SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO "STANDARD"

IMPORTANT FROM MONTEVIDEO. Montevideo, August 3, 5 P.M. No business transactions upon the Bolsa to-day.

On Saturday, 900 hides, American, sold at $5 80c, gold, dispatched 'estilo antiguo'; also 100 pesados at $5 40c, same condition.

The Gerente has arrived from Rio with dates to 23rd June. Exchange upon London at 18 to 18 1/2 paper.

On the same day Messrs. Balbin and Flowers will sell by Auction, and without reserve, in twenty fold...

THE WAR IN THE NORTH. FALL OF HUMAITA. FULL PARTICULARS.

The London battery is completely dismantled, and the Brazilians are fishing for the guns in the river.

Only one Armstrong gun has been found in Humaita—it is spiked, and is a 150-pounder.

The impression is general that Alp evacuated Humaita without orders, and strong suspicions are entertained...

Some English navy officers have just been over the whole place; also some merchants from Corrientes and Curupaity.

It is untrue that the Paraguayans were starved out; and the statement of Mr. H— which we published a few days past...

Nearly all the news brought down by the Cerro has proved a willful 'bolsa'—but the Provocador to-day will bring fresh dates.

Mr. Crauford, who left on Sunday for Humaita, will soon give us a full, true, and exact description of the state of things up there.

Humaita is simply a heap of ruins; everything in the place bears the trace of the three years' siege which it withstood.

There were 10 wounded Brazilians in the place when the Allies entered, and some few Paraguayans who had been left to fire the mines...

On Tuesday a powder magazine blew up, owing to the carelessness of three Brazilians...

A good supply of maize, also of mandiocas. A small store room full of sardines and Tencinet's ale...

ANOTHER ALARM. CORRENTINOS OVER THE BORDER.

By the arrival of the steamer Uruguay, we have news of the defeat of Caceres in the Province of Corrientes...

The news we have is as follows:—On the 31st ult. Colonels Ocampo and Reguera, with 2,500 men, 700 of which were infantry...

On the 1st inst., at 12 o'clock, all the Correntino forces paraded six leagues from Curuzú-Cuatiá...

From the Pueblo Argentino we extract the following version of the affair, which we hear confirmed from other reliable sources.

The cavalry of Campos and Reguera was completely dispersed; some fled and others joined the loyal forces.

The prisoners of war taken by Caceres were sent about their business; the officers were detained.

Should the opponent afford a venture on mathematical demonstration, the Argentine will then be prepared to silence him at once.

From the confluence of the Paraguay and Parana, the latter meanders in an alluvial valley...

A fringe of trees along the stream with a straggling clump of forest on the highest portions of the valley...

When the river rises unusually high, which was the case this year, the whole valley is overflowed...

Like all great rivers which extend through different climates, the Parana has annual floods...

The annual rise usually begins in December, and recedes in February. This year the rise was postponed...

The opponents of the Parana will now fortify on the Amazon; but I will repeat them forthwith.

The river, flowing from the tropics toward the cold antarctic, bore drifting on its swelling waters immense rafts of aqueous plants...

The Orinoco is simply ditto; they are kindred waters.

kindred waters. We do not abstain from giving the dimensions of the Parana from any such motives...

The oldest pilots cannot state within miles how big it is: they speak of it by leagues.

For the benefit of travellers, who may have their curiosity tantalized as mine was, to see the Parana 'assembled' in one view...

Some days were intensely calm, and the shouting of some lucky savage securing his game would be heard over the placid water...

At length the drift of lilies and grasses seemed exhausted, and the great river flowed on in its vast channel...

hundreds of acres, moving with a rustling sound like the rising of the wind in some old forest.

On these rafts of tropical plants, and drifting far from their native latitudes, came sometimes grim passengers...

At length the tall grass of the jungles all disappeared, and nothing was to be seen above the water save an occasional clump of half submerged trees...

You will see from these remarks that we do not quite coincide with you in this instance, though in the main we do.

Our crops ran some danger from being injured by a long continued drought; but happily that fear is dissipating...

Here in Europe we appear to have no present danger of war. France would willingly go to war for glory, vanity, and plunder...

We are surprised at what you say about the profits made in salted hides—they must have been made on the spot...
