the clergy (he says) regret the encycleial because it defines the position of large sums are looked for at 36 to 37 the Church too sharply, whilst the laity per cent. Produce is dull, owing to regard it with comparative indifferen ce. He describes the Italian Catholics as intent only on curbing the temporal power of the Pope, but as having no desire to subvert the Papacy as a spiritual power, and as willing to accept many of the propositions set forth in the recent publications. He says . Italy is not yet un-Catholicised; and were the worldly ambition of the Holy See less and its regard for the faith more, the existence of the Churattached to the visit paid by Cardinal Andrea to Prince Humbert, coinciding as it does with the period of the publication of the Papal letter. This cardinal has long been spoken of as the probable successor of his Holiness the Pope, and his visit to the Italian Prince is regarded as an evidence of his sympathy with the Liberal party of Italy. The Turin correspondent of the Daily News draws attention to the great efforts now put forth by the reactionary clegy of Italy to prevent the establish ment of a constitutional Government for united Italy.

Accounts have been received from Naples of several successful sallies made by the French and Italian troops upon the bands of brigands which still intest the Pontifical States and the Neapolitan frontier. Some of the most notorious of the brigand chiefs, who have long been a terror to the districts in which they roamed, have been slain and their men captured or scattered. The postponement of the execution of the brothers LaGala is just now occupying much of public attention in Italy, and has called forth a strong attack upon the late Italian Government which pledged itself to France that whatever might be the result of the trial, these miscreants should not be out to death. Such a proceeding is denounced as a fresh humiliation in dicted upon Italy, which the present Government is strongly urged to remove by giving these murderers up to the

I do not care whom I offend by telling the simple truth, that Protestan tism has no more chance of establishing itself here, except among a few ruined professors, who accept alms and a new religion at the same moment, than Buddhism or fetish-worship.
