LOSS OF THE BARQUE PRINCE ALBERT.

Probably the most useful mission of the 'Standard' is the publicity it gives to English lawsuits pending before the local courts.

The great yerba case, which has just been decided in Mr. Stewart's favor, is perhaps the most striking proof of our thesis.

We took up the question; we showed both sides of the case, and in three months after, the unfortunate man was liberated.

We now call attention to the case of the British barque Prince Albert, which, it may be recollected, was the vessel the Chacabuco was towing up when the mutiny on board that steamer broke out.

The barque Prince Albert, built at Cornwallis, Nova Scotia, registered at Windsor, July 29, 1863, first-class. Entered the River Plate, January 8, 1867, laden with coals from Cardiff.

The Esmeralda arrived at the Tigre in a terrible state, bows smashed in, and this fine steamer greatly damaged.

dering Captain Hall to drop his anchor. The tide or current of the Parana, which at all times is very severe—between five and six knots an hour—bent the vessel about and almost shook the masts out of her; she jumped about in the quicksands and frequent keeled over, straining herself badly.

On his return he found the smoke increasing, and the greatest alarm amongst the crew. The coals were so hot that they could not be touched, and there was danger of an explosion.

Neither the vessel nor cargo was insured, and Captain Hall was part owner of the vessel, which was valued at $130,000.

We do not apprehend that it is necessary for us to quote authorities, or extract from Abbott on Shipping, to convince the public of the absolute and entire responsibility of the Government to pay to the owners the full value of the ship and cargo.

On the 13th inst. the government issued a decree calling out 8,000 more National Guards for active service in the Army invading Paraguay.

either by the arrival of Emigrants to Brazil or by the usual increase of population. A newly invented shell gun, warranted by its inventor, Sinear Vidal, to discharge five shots per minute, was tried on Sunday the 16th inst in the public Gardens of Rio before an immense number of influential persons.

The Royal Mail Steam Packet Company are sending the "Seine," a splendid steamer of 3,200 tons, with the mails due in Rio on 2nd April.

An Italian doctor named Solitto died this morning at 3 a.m. of the cholice, which had attacked him on Wednesday: of course it was magnified into a case of cholera, and such was the alarm that his corpse was removed an hour later (even before sunrise) to the cemetery.
