At the Colon, on Friday night, the revival of the buffo opera of "Crispin é la Comadre" drew a better house than we have seen there for some time past. The opera lost none of the popularity with which it was received on its first production, and the execution was on the whole not surpassed by former representations. Mme. Lablache, particularly, and Sr. Celestino, obtained the most genuine and enthusiastic applause. The same opera is repeated to-night, and we expect the house will be still better attended.

The Bouffes Parisiens produce for the first time to-night a new piece "La Chasse des Ecriteaux," which we have heard spoken of very favorably. The new orchestra Director M.
