TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1868.

POLITICAL REFORM.

The new broom at the Government House is sweeping clean. The citizen President seems determined not to let much grass grow under his feet. Public employes are becoming nervous as to what new edict may appear in the evening's Nacional...

excellent reforms; but he finds that for the want of funds he can do nothing. He goes the right way to work, therefore—instead of trying to increase the debt of the nation by attempting new loans...

The state of the roads in the interior could not be worse. We hear complaints from every quarter. The old roads, with all their inconveniences, are, after all, preferred to the new roads attempted under the last administration...

Useful as it may be in its way, the Patent Office can point to very little good effected since its creation. Genius, no doubt, deserves protection, but industry has prior claims. Up to the present, industry has struggled on in these countries, not to say unprotected, for there was never any attempt at protection...

THE MAIZE CROP.

The most abundant, most useful, and yet most neglected crop in this Republic, is the Indian corn. Maize grows better here than in most parts of the world; and the rudest system of tillage, the chacrero raises a crop which would astonish the most prosperous farmers in the greatest corn-growing country in the world—the United States...

of the opinion that corn fodder, grown upon a rich soil, will pay for harvesting. He goes the right way to work, therefore—instead of trying to increase the debt of the nation by attempting new loans...

Many careful experiments and comparisons have also proved most satisfactorily that corn itself fed to horses, mules, sheep, milk cows, and other cattle, and hogs, in a raw, whole, or unground state, is from one-third to one-half less fattening than the same amount of corn ground into meal and well cooked or boiled...

There is at present what is called a hotel close to the mole, but the accommodation is miserable, the cookery execrable, and the charges shameful.

THE ARGENTINE RURAL SOCIETY.

It is with sincere pleasure that we watch the steady progress, and daily increasing importance of an institution whose mission is one of so much practical utility to the country, as the "Sociedad Rural Argentina." It must be a source of just pride to its persevering and intelligent promoters, not only to have the conscience of the beneficial influence it is exercising over the social, economical, and industrial interests of the country...

COLONIA.

The docks are now progressing rapidly under the able management of Captain Manton, who is indefatigable in his endeavours to push the works forward; and should no accident interfere with his plans he will no doubt, in a short time, be prepared to dock and repair vessels of the largest class trading to this port.

These works are of the greatest importance to Colonia, as they will when completed, give employment to a large number of workmen, which will lead to considerable expenditure of money, and an increased trade.

When the steamer Beaulieu was placed on the line between this port and Colonia, she did not pay, and her owner, very naturally determined to withdraw her; but the parties interested in maintaining regular and rapid communication between the two ports prevailed on him not to do so...

The Whitechurch now plies between Colonia and Montevideo. She was bought by a company, formed in Colonia, for about $23,000, but we are informed that some of the subscribers now show a disinclination to pay up, and that in consequence she will probably be taken off the line.

DE FORCADE.

"To Monsieur José Martinez de Hoz, President of the Argentine Rural Society, Buenos Ayres.

NO ROOM IN OUR COLUMNS.

There always has been, I regret to say, is, and I suppose ever will be a number of bothersome people of all ages, sexes and conditions in life, who are not satisfied unless they can thrust their wants, sufferings, desires or grievances on the unfortunate, unoffending and perfectly disinterested general public.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

President Sarmiento with a party of private friends left on Saturday afternoon for the Tigre, by the 1:30 train, to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gonzalez Moreno, at their charming country villa on the banks of the Parana.
