

be bound by what he did, but would declare that so long as he was chairman of their board, no power on earth would induce him to accept one sixpence of salary after August until the shareholders had received seven per cent. for their money. (Applause.)

shareholders would be allowed one month to decide whether they would take their 'pro rata' share of the debentures; and that the board would not give anyone more than their 'pro rata' until shareholders had declined. Mr. Rowlands thought their appreciation of Mr. Parish's services should find expression in the presentation of a service of plate or other substantial testimony of their regard.

finest vessels in the Brazilian navy, and have been constructed in England regardless of expense and by order of the Government. They sailed from London flying the English flag, and may be expected in Rio in another week. The constructors of these vessels have received another order from the Brazilian Government to build two more iron-clads, alike in all respects to the Columbus and Medusa.

They went N.N.W. by N., but faith I think they must have made their way to Carmelo in the Banda Oriental, for I read in the 'Standard' of the 25th of a Mr. Mully living there who says he has doubled his sheep in this last lambing, and in the summer, when the water dries off a bit, I mean to take a trip down to see if it isn't mine that's mixed with them.
