THE FALL OF HUMAITA!

BUENOS AYRES, SATURDAY, AUGUST 8, 1868.

THE FALL OF HUMAITA.

The most important victory the allies have achieved since the commencement of the Paraguayan war has been attained without even the firing of a single gun. Humaita has fallen without the discharge of a musket...

rals may say, the opinion of an impartial public on the affair of Humaita is that which we have expressed; and which we rejoice that a fortress which incriminated trade has fallen, we are knowledge the credit due to the Paraguayan Commander for his masterly generalship in evacuating it.

All doubt is at last removed about Humaita. On Saturday night the Cerro arrived, and on Sunday morning the Paraguay and Cisne came in. Their dates are to the 21st ult. from the dismantled fortress of Humaita.

The Gaul and the Roman who first entered the fortress give the history of their exploit in the following terms: Early on the morning of the 21st the pedlar and the baker pushed on to the outer lines of the Allied campment to the staidly importunities of the dealers.

Osorio—the brave Osorio—was sitting in his tent gloomily pondering over the prospect of the campaign; the sun had gone down, and the shades of evening were falling fast on that eventful Friday, when the astounding tale of the French baker and Italian pedlar reached his ears.

these, I say, I here expose the dimensions of the Mississippi and the Nile. These I select, as the contest would probably arise with a native of the first, or a tourist of the latter. The Mississippi, then [at New Orleans, where its waters are all assembled, and near the sea], is half a mile wide, forty feet deep, and flows three miles and a half per hour.

From the confluence of the Paraguay and Parana, the latter meanders in an alluvial valley, confined between the highlands of Corrientes and Entre Rios, and the opposite highlands of the Gran Chaco.

THE PARANA FLOOD.

Our correspondent from the unexplored regions again takes the field, with the interesting and startling intelligence that the floods are at last subsiding.

CORRENTINES OVER THE BORDER.

By the arrival of the steamer Uruguay, we have news of the defeat of Caerres in the Province of Corrientes and in a subsequent encounter in Basualdo between the Entre Rios forces, under Lopez Jordan, the Corrientes army were obliged to retire.

OFFICIAL DISPATCH.

Paso Puen, July 25, 1868. To H. E. the President of the Republic and Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Army Brigadier-General Don Bartolome Mitre.

ROMANCE OF THE WAR.

Truth is stranger than fiction. Will it be credited, that after a three year's siege, rigorously maintained by an army of 40,000 men, aided by an iron-clad blockading squadron, the strongest and most powerful that ever rode in South American waters, Humaita surrendered to an itinerant Italian pedlar and a peregrinating French baker?
