ATTEMPT TO UPSET A TRAIN ON THE NORTHERN RAILWAY.

ANOTHER atrocious attempt to endanger the lives and limbs of innocent railway passengers occurred on Sunday last on the Northern line.

The public is scarcely aware how frequent these attempts have been within the last year or two.

The criminal appears to have had leisure in broad daylight, and within sight of two stations...

On behalf of the public, we must, without making any direct complaint, caution the managers of all the lines of railway to study economy...

By far the most serious question for the consideration of the public is what efforts are taken by the Municipal authorities of the country to detect the perpetrators of such demoralizing offences...

The circumstance is indeed a grim commentary on Spanish law and Argentine administration. The impunity of crime in this country is fearful to contemplate...

Making every allowance for exaggerations in the illustration, the arithmetical difference is sufficiently appalling, and without going more deeply into the merits of the case...

ANOTHER INDIAN INVASION.

Through the kindness of Sir E. Titchborne Bart. who arrived on Saturday we have received the following account of the recent invasion of Mendoza by the Indians.

The town of La Paz has just been sacked by the savages and given to the flames.

The invaders appeared at Desaguadero and followed the high road to La Paz, slaughtering a body of cattle drivers...

The Governor was warned of the approach of the savages while at the theatre, but let things take their course although offered volunteers and horses by the people.

ANOTHER CAMP MURDER.

It is our painful duty to record that an Irishman named Patrick Cormick received a fatal stab at one of the pulperias on the Tigre camp, Chascomus, on Sunday 20th ult.

The affair in which Cormick lost his life seems to have originated in a dispute concerning races that came off some time ago, near the same pulperia.

The 'Independiente' is the title of a new daily paper lately started in Concepcion del Uruguay.

It is of diminutive size but good type and paper, and the substance a decided improvement upon the common run of provincial papers.

The storm of Sunday night, if it has not cooled the air, has laid the dust, and the clouded state of the sky, by intercepting the scorching rays of our December sun, will prove a great boon.

any of the authorities; if wronged they can refer the matter to the courts, but they cannot interfere with the due execution of orders, or insist on their permission being asked previous to ordering the party on shore, who has no right to an asylum on board the ship, and whose remonstrances must be made on shore, and not in the vessel. If at the same time it be taken into consideration, that Argentine Consuls abroad do not enjoy the privilege which the Italian Consuls lay claim to, namely that he should be informed beforehand by the Captain of the Port, and his permission should be sought for, before bringing the party on shore, still less can we understand such a privilege which is not enjoyed by other Consuls, neither would there be any object in it, since he has no power to resist the execution of the order, nor would it be right that he should, having no such power on land.

Neither could it be the object of seeing the order of the court, and hereby ascertaining the truth, for this would be most irregular and almost insulting to the authorities, for they are only instruments of the law, and have a right to be believed and obeyed without prejudice to the right of appeal if injustice should have been done. Let the river police then do as is done on land, in all similar cases, inform the Captain of the vessel of the order, and deal only with him for the landing of the party implicated who may be trying to escape in defiance of the law. There can be no necessity whatever for the intervention of the Consul.

THE EARTHQUAKE IN IRELAND.

The shock of earthquake which has not been experienced in Ireland reminds us that though we are so far from the principal European centres of subterranean action, we are by no means exempt from the class of physical calamities which has of late worked much mischief elsewhere. The accounts which have reached us show that the recent earthquake wanted but a small increase of violence to have been a destructive one. Severe shocks were felt at two places near Malloy, and the account states that 'houses were much shaken, and furniture was broken.' The shocks were not felt in the immediate vicinity of Cork, but much alarm was created there by the intelligence that the ground had been shaken at Newtown, and between Malloy and Kanturk.

The statement that the shock passed from north to south indicates that we are rather to look for the seat of disturbance in the volcanoes of Iceland than in those of Southern Europe. It is, of course, impossible to be absolutely certain respecting the true path of the wave of disturbance, because it has been shown in more than one instance that the earth wave may change its course, somewhat as the wave on the surface of water will assume a new path after encountering a bank or breakwater. But in the present instance there can be very little doubt that the seat of disturbance lay to the north; and it may be that we shall presently hear of an important eruption from some of the great volcanoes of Iceland.

In this respect there is a great difference between the present earthquake and the one which shook parts of England on October 6, 1863. In the latter instance the direction of the shock was from south west to north east. Mr. Mallet, who has done so much to simplify and systematize our conceptions respecting earthquakes, is of opinion that nearly all the shocks which have been experienced in Britain have travelled in this direction, and by a careful comparison of all the information which has been gathered respecting the great earthquake of Lisbon, he has been led to the opinion that the British Isles are on the line of the volcanic belt to which the earthquakes of Portugal have belonged. It is well known that during the earthquake at Lisbon remarkable phenomena were exhibited in many parts of the British Isles. Loch Lomond rose several feet; a vast wave rolled into Kinsale; and women washing in the Tay were swept off their feet. However, notwithstanding the evidence which Mr. Mallet has collected on this point, we are inclined to look with some dubiety on the supposed association between the British Isles and the seat of disturbance in the great earthquake of Lisbon. When it is remembered that the effects of that remarkable earthquake felt for hundreds of miles on every side of Lisbon, it seems impossible to inter the existence of any belt of disturbance passing through Lisbon. We think the views of Sir Charles Lyell on this point to be preferable. "These countries," he says—speaking of those which were affected by the Lisbon earthquake—"cannot, on this account be supposed to constitute parts of the southern volcanic region, any more than the Shetland and Orkney Islands can be considered as belonging to the Icelandic circle because the sands ejected from Hecla have been wafted thither by the winds."

Thus, we may conclude that Britain is liable to be shaken by subterranean action belonging either to the south European volcanic system, or to the Icelandic one; and when any shock is recorded we must form an opinion respecting its source from an examination of the recorded direction of the wave of disturbance. In the present instance, as we have said, the account seems to point to the action of the Icelandic volcanoes. It does not necessarily follow that any of these will be shortly in a state of eruption; but we have had strong evidence lately of the association of volcanic eruptions with earthquakes taking place at a great distance from the crater of eruption. It will be interesting, at any rate, to inquire whether any sympathy will be indicated between the Icelandic volcanic district and the disturbed depths underlying county Cork.

It is common to hear Hecla spoken of as the principal volcano of the Icelandic system. In reality, however, Hecla, although the best known, is far from being the most destructive member of that remarkable group. In the wilder parts of the island there are volcanoes which have been far more destructive than Vesuvius, Etna, or Hecla. The streams of molten lava which have flowed from Vesuvius are mere brooklets in comparison with the mighty rivers of fire which have flowed over the plains of Iceland. There is one stream which is 50 miles long, 15 broad, and 200 yards deep. In the eruption of Skaptar Jokul, in 1783, upwards of 50,000,000 of cubic yards of matter are reported to have been vomited forth. Not only was the neighbouring country overwhelmed during this terrible outburst, but the very seas were invaded, and the unfortunate Icelanders were deprived of their chief means of subsistence by the destruction or retreat of the fish. For 150 miles the sea was covered with pumice, and the ashes which were poured forth from the volcano were carried over Europe, Africa, and America.

It is conceivable, therefore, that the subterranean action of which volcanoes so tremendously powerful are the outlets may well be able to extend its influence as far south as Ireland. The pent-up subterranean heart exerts its energy not merely in the vast cavities which underlie the volcanic district itself but far away on every side through channels extending in a complicated system under the Atlantic Ocean and the British Isles. We may perhaps, look upon such events as the present earthquake as referable "to the snap and jar occasioned by a sudden and violent rupture of rock masses at a greater or less depth, and probably the instantaneous injection into the fissures so formed of intumescent molten matter from beneath." Whether this be so or not, there can be no doubt that the actual origin of the disturbance is the same compressed vapour which customarily finds relief at the craters of the volcanic system which it underlies. At present there seems little reason to fear that British earthquakes will prove destructive. But we must not omit to notice the evidence which Humboldt has brought forward to prove that the range of destructive earthquakes frequently becomes extended so as to include countries which have for long centuries been undisturbed. The circles of succession widen in some instances, in others the region of disturbance is extended in a linear direction, as if along some long disused subterranean passages which have been cleared of obstructions by preceding throes.

There can be no doubt that in long past ages the land we are living on has been subjected to shocks of enormous violence. Our coal mines suffice to prove this by the magnitude and extension of the 'faults' which break the continuity of the coal beds. Long ages may pass before such disturbances may be renewed, but we should be misinterpreting the geologic records were we to assume that our present immunity from destructive earthquakes is to be looked upon as evidence that the steadfastness of Britain will be permanent.

BATHING PROHIBITED.
To the Editors of the "Standard," Gentlemen,
The other morning, going along with a few friends to take our usual bath, at the Mole Head, we were disagreeably surprised on being told by the guard there stationed, that, owing to a recent order, no person was allowed any longer to bathe there.

On enquiry, we found out that the person in authority, having a very proper respect for public decency, had prohibited bathing, except along the coast. Duly appreciating such a praiseworthy effort to keep up the standard of public morality, we should, however, imagine that the public generally would lose none of its purity, or be shocked to any great extent, if a certain time were allowed for so healthful a pastime, say from five to seven in the morning, all bathers being compelled to appear in a sufficiently decent costume. Trusting you will afford space in your valuable paper for the above, and in the hope that the suggestion thrown out may not be thrown away, permit me to sign myself, yours truly

WAR BETWEEN FRANCE AND GERMANY.

We extract the following from a letter of a German gentleman residing at Paris, dated October 23:
"It is really a matter of high interest to have from time to time a look into the machinery of European politics. The following facts coming from authentic sources may be some, what useful to you.

Napoleon intended to make the North Sleswig question a handle for commencing war against Germany. It is known that Prussia, when concluding peace with Austria in 1866, engaged herself to restore some districts of North Sleswig to Denmark, provided that their inhabitants, by general suffrage, should express their desire to remain Danes.

Unfortunately no period was fixed when the suffrage ought to take place. Thus Prussia is enabled to postpone the settlement of this question entirely at her will. Still she entered into negotiations with Denmark without having arrived, up to the present, at an arrangement suiting both parties.

These things are greatly criticised in France, giving rise to the French press to attack and insult Prussia continually, although they totally forget that only Austria—not France—is entitled to an interference in the settlement of the above question.

The King of Denmark having delivered at the last opening of the Danish Chambers a speech in which he made mention of the North Sleswig question, complaining bitterly of its long demurrage.

Napoleon had resolved upon taking up this affair. Those Royal words are said to have been originally expressions of a rather violent and threatening character; still at the last moment they had to be smoothed a little by a special order issued from Paris.

With this famous North Sleswig question upon the tongue, Napoleon would declare war to Germany, and have his troops passing the frontiers within 48 hours, with flash-like rapidity.

For this purpose the French troops were stationed near the main lines of the railways. Besides, a revolution in Naples had been prepared previously in order to engage Italy. Rome should receive a garrison of 45,000 men, Spanish troops, thus disengaging a whole French corps d'armée for the German war. There is also some probability of a kind of secret alliance existing between France and Holland.

England is said to have made remonstrances of a most urgent and warning character at the French Court; but all in vain. The French fleet was even ready to put to sea, undoubtedly against the German coast. Suddenly the Spanish revolution broke out. This revolution has been planned with English gold, and was carried out with English firmness, thus affording every chance that its result will be in accordance with the English plan. Now you have the key to the sagacity and moderation shown by the Spaniards.

ON CHANGE.

Dec. 7, 1868.
Ounces, 400
Sovereigns, 122 1/2
Pateons, 25
Nat. Bonds, 49 1/2
National Bonds again rose slightly, especially for the 31st inst. Large amounts were sold for this date at 49 1/2 the market closes firm, partly owing to the absolute certainty that the new bonds will not be issued this year, and partly to the fact that £250,000 are expected by the Arno, which sum is the balance of the recent Argentine Loan in London. It had been arranged to repay the advance made by the Brazilians, but that Government are not in any pressing want of the money.

Exchange continues the same—not much done. Some transactions on the U. States at par.
The Exchange office has now nearly five million patacons deposited against paper; it is expected that before the season is over the amount will reach seven millions.

The house No. 246 Plaza Libertad was sold by auction in $112,000 cash, $45,000 down by 50 deep.

In discounts there has been some activity; larger amounts have been arranged at 3 per cent. with Bonds, as collateral Bonds, to be delivered before the 31st inst. valuation, 45 per cent. Trade bills easily done at 3 per cent.
Central Argentine Railway Shares looked for at 65 per cent. of the amount paid up; no sellers.

GREAT TRUTHS IN A SMALL COMPASS.—The substance of volumes of medical advice may be compressed into a sentence, thus: Keep the digestive organs in a vigorous condition, the bowels regular, and the liver fairly up to its work. But how to do this is the question. Puzzling as it may seem, every man and woman who is acquainted with the virtues of BRISTOL'S SUGAR-COATED PILLS, can answer the query promptly. Their extraordinary properties cover the whole ground. Is the stomach weak and indolent?—They give it vigor and activity. Are the bowels constricted?—They relax and regulate them. Is the liver sluggish or congested?—They bring it back to its duty. Is its office to restore the system to a natural condition, without undue force, without suffering, with out any revolting nausea, "and they do it." Many complaints of the organs referred to are complicated with disorders that affect the skin, the muscles, the flesh, and the glands. In all such cases, that great detergent, BRISTOL'S SUGAR-COATED PILLS, will expedite and complete the cure. The Pills are put up in glass vials, and will keep in any climate. All respectable druggists keep both medicines.
