SPECIAL TELEGRAM FOR "STANDARD."

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

NEWTON'S MAILS. Montevideo, July 22, 11.40 P.M. The Astronomical steamer Newton has arrived, bringing London telegrams to the 20th June.

ENGLAND.

London, June 19. In the House of Lords last evening Lord Clarendon brought up the Irish Church Suspensory Bill, and it was read a first time.

COMMERCIAL.

Liverpool, June 19. The cotton market has been active to-day, and prices continue steadily to advance. American is 4d to 4d, and other kinds about 4d per lb. dearer.

MONTEVIDEO.

Montevideo, July 22, 5.20 P.M. It is now positively stated that Mauá will open on Saturday.

GENERAL OSORIO.

It is the general impression that, in consequence of the disastrous battle of Humaita, which is relieved by the splendid heroism and superior generalship of the brave Osorio, that the supreme command of the Allied army should be at once entrusted to General Osorio, who, we are free to say, has given the best proofs of capacity, and whose nomination is at the moment essential in order to restore confidence in the ultimate success of this prolonged campaign.

THE BATTLE OF HUMAITA.

It is difficult to squeeze into a short article the full details of a battle, possibly the most memorable ever fought in South America, and fraught with consequences which none yet can clearly define. Correspondence both private and public have been placed before us, 'viva voce' statements by parties just come down from Paraguay; we have also at our command, and for the first time since the commencement of the Paraguayan war, we control facts which leave no room for an erring judgement.

UNITED STATES.

New York, June 10. The news is of no general interest. Mr. Packard, President of the Board of Registration in Louisiana, has been arrested by General Buchanan for disobedience of orders, but had been liberated by General Grant, who, however, approved of what Gen. Buchanan had done.

ARRIVAL OF SIR R. NAPIER AT SUEZ.

Suez, June 18. The steamer Feroze, with Sir Robert Napier on board, and the Mauritius, with Consul Cameron and General Staveley, arrived here at half-past ten this morning.

FRANCE.

The corn markets in France are slightly weaker, in spite of the continued absence of rain; but sellers are few.

AUSTRIA.

Vienna, June 20. The Vienna Evening Post of last night denies that there have been any movements of troops on the Servian frontier; and states, in order that there should not be any ground for political conjecture, that the garrison changes ordered some time ago have been postponed.

MADAGASCAR.

Letters from Madagascar mention that the Queen is dead.

GENERAL OSORIO.

It is the general impression that, in consequence of the disastrous battle of Humaita, which is relieved by the splendid heroism and superior generalship of the brave Osorio, that the supreme command of the Allied army should be at once entrusted to General Osorio, who, we are free to say, has given the best proofs of capacity, and whose nomination is at the moment essential in order to restore confidence in the ultimate success of this prolonged campaign.

THE BATTLE OF HUMAITA.

It is difficult to squeeze into a short article the full details of a battle, possibly the most memorable ever fought in South America, and fraught with consequences which none yet can clearly define. Correspondence both private and public have been placed before us, 'viva voce' statements by parties just come down from Paraguay; we have also at our command, and for the first time since the commencement of the Paraguayan war, we control facts which leave no room for an erring judgement.

On the afternoon of the 15th inst., a Paraguayan deserter crossed the lines and was at once conducted to the presence of Caxias. The declaration of this man was to the effect that the garrison of Humaita was about to escape by way of the Chaco, and Marshal Casias is not to be blamed for reposing faith in his statement since almost contemporaneously a message was received from the squadron stating that some 20 canoes were at the moment passing over to the Chaco from the fortress. At once Caxias formed his plans and acquainted Gelly, giving the order to get ready; during that eventful night preparations were going on at the allied camp. Signal rockets went up fizing in the air that plainly told the assembled myriads that the hour of the final struggle was at hand, all was tranquil at Humaita, thy watchfires burnt with a steady light; morning came, the order of the day rang along the line from Tayi to Curupaity, the solemnity of the moment inspired the allied troops with resistless ardour—there lay Humaita, the key stone of Paraguay—before night the flags of the allies would wave over the proud turrets of the Church and on the dismantled batteries which frowned over the river; confidence pervaded every bosom; and hope, bright happy hope, that at last the fatigues of the campaign were about to terminate, beat high in every heart.

At an early hour General Osorio advanced to the attack, with a division of some 10,000 men, composed of infantry, cavalry, and light artillery. The ground over which the troops had to pass was little better than a morass—at every yard they encountered difficulties; but the absence of the enemy facilitated the march. The infantry found less difficulty than the cavalry, as the horses floundered in the mire, and, until reaching the high ground near the first fosse, proceeded in irregular and broken lines. The vanguard of this division was led on by the 38th and 39th regiments, composed of what may be termed veterans. On reaching the first fosse, which was deep and wide, they descried the enemy behind the second fosse, and occupying a redoubt; but it would seem that the Paraguayans had beat rather a hasty retreat from their first lines, since when the Brazilians came up they found the enemy had left the planks in many places over the fosse, which was filled with water. Osorio, with true generalship, brought up his whole corps in an oblique direction from Establecimiento, and, presenting a narrow front, took the enemy in flank at their triangular position. The Paraguayans were driven back, and the triumphant General seized the position. Encouraged by this success, and deeming that the other corps of the Allied army had at the same time occupied on the other side equally strategic positions, he formed in line and advanced; but soon discovering that the enemy in his front mustered much stronger than was represented, he despatched an orderly to Caxias, acquainting him of his position and of the urgent necessity of at once sending reinforcements.

Up to this time the allies had lost but few men, and gained decided advantage; but it was for a moment. Dark and massy columns of Paraguayans were seen advancing out of Humaita, and the enemy, having got their guns in range, opened a raking fire on the Brazilians. Osorio held his ground manfully, expecting each moment that reinforcements from Caxias would come up, which would decide the fate of the day, but an aide-de-camp from headquarters, arrived with orders from Caxias to retire. Caxias, in giving this order, is much censured; but he had some cause for so acting. Precisely as Osorio's despatch reached him he received a despatch from Gelly stating that it was all a mistake about the garrison having evacuated Humaita, since, pursuant to orders, he had advanced and found the enemy in his front ready to dispute the abatis. Unwilling, therefore, to risk a general engagement at the moment, Caxias yielded to prudence, and, ordering Gelly to keep the enemy engaged at his point by maintaining the fire, he directed Osorio to fall back. Possibly, had Caxias been aware of the inevitable consequences of a retreat at that moment he would have altered his mind, but at such moments the greatest decision of character is essential. Had Napoleon or Wellington commanded, doubtless they would have thrown 20,000 fresh men into the redoubt occupied by Osorio, and thus rendered the battle decisive one way or the other; but South Americans play at small risks. The retreat was ordered, and then followed a chapter of horrors.

Osorio was the first to enter and the last to leave the redoubt, his Aide-de-Camps were shot down at his side, his horse twice shot under him, yet he got back to his camp without a scratch. So vehement was the fire of the enemy at all points that nothing could resist it; the cavalry, the Cossacks of Rio Grande displayed prodigies of valor and checked the merciless pursuit of the victorious Paraguayans who rent the air with the most satanic shouts as they butchered the unfortunate Brazilians, who were hemmed in on all sides. Stung by so unlooked for a result, General Osorio it is said has thrown up his command but we have little doubt it will only be for a few weeks. The result of this engagement has yet to be seen in Rio, doubtless it will lead to a change of Lieutenants, and the future Commander-in-Chief of the allied army can be none other than the valiant Osorio, whose Providential escape points to his elevation.

THE BATTLE OF GUACURU.

The disastrous engagement on the 18th inst., may be aptly termed the Battle of Guicuru, since the heat of the fight took place on the banks of a little river in the Chaco dignified by this indigenous name. It is a mistake, however, to suppose that the battle bears any comparison with the engagements of the 16th, in front of Humaita. It was, at best, but a partial fight, in which the allies fought under many disadvantages, and the enemy with even superior numbers.

Few there are who correctly understand the real lie of the country where this battle took place. The allies are encamped on a small knoll of dry ground, having to the left a large lagoon skirted by an impenetrable jungle, which extends away round to the right. A little path or road leads from this encampment to the position of the enemy, called Timbo; but this path crosses streams and a stretch of low jungle, which is nothing else save a morass. One of these rivers or streams, which, though narrow, is deep, is spanned by a rude bridge made of the trunks of trees; crossing this, the Paraguayans hold possession of the woods, and but a few days past erected a battery with some guns taken from Humaita, which began greatly to harass the allies. General Rivas acquainted the Commander-in-Chief of the matter, and received orders to dislodge the enemy; but, unfortunately, Rivas, either despising the strength of the enemy, or counting too much on the valor of his men, employed a force utterly insufficient for the purpose. It is but a repetition of the old story—"Sending a boy on a man's errand."

General Rivas entrusted the expedition to the command of the brave and much esteemed Colonel Martinez de Hoz, it being understood that on the taking of the position Gelly y Obes would come over to lead in person the subsequent attack on Timbo—but man proposes. Colonel Martinez de Hoz with the Riojano regiment commanded by Gaspar Campos, and about 40 picked men as an escort accompanied by a Brazilian reserve numbering some 500 men, advanced along the path, meeting no opposition till they wheeled to the right and faced the bridge; there they found the enemy posted, Colonel Martinez de Hoz sword in hand charged the enemy, driving them back with very little loss; pursuing his advantage he deployed down the road still following the retreating enemy, until he suddenly felt a simultaneous attack on both flanks from the adjoining woods; meanwhile the guns at Guacuru opened a murderous fire, the position was critical in the extreme, and had Rivas come up then with reinforcements, doubtless the allies would have carried the place by storm, but the Brazilians who brought up the rear finding the enemy rallying from the woods at all points, and already having nearly half their number 'hors de combat,' could push on no further; thus in fact the Argentines were as it seems cut off, and when Rivas came up it was the day after the fair. He rescued the retreating Brazilians from the victorious Paraguayans who crowded along the road.

Notwithstanding the letter of Gen. Rivas to President Mitre, stating that another and immediate attack on the position was about to take place we find it difficult to believe the statement. On the other hand we find in the army correspondence of our colleagues the statement that the allies are about to evacuate the Gran Chaco. Possibly by the next steamer we may have further news of stirring importance.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

The Newton arrived yesterday morning in Montevideo from Liverpool with dates from London to the 20th June. We received her news by telegraph at an early hour, and our office was crowded all day with parties anxious to learn about the Queen of Madagascar. The Newton will be up to-morrow, and is advertised to sail direct for Liverpool on Tuesday next, 27th inst.

The James T. Brady and the Villa del Salto came up from Montevideo yesterday morning. Everything down there is at a dead lock. Baron Mauá is, to all appearances, master of the situation, and notwithstanding the formal installation of the Fiscal Commission, who have selected Sr. Villalba to act as chairman, the state of things goes from bad to worse. The Paraguayan news transmitted by the wires has caused considerable glee amongst the parties opposed to the alliance.

The Patagones steamer is expected to sail for the distant settlements of Bahia Blanca and Patagonia on Tuesday next. She takes down several new English settlers to Bahia Blanca. A great many more are expected shortly to go there from the Banda Oriental, and the magnificent camps along the Sauce Grande promise, at no distant period, to be a flourishing colony exclusively Saxon. We are surprised, however, to hear that the Government is so dilatory in the despatch of petitions for grants of land. We know of one English gentleman who, after dancing attendance at the Government-house for four long months, has at last a chance of getting his papers despatched, and, if so, will leave next week. Surely, Governor Alsina ought to remedy this, and, by facilitating as much as possible the acquisition of lands for the class of settlers that are applying for them, induce others to follow their example.

Colonel Don Santiago Albarracin late Commissary General of War, who died on Tuesday last, was born in the year 1806 in Buenos Ayres, and was a descendant of the families of Oro and Sarmiento of San Juan. Although in early life he kept a store in Calle de los Mendocinos now Maipu, he did not the less take part in the political life of his country, and having been implicated in the revolution of '39 against Rosas, he was thrown into prison, from which he was only liberated through the intercession of the then British Minister here. He was the object however, of Rosas particular aversion, who among other things obliged him to put with in a short time 22 'peroneros' which cost not less than $50,000 mpc. Having however, escaped to Montevideo to avoid further persecution, he removed thence to Chile, and afterwards to Corrientes, and also took part in the campaign of 1852; which ended with the overthrow of Rosas. After the battle of Caseros he was made Deputy for Buenos Ayres, and raised to the rank of Lieut. Colonel of the Nation. He was twice appointed Commissary General of war, and has died in harness, respected and esteemed by those who knew him. He was supposed to have amassed a large fortune but we are reliably informed that all the property by his will does not exceed $300,000 mpc. His remains were yesterday accompanied to their last resting place by a large concourse of friends and relatives.

The German Club in Montevideo gave a grand concert on Friday last which has been described to us as a splendid success. It was attended by the elite of both the English and German Societies, and among the many excellent pieces performed the great hit was a duet from the Stradella of Flotow, sung in character by two German gentlemen. The Club is preparing to give a private theatrical performance in the course of three weeks.

In Montevideo the Serenos have been done away with, and it would be high time that these antiquated and useless disturbers of night slumbers should be substituted here by an efficient staff of policemen, more in consonance with the practice of civilized countries.

To-day the great wine sale takes place in the auction rooms of our hammer-king Mariano Billinghurst, and as there will be no other before March of next year it is to be expected that it will be numerously attended.

We understand that the preparations for the 'mise en scene' of the Grand Duchesse at the 'Franco-Argentine Theatre' are in a very forward state, and that very probably it will be given on Tuesday next.

The great Cafe Chantant in Calle Victoria, which has been constructed under the direction of M. Cheri is almost completed, and will be inaugurated on the 15th of next month. We understand Mme. Cheri is expected by the next French packet with a number of artists engaged by her expressly in France.

We call attention to an advertisement in another column establishing the price of telegraphic messages from the central Telegraph office in Calle Cangallo to all the stations along the Southern Railway.

We hear that in Villa Lujan an Irishman, name unknown, dropped dead in the street a day or two ago. On Monday one of the cars on the Western Railway near Moreno Station got off the rails, but fortunately without occasioning any casualty.

Governor Alsina for want of any more important political question to attend to turns his mind, we are glad to see, to literature, and has just issued a decree which puts some restriction to the promiscuous granting of certificates to public translators. Future aspirants to this literary honor have henceforward to pass an examination before a board of University professors, and must besides prove to the satisfaction of a Juez de Primera Instancia that they fulfil the conditions requisite by law for being qualified to become article writers.

Mr. Charles Napp has obtained letters of naturalization as Argentine citizen. With reference to the races that are advertised to take place at Randall's, near Jeppener Station, Southern Railway, we are requested by the Provisional Committee, to state that the only person authorized to collect subscriptions is Mr. Craufurd of the Standard. Any person who may have taken the trouble of receiving funds for this object will confer an obligation by communicating with the above gentleman as soon as possible in order to avoid confusion.

The Tribuna announces that our distinguished friend Colonel Don José Orquera, has been appointed Fiscal Militar of the Nation, in the room of the late Colonel Agrelo. We knew that the post, for which nobody is so eminently qualified as Col. Orquera, both for his high character and his thorough acquaintance with military legislation, had been offered to him, and we are happy to say that his extreme modesty and love of retirement which made him averse to accepting this very honorary distinction, have given way before the exigencies of this country, and he has consented to take office again.

We understand that General Arredondo has entrusted his defence before the Court-martial that is to try him by order of the Minister of War, to our gallant friend Colonel Mansilla, and if true, we are glad of the excellent opportunity our friend will have of displaying his abilities and extensive reading.

We are reliably informed that the Provincial Ministerial crisis is at an end, by the appointment of Sr. Agote, to take charge of the Finance Department, and Dn. Miguel Sunez that of Government. We congratulate Governor Alsina on having secured the services of such men, both of whom come from the best of schools. Sr. Sunez has given proofs of his eminent qualifications as a public servant, and has, from his early youth, been an ardent disciple of Sarmiento. Sr. Agote, the President of the Provincial Finance Committee, is one of the most distinguished members of the Liberal party, and has unquestionably one of the best Argentine heads; by accepting office under such unfavorable circumstances, he gives a high proof of his disinterested patriotism.

Our special reporter, who was present at the performance of the American Circus on Tuesday evening last, informs us that there was a numerous and select attendance. Mrs. Aymer, whose very remarkable personal charms we e heightened by a very elegant and tasteful attire, secured at once the sympathies and genuine applause of the public, by the ease and grace with which she went through her varied equestrian feats. The children are interesting, and young Alberto gives earnest that he will make a good rider. Mr. Aymer also went through some very difficult feats, to the great appreciation of all, and the clown, who is far above the average, kept the whole audience in roars of laughter throughout. We trust, therefore, that Mr. Aymer and his talented companions will obtain the patronage of our public. To-night they will give again another varied and interesting performance, at half-past seven, and, we doubt not, but that the attendance will be very large.

When we reported yesterday that the National College had been vacated from the appearance of yellow fever in the establishment, it seems, happily, we were badly informed. Considering the city health, and the immense number of boarders in actual residence—some two hundred, the sanitary condition of the College can hardly be better; in fact, there is not a single boy on the sick-list. The case in question was typhus fever, of which the lad, of a naturally weak constitution, suffered some six weeks previous to his death.

THE RIVER PLATE.

THE INNER BELT.

(From the Field.) Hitherto the Platine States have not to any great extent emerged from the second or pastoral stage of young countries, but agriculture is each year increasing, and there are many indications that in the future rapid strides will be made in its development. The tilled lands at present are chiefly in the vicinity of the towns and railroads, and prices vary from 10s. to £2 per acre, according to locality and quality, those in the immediate proximity to the city, which are devoted to vegetable and fruit gardens, and nurseries, or dairy farms, fetching as much as £20 to £30 per acre. The chief grain-producing district is within a radius of 20 miles from the town of Chivilcoy (the "Chicago" of the Plate) on the Great Great Western Railroad, 100 miles from Buenos Ayres. The soil, deep and rich black loam of easy tilth, gives, when properly worked, heavy crops of wheat and maize, but the management is in general very bad. The majority of the agriculturists are from the Basque provinces and Italy, and any one who has seen tillage operations in those countries will agree that the farming is anything but first-rate. The general plan is to plough up the virgin prairie in a very inefficient manner, get successive crops of grain half choked with weeds, till the soil is for the time exhausted, and then leave it to relapse into a prolific seedbed of rubbish to spread over and deteriorate the surrounding land. A fresh piece is ploughed up, and the same operation is repeated till the whole of the holding has been thoroughly "fogged

FOR SALE.

ESTANCIA FOR SALE.—A Tract of Land in the Oriental Republic, for position, quality, and beauty not to be surpassed, upon which a Sheep and Cattle Farm has been formed, possessing every requisite for comfort, security, and convenience, is offered for Sale. It is well stocked with Horn Cattle, Sheep and Horses, and situated upon the Arroyo Negro, one of the finest for Agricultural and Pastoral purposes in the Province. It is surrounded by large English Farms in a very good neighbourhood, and a short distance from the important town of Paysandú, considered the central city in the Oriental Republic on the River Uruguay, navigable for sea-going vessels, which constantly load hides, tallow, wool, and other produce for Europe. To and from this Port ply large steamers almost daily to Buenos Ayres, Montevideo, and almost every seaport in the Argentine Republic.

This Property is in the market, owing to the decease of the late Owner. It is an opportunity which seldom offers to form a company or for a private acquirement. Sheep have increased, 30 per Cent. per Annum, and the Land is constantly increasing in value. Wood and Water are abundant. The Titles are unquestionable, and in the most perfect order. The Boundary Lines of the Land are three flowing streams or rivulets. For further particulars apply to the Executor, Mr. FREDERICK P. W. BENTON, at Messrs. Babin and Flowers, 19, Calle Peru, Montevideo, June 25, 1868. 159, 1m, 2j16 out," by which time the owner will probably have acquired even by this miserable system enough to return in independence to his native land.

I returned home last autumn by way of the States almost expressly to see the prairie farming in the West, being convinced it was the true system to adopt; and well did the journey repay me.

The introduction, with some modifications of this system or a steam culture into the Plate is absolutely necessary, if it ever hopes to be a large grain producer; and that it ought to be so, facts, I think, conclusively show.

I was the guest for some days of Mr. M. B. Sullivan at his estate near Loda, on the Illinois Central Railroad, which comprises about 40,000 acres, probably the largest tillage farm in the world.

In social gatherings and on similar occasions it is always understood that there is somewhat a little more latitude allowed for political expressions as long as there is nothing offensive said.

As to how my few remarks were received I leave it to the gentlemen who had the goodness to hear me to the end; and in proof of same they have only to recall to mind the generous remarks made by the worthy chairman afterwards.

The undersigned subjects of her Britannic Majesty and natives of Gibraltar respectfully submit— We have seen in one of the leading journals here, El Siglo de yesterday, a paragraph to the effect that our lamented and much respected countryman, Estevan Henriquez, was accidentally killed by a policeman on the evening of the 12th inst.

Without any sentiments of revenge we denounce such statement as false, for, although the policeman might not exactly have meant to assassinate Mr. Henriquez, it is certain he drew his sword and deliberately wounded him.

We now solemnly protest against such an outrageous occurrence, respectfully soliciting you to institute necessary inquiries to have said policeman punished according to the full rigour of the criminal law.

the great question is, when will it again be called on to do the same. Exchange on Rio, if offered as a tempting rate will be at once taken, and the proceeds, if shipped to the army, must be in specie.

The amount of Exchange passed for the packet is put down at £20,000 sterling. The news from Montevideo was well received. It appears that all the Bank difficulties have at last been arranged, and that in a few days the Maya Bank will open.
