The Senate threw out the bill for abolition of capital punishment: the committee reported attempted to escape with his accompliagainst the project of selling the Go vernment railways," but is is thought nevertheless that the bill will pass, as the Exchequer is " hard up."

Things are beginning again to look stormy in Rome, and the police are becoming painfully vigilant, arresting numerous parties on trivial charges. A relegram has been received in Paris, confirming the news that the Pope has written to Victor Emmanuel about filling the vacant sees in Italy; on the same authority we learn that the Chamber of Deputies has decreed the sup pression of all religious orders.

The recent disturbances at Madrid terminated fatally. The authorities thought the matter more serious than it really was, or else their orders were wrongly interpreted, for the troops fired on the unarmed populace, kil ling seven and wounding over one hundred persons. On the day after the riots, some arrests took place, and the newspapers advised the citizens to maintain order. In the Cortes the ministers were much censured for their proceedings during the riots, and public opinion pronounced itself strongly in the same sense. In the country districts the feeling was still more dangerous, and the cabinet feared a revolution, while the opposition anticipated a coup d'état.
