THE CRUSADE IN PARAGUAY.

The despatches from the seat of war, announcing the surrender of Angostura, must be looked upon as decisive. The war in Paraguay is virtually at an end. Lopez has not, cannot have, resources left for any regular military defence. In the scarcely probable case of his making one more stand at Cerro Leon, it could only amount to a nominal protraction of the contest. When the allied forces reach Asuncion, Paraguay is conquered. The devoted but misguided people, possessing no elements of resistance as they gradually, come in contact with the foreign troops, and foreign gold, will abandon a chief whose selfish ambition and cruelty has desolated their land.

The circumstances attending the attack, and surrender of Angostura, form one of the brightest episodes in the war. That the Brazilian Commaude-in-Chief should in the pride of his strength have permitted the gallant band of defenders to march out, with drums beating, and flags flying; that the Argentine soldiers after scaling the enemy's batteries, should direct their first care to their wounded and famished opponents, will afford recollections worthy of being cherished as a relief in the gloomy picture of this four years war; a war, not indeed stained on either side by any atrocities, excepting those committed by Lopez himself. It is a war remarkable only for the grievous sacri-and commercial... the war, even under the... that it is concluded. But the episode at Angostura suggests to us ulterior consequences, not less important. In the very courtesies of the victors, we are reminded that the allied armies are the crusaders of civilization.

We do not pretend, that the Brazilian Government, or nation, was actuated by benign and humanitarian motives, in endeavouring to crush the anomalous military power, of an isolated and peculiar people, planted almost in a spur of its own vast territory. Neither can we give credit to the grand policy of General Mitre for including in its aims—ought more philosophical, or remote than the desire to overturn a neighbouring despot who, however he might act at certain junctures, would by the nature of his system of government lean towards the enemies of the Liberal party.

It is not only Brazil, it is not only General Mitre and the Argentines—Lopez himself, in the mournful sacrifice he has made of the lives of his countrymen, has innocently furthered the crusade of civilization, has unconsciously aided the relentless, tide of events.

Without professing to be fatalists, anyone can perceive by the natural order of things that so surely as the red man is disappearing from the forests of the far west in the Northern Continent, the Indian races on the banks of these great Southern rivers already invaded by the commerce of the lower, are destined either to amalgamation or extermination.

The amiable and the Christian-minded will weep over the heroism and devotion of a doomed race; whilst the hard, unfeeling politician, who may have a distant glimpse of a new outlet for Manchester goods, might glory in the riddance of a people slow to assimilate and improve.

We cannot cast the horoscope of the Guarani, but we are obliged to admit that much of the very heroism and devotion of the Paraguayans, we cannot fail to admire, is due to their low intellectual condition, and to a moral characteristic traceable in all the aborigines of this country, a characteristic only to be interpreted by sulky indifference, by an unaccommodating, unreasoning obstinacy.

We can understand that a few hundreds of Paraguayans of Spanish extraction are on an intellectual level with their conquerors in the adjoining States; but it is doubtful if, in spite of Lopez's farcical attempts at progress, in spite of a railway, an arsenal, and a bare smear of material civilisation, mostly applied to military organisation, the bulk of the Guarani race are now one jot more advanced than they were when the Jesuit Fathers forsook them.

The population of Paraguay is variously estimated, but it is at least more than one-third of the population of the whole Argentine Confederation. Yet at any time a couple of cargoes of manufactured goods would swamp the market. This may be considered a grossly mercantile presentation of the case; but it affords a fair measure of all profounder notions on the subject. The celebrated Dr. Liebig judged the degree of civilisation of a country by the quantity of soap it consumed; an equally true, perhaps, but much lower metre.

It is also of the highest practical importance that one stupid government in Paraguay be not supplanted by another, or otherwise the world will lose the gains which should result from the sacrifices that have been made.

Owing to the overvaulting ambition of the younger Lopez, his country has been opened up by the sword; the gap must be kept wide enough for the free flow of foreign capital and enterprise; and, finally, for the fresh blood which will create a new race and new wants.

Meantime, after the first necessities are supplied to Paraguay, her present exhaustion will cause her to be a nullity in a commercial sense for many months, perhaps years, to come. Even this Confederation will require some time to recuperate, although to her the war has been less of an un-mixed evil than usually happens. We need not allow ourselves to be deceived by any temporary animation in the import trade, by any slight demand for money, by a firmness in the rate of exchange. There is much to be done in clearing away the debris of the war, many immediate financial and political dangers to be avoided; but those persons who have permanent interests at stake in the country will console themselves in the assurance that the remoter consequences of a crusade, which if unwisely provoked, was sooner or later inevitable, will in the end be beneficial. We do not partake in the political fears expressed by our French contemporary, that in the victory at Angostura, the Argentines struck down their best barrier the United States and other Powers, who have not looked very smilingly at her interference in Paraguay, would forbid so wanton an aggression.

GREAT DAY FOR MONTEVIDEO.

CENTRAL URUGUAY RAILWAY.

INAUGURATION.

The Orientals, like everyone else, like to begin the New Year well; and, therefore, after immense exertion, the Directors of the Central Uruguay Railway concluded their arrangements for the formal inauguration of the Railway on New Year's Day. Invitations of the most flashy dimensions were sent round to the shareholders, the dignitaries of the land, and we believe, to the public in general; the cards were lithographed in gold-dust and blue-ink; some few were sent to Buenos Ayres. We, as shareholders, as agents of the Company, and as public journalists, received the most formal invitation—and, taking the steamer Yi on Thursday night, started for the Queen City.

On board we found several parties who were also going to the inauguration—Messrs. Gowland, Conyngham, Navarro Vieira, Garcia, Ramirez, McMahon, Augier, Ricketts, Vandevelt, La Torre, Keen, Rodriguez, and others. It being the last night of the Old Year, the few foreigners on board welcomed the New Year in with the usual midnight demonstrations. At 4 a.m. we arrived in Montevideo, and at 6 a.m. all the passengers per Yi and Rio Negro, some 270 in number might be seen in one long melancholy band proceeding from hotel to hotel vainly looking for apartments. All the hotels and lodging-houses in the city are crammed full; not a decent room to be had for love or money and many parties are obliged to go out to Union, or stop on board vessels in the bay from the sheer impossibility of obtaining decent quarters. At the Oriental such is the squeeze that many of the Buenos Ayres excursionists sleep below in the cellars which run under the street, whilst in other hotels the azoteas are converted into dormitories, where long rows of beds after twilight can be distinctly seen from the street. We never on any previous occasion witnessed Montevideo so full as at present. The Navy men, instead of living on board their vessels and hoarding their salaries, are for ever ashore; they live on the fat of the land, and have the best rooms in all the hotels. The only seaman who keeps aboard, we hear, is the Admiral. As for midshipmen, we doubt if all the rooms in the Oriental could accommodate them, and they all spend money so freely that they command the greatest respect from hotel-keepers.

At about half-past nine o'clock another was a general turn out in Montevideo; it was evident to even the least experienced that there was something up, for carriages, pedestrians, and horses were all making for the Arroyo Seco. The bells rang out their merry peals, the band played stirring airs in the vicinity of the market, and the cabmen in the square roared stentoriously "dos pesos al estacion." Through the kindness of Mr. Engene O'Neile we secured a seat in a coach bound for the station, and off we started. The Paso Molino road was literally black with people, whilst diligences, coaches, gillies, and bread carts dashed along the road at the most break neck speed, intent on catching the first train on the first railway ever started in the Republic.

The Arroyo Seco station cannot be regarded as the first station, or the beginning of the line, since, on the completion of the sea wall, the line will come into the city to the terminus or depot. Neither can Piedras be regarded as the termination of the line, since the road will be carried at least 35 leagues further out, thus we attended the inauguration of a line without beginning and without end. The arrangements were not to say the most complete, but under the circumstances were as good as could be expected; for instance the 10 o'clock train did not start till 11 a.m., and the 12 o'clock train left at half-past two sharp. As a matter of course it was utterly impossible to accommodate in the cars and coaches one tenth of those present, but this "contretemps" was a blessing in disguise, for had all who attended at the station gone on to Las Piedras, the town would have been too small to hold such a throng, and very possibly the town would have burst; as it was, the excursionists by the 11 o'clock train, which left at 2, expressed immense dissatisfaction on discovering that the parties who went out by the first train had exhausted all the refreshments of the suburb—nothing eatable or drinkable could be had—a band of loafers could not have made a clearer sweep, and to enhance the difficulty the return trains were utterly insufficient to convey the people back to town that night, and hundreds were compelled to pass the line runs through a charming country: here and there we come on large wheat and maize chacras. Starting from Arroyo Seco, the train stopped at Estacion Gomez (né cummins) where Mr. John Ramon has his beautiful "urban" in the town; thence the train proceeded to the first tank to take in water, as steam had been kept up all the morning, the engineers evidently being unaccustomed to South American punctuality at this spot—the bridge over Las Piedras river—and here we had the pleasure to see Mr. William Lafone and Mr. and Mrs. Fry, standing on the rocks, who showed enthusiastic burrahs for the new line, which must add 100 per cent. to the value of their real-estate in that locality. The train now pushed on at full speed, about sixty miles an hour, and in a few moments we dashed up to the station at Las Piedras. The platform, station, and town betrayed signs of oriental rejoicing. The official party consisting of H.E. President Batlle, Gen. Suarez, Minister Zorrilla, President of the Line, Gen. Carraballo, Mr. John McColl, Dr. Requena, Dr. Cervantes Ramirez, the Bishop Vera, and Monsignor Letamandi, curate of Mercedes, with five or six other clergymen—Sr. J. M. Martinez, Sr. Latorre, Belgrano, Rodriguez, and others. The cortege passed from the train to the station, which was magnificently decorated with evergreens and flags, both inside and out. An immense table occupying its whole length groined under the most "recherché ambigu." After resting for a few minutes, the party headed by the President and the Bishop, proceeded to inspect the new church of Las Piedras, which would be an ornament to any city. The street leading from the station to the church had been made for the occasion, and was strewn with Fennel and other aromatic herbs, two triumphal arches ornamented the road, which was lined on each side by a regiment of Oriental Greys, the Te Deum being concluded, the party adjourned to the station, and discussed the merits of the "ambigu"; the wines were admitted by all, to be the very best Montevideo could afford.

The feast of reason and the flow of soul now began: music without, and champagne within.

H.E. President Batlle rose and said, Fellow-citizens—Ouro more triumph for the Banda Oriental. Peace has its victories not less renowned than war. To-day the locomotive has made a conquest in our land. Another such victory—and where are our frontiers? This country wants nothing save peace and the iron car, so that the Government can be free to work out the real

THE WAR IN THE NORTH.

FALL OF ANGOSTURA.

1500 PRISONERS & 100 GUNS TAKEN.

FLIGHT OF LOPEZ.

MARCH ON ASUNCION.

The proud, imperious man who so long boasted in the high-sounding titles of Marshal President, or, in plain English, Dictator, of the Paraguayan Republic, and Commander-in-Chief of her armies—he who had dared to rivet the hereditary chains of his dynasty on a free people, and even to threaten the existence of his peaceful neighbors: has been upset by those Powers which his arrogance had raged against him, and stripped of his tarnished honors, is now in rapid flight for Bolivia, an exile from his country, which he so long misgoverned—if the worse fate does not await him of falling into the hands of his exasperated enemies.

At noon on the 30th Angostura capitulated, after the gallant Britisher who, with 1500 men, held the fort, was informed of the dispersion of the grand army and flight of Lopez.

On the 28th the brave commander of the San Martin Regiment advanced with 70 men to the front lines of the hostile position, and called on the garrison to surrender.

The following letter will explain how the demand was answered:—

"Dec. 20, 1868, 5 p.m.

"My dear Friend,
"We have surrounded Angostura with sixteen thousand men. Yesterday it was called on to surrender. The Paraguayan Chief would not receive the intimation at first, complaining of the monitors abusing a flag of truce a few days ago. We promised the occasion to intimate to them verbally that six hours would be given them to lay down their arms, on the understanding that if they did not we would take them by force, and the lives of the officers would respond for the victims of the attack. Two hours afterwards they asked to be shown Lopez's deserted camp to satisfy themselves of the truth of what we said. They returned, and then demanded more time. The period was extended to 5 a.m. to-morrow.

"JUAN A. GELLY Y OBES."

Before the stipulated hour, came a reply from the besieged, announcing their willingness to surrender on honorable terms.

Here is the despatch stating them:—
Headquarters, in front of Angostura,
Dec. 30, 1868.

To Messrs. George Thompson and Lucas Carrillo, Commanders of the Fortress of Angostura.
The undersigned reply to the communication of Messrs. Thompson and Carrillo in the following manner:—
That for the purpose of avoiding the useless effusion of blood, consequent on the storming by main force of the fortifications of Angostura, they made no difficulty in proroguing until break of day the period of six hours, which they marked out for your capitulation. That the undersigned guarantee to those who form part of the garrison of Angostura, the preservation of their present military grades, including the aide-de-camps and staff assistants.

That they likewise consent to the commanders and officers of the garrison of Angostura wearing their swords, under promise that they use them no more against the Allies in this war.

That, finally, they concede the honors of war to every soldier of the garrison, on condition that they march out and pile their arms in the spot marked out by the undersigned.

(Signed.) { Marquis Casias.
Juan A. Gelly y Obes.
Enrique Castro.

Shortly after the receipt of the above the whole garrison marched forth, with colors flying and band playing, as though on parade, and deposited their arms as ordered by the victors, who, in their turn, marched into the deserted fort amidst the cheers of the soldiers, and a salute of 21 guns. Within was found one hundred pieces of cannon, with large deposits of ammunition and provisions.

The Argentines, although kept back very long, behaved well in the last few days fighting, and have at least the honor of "being in at the death"—not of Lopez, I regret to say, for he managed to escape with 50 men, having shot all the Argentine and foreign prisoners in his power. A large column of cavalry under Rivas and the Baron del Triunfo were immediately despatched in pursuit of the fugitives. Meantime we will push on to Asuncion.

Lopez's two aides-de-camp were made prisoners by Rivas at the Pisaguay pass, whilst endeavoring to cover their master's cowardly flight. Both agree in confirming the atrocities lately perpetrated by him. They add—"Not a single merchant, native or foreign, remains in Paraguay—all have been shot after suffering the most awful privations and tortures."

EDITOR'S TABLE.

H.E. Don Mariano Varela, Minister of Foreign Affairs, returned to town yesterday, from his mission to the Head Quarters of the Argentine Army in Paraguay, together with Don Santiago Estrada, who had accompanied him in the character of private Secretary. We understand that these gentlemen fully confirm the news already published as to the wholesale butcheries committed by Lopez prior to his flight. Neither age nor sex was spared, and among the unfortunate victims, it is horrifying to state, was the wife of Col. Martinez, who commanded the garrison at Humaita, and who was obliged to surrender in the peninsula of the Chaco. His heroic defence and long suffering were unable to assuage the wanton cruelty of his former master, or lessen the revengeful feelings against him and his.

The meeting of the Club Libertad, which took place on Sunday at No. 164 Calle Belgrano, went off with the greatest order, and resulted in a sincere reconciliation between the two factions into which the Club had been dividend. It was presided by General Conesa, Colonel Mateo Martinez, Hector Varela and Luis Elordi. The attendance composed exclusively of respectable and well-known people, filled the hall and galleries, and after naming the new committee and some congratulatory speeches, the meeting broke up at half-past one, everybody retiring to their homes quietly and highly pleased at the happy healing up of a rupture which at one time threatened serious consequences.

Another public meeting was also held on the same day and at the same hour in the Coliseum, for the formation of a new political club, which, we understand, was well attended, and passed off quietly. The candidature of Señor Castro was proclaimed, and those of General Mitre and Doctor Rawson for Deputies to Congress. The meeting broke up at about four o'clock.

The 12th Regiment of the Line, of which our gallant friend Colonel Mansilla is the commander, had scarcely landed the other day at Rosario, when a severe storm with heavy rain broke out. Mr. George Cooper, the able manager of the Central Argentine Railway, kindly placed three galpones at the disposal of Colonel Mansilla, where his men found excellent shelter. They left by the first train on the following day for Villa Maria, from whence they started on the 30th ult. for Colonel Mansilla's headquarters at Rio Cuarto. The distance from Villa leagues. The harvest in the districts adjoining the city has not been very favorable, but in the outside districts, we are happy to say, that every where it promises to give an abundant yield. Reaping machines have been very generally applied with the best result, and such has been the demand for them, that Mr. Collins's stock is completely exhausted, and also all introduced by Messrs. Amaral & Co., have been sold. The price of wheat notwithstanding, shows a tendency to a rise.

The last mail from the northern provinces brought more satisfactory news, as some disturbances had been anticipated. The fears of revolution in Salta and Tucuman have disappeared: from Santiago we also receive the welcome intelligence that the rumored conspiracy against the National Government, in which the Taboadas were implicated, has been officially denied. General Taboada has written to Señor Objeiro, bitterly complaining of a letter he had written to Colonel Lucio Mansilla, which had given rise to such sinister and unfounded reports. Navarro, as well as the Taboadas, disown all connection with the cauillito Elizondo.

We must again recommend to the attention of mercantile men the "Almanaque del Siglo," which is the only publication of the kind in this country worthy of their notice, and of being preserved: For the price of $10 each the almanacks for 1868 and 1869, provide an immense amount of statistical information, exports, imports, revenue returns, &c., which would otherwise be difficult to collect. The publication deserves every encouragement; it may become quite an annual register.

Our brother editor writes us from Ranchos that the festivities at Doctor Gibbins's estancia are most brilliant. The game of sortija was played on Friday by numbers of English and Porteno, in an avenue of the Doctor's grounds: the horses were in fine condition, and the sport good. The dinner was laid in the open air, with covers for fifty persons, the trees being gaily hung with lanterns. Several toasts were given and speeches made, the Justice of Peace returning thanks for the toast to Buenos Ayres and the Government, proposed by Dr. Gibbins. The ball was largely attended and passed off with great success, the guests dancing till daylight. The sports were to be continued on Saturday.

We have received a valuable communication in answer to an article which appeared in our editorial columns in our issue of Wednesday last, and headed "Import Trade, 1869." We regret that press of matter obliges us to hold over the communication until to-morrow.

Don Manuel Bilbao, editor-in-chief of the "Republica," and other Buenos Ayres notabilities arrived on Sunday from Montevideo, the neighborhood of which seaport is becoming a kind of Brighton to this metropolis: we envy our Montevidean friends their vicinity to sea dips and bracing winds, fresh from the Atlantic; the energy it inspires, if it leads to doubtful "fomehtos" has also resulted in a healthy, clean, and beautiful city. Would that the Ensenada Railway were complete, with a branch to Tuyú, before another roasting summer like the last overtook us. A gentleman has kindly favored us with meteorological data for the year 1868, which we shall publish to-morrow. The greatest heat was on the 7th January, when the thermometer reached 93 in the shade. As far as we have gone in this truly cool and salubrious summer, the thermometer has never exceeded 86 in the shade, and on Sunday night the degree must have been something below temperate.

A private letter from Cumaribé, dated 29 ult., informs us that at 2 p.m. of that day, five officers of the garrison of Angostura, previous to the surrender, went over to the Allied camp to convince themselves of the defeat of Lopez. General Gelly y Obes made to them a most impressive speech, assuring them that the Allies did not come as enemies to the Paraguayan Nation, and showed to them all the Paraguayans in the Allied service. The officers then returned to their comrades.

It is believed to be too true that Lopez, before his flight from Cumaribé, caused many of the prisoners in his power to be shot. Should this be the case, it will go hard with Marshal President Lopez, if he falls in the hands of the Allies.

We call attention to an advertisement of a machine for extracting fat or tallow from animals, lately invented and patented in the States, and which has proved so successful in its working and simplicity that it has supplanted every other description of "graseria" hitherto used. It will perform in eight hours what can only be done in fifty by the clumsy and expensive means now used for "trying out" fat, and is serviceable for any description of meat—be it beef, mutton, or pork—besides answering for extracting the gelatine and oil from bones, leaving the latter in a proper condition for shipping as bone-ash. The one just imported is a sample, capable of holding 13,000 lbs. of meat. It is intended to be put up in some convenient locality in Montevideo and, experiment with it for the benefit of salaristas and estancieros in this River. Timely notice will be given in order that all who can may attend, to see it worked, and we trust that all who can will attend to witness an experiment, which so vitally concerns the prosperity of our sheepfarmers.

The correspondence found by the Allies at Cumbaritú, from various persons under assumed names in Montevideo and Buenos Ayres, addressed to President Lopez, is being published by the "Nacion". With two letters signed Roberto, and Tamahdaré Miri, there is in the edition of the "Nacion" of Sunday an official one from M. von Gulich, the Prussian minister in Montevideo, concerning the imprisonment by the orders of Lopez of a Prussian subject, Colonel von Versen. The other letters contain only political gossip of little moment; but we are promised some of more interest.

We notice in some of our contemporaries very unjust representations of General McMahon's late proceedings in Paraguay. We have reason to know that the absurd statements made in regard to the new American Minister having afforded protection to any member of the domestic cabotage of Marshal Lopez have no real foundation; or none that could be construed into a departure from diplomatic usages. The other and more serious allegation as to his directing the movements of a Paraguayan battalion need scarcely be contradicted.

Last week Rosario was visited by a tempest of fearful violence. The lightning struck the powder magazine, which exploded, resulting in severe but fortunately not fatal injuries to soldiers and others who were in the vicinity.

We note some editorial changes in our Montevideo colleagues. Dr Ferrer y Artigas, one of the editors of the "Tribuna," has taken charge of the paper formerly called "Orbán," and whose title has been changed from the 1st inst. into that of "La Libertad."

On Sunday afternoon the workmen and employes of the "Republica" and the "Courier del Plata" were entertained by Mr Bernheim with a splendid banquet in the second patio of his printing establishment, in celebration of the second anniversary of the foundation of the "Republica." We received a very kind invitation, which we were reluctantly obliged to decline; from the sumptuous preparations we saw, no doubt the fête must have been both interesting and animated.

The race meeting at Santo Domingo under the hospitable patronage of our excellent friend Don Juan Davidson, on the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd of this month went off with great éclat. We have been promised a detailed account of the gay doings, and particularly of the racing, which we understand, was uncommonly good.

On New Year's Day an assemblage of about 80 persons met at Mr Dodd's estancia, Adela, near Chascomus, to witness the sports annually held there on that day. The sports commenced at one o'clock with a shooting match for a "potro," presented by Mr Dodds. The competitors fired three shots each at 80 yards range, and after a keen competition Mr John Young, San Felipe, was declared victor, with a score of 9 points. Mr James Dodds being second, with a score of 5. The usual games followed, viz., vaulting, pole leaping, length and high leaps hurdle races, putting the stone, and throwing the hammer. Messrs Pettigrew, Auld, Jolly, and Sinclair, Chascomus, with several athletes from Buenos Ayres, took part in these, the former invariably proving the victors and showing that they can hold their own against "all comers." The proceedings wound up with horse racing and after a sumptuous repast, the company engaged in dancing, which was kept up till a very advanced hour.

Our readers will be glad to know that Dr. Stewart, Major Von Versen and the English architect who built Lopez's palace &c., with other of his foreign employes, are now safe in the power of the allies.

As a sign of the times, we can refer to the advertisement columns in our present issue, where we see the S. S. Edward Everett is to sail on Saturday next at 10 a.m., with passengers and cargo for Asuncion.

We have to thank the editors of the "Tribuna" for the loan of some late numbers of the "Semanario," of Paraguay, from which we shall give some extracts to-morrow. The Allies found in Lopez' camp complete files of the "Tribuna," "Standard," and other Buenos Ayres newspapers up to the 15th of last month, as well as a complete collection of photographic portraits of all the Generals and chief officers of the Allied armies: It is not anticipated that the pursuit of Lopez will have any good result, and we are informed that Col. Martinez, whose wife was so barbarously executed by Lopez has volunteered to lead the chase, if the Government will provide him with the necessary means.

THE MODERN "QUIXOTE DE LA MANCHA."

Rosario, Dec. 31, 1868.
To the Editors of the "Standard,"
Gentlemen,

I noticed in your papers of the 17th and 20th inst. two letters, dated respectively from Frayle Muerto and Cordova, purporting to give some account of the writer's experiences whilst journeying from Buenos Ayres to the city of churches.

These letters bore a signature which could not recall to many of us pleasant memories of Cervantes' great work and its hero, and led us to expect a literary treat from a correspondent, who apparently thought himself worthy of assuming such an illustrious name, and fully capable of maintaining its character for generosity, simplicity, and 'modesty' untarnished and undiminished.

Alas! for human expectations. How promptly we were undeceived, and how woefully disappointed let those testify who, like myself, have had the misfortune to read the letters and to see the man. Instead of a letter written, if you will, in a free, offhand style, as is allowable, and even becoming, in a traveller who cannot be supposed to have time to polish up and round off his sentences quite as smoothly as the same writer might do, if he were at home.

INTERESTING PLANETARY DISCOVERIES.

The planet Mars is the only object in the whole heavens which is known to exhibit features similar to those of our own earth, and the accumulated explorations and discoveries of astronomers during the last two hundred years have resulted in the construction of a globe representing the diversified features of this planet as astronomers believe them to exist. At a recent meeting of the Astronomical Society of England a globe of Mars was exhibited, on which lands and seas were depicted as upon an ordinary terrestrial globe. By far the larger part of these lands and seas were hitherto unknown entities, respecting which no more doubt is felt among astronomers than is felt by geographers concerning the oceans and continents of our globe. An interesting description of this globe appears in Fraser's Magazine. To the lands and seas depicted on the globe of Mars were applied the names of those astronomers whose researches have added to our knowledge on the subject. Each pole of Mars, it seems, is capped by ice, which varies in extent according to the progress of the seasons. Around each cap there is a polar sea, the northern sea being termed the Schroter Sea; the southern, Phillips Sea. The equatorial regions of Mars are mainly occupied by extensive continents, four in number, and named Daves Continent, Madler Continent, Secchi Continent, and Herschel (Sir W) Continent. Between Daves and Herschel Continents flows a sea shaped like an hour-glass, called Kaiser Sea, the large southern ocean out of which it flows being denominated Daves Ocean. Between Madler and Daves Continents flows Daves Strait, connecting a large southern ocean and a northern sea, named after the latter. Herschel Continent is separated from Secchi Continent by Higgins Inlet, flowing from a large southern sea, termed Nairn's Sea. In the like manner Bessel Inlet, flowing out of Airey Sea (a northern sea), separates the Madler and Secchi Continents. Daves Ocean separates into four large seas, and large tracts of land lie between them, but whether they are islands or not is uncertain. In Delague Ocean there is a small island, which presents so bright and glittering an aspect as to suggest the probability of its being unusually snow covered. These seas, separated by lands of doubtful extent, reach from Delague Ocean towards the South pole.

One of the most singular features of Mars is the prevalence of long and winding inlets and bottlenecked seas. These features are wholly distinct from anything on our earth. For example, Higgins Inlet is a long forked stream, extending for about three thousand miles. Bessel Inlet is nearly as long, and Nairn's Inlet still more remarkable in its form. On our earth the oceans are three times as extensive as the continents. On Mars a very different arrangement prevails. In the first place there is little disparity between the extent of oceans and continents, and then, these are mixed up in a most complex manner. A traveller by either land or water could visit almost every quarter of the planet without leaving the element in which he began his journeying. If he chose to go by water he could journey for upward of 20,000 miles, always in sight of land, generally with land in view on both sides, in such intricate labyrinthine fashion as the lands and seas of Mars intertwined.—Boston Journal.

Between Madler and Daves Continents flows Daves Strait, connecting a large southern ocean and a northern sea, named after the latter. Herschel Continent is separated from Secchi Continent by Higgins Inlet, flowing from a large southern sea, termed Nairn's Sea. In the like manner Bessel Inlet, flowing out of Airey Sea (a northern sea), separates the Madler and Secchi Continents. Daves Ocean separates into four large seas, and large tracts of land lie between them, but whether they are islands or not is uncertain. In Delague Ocean there is a small island, which presents so bright and glittering an aspect as to suggest the probability of its being unusually snow covered. These seas, separated by lands of doubtful extent, reach from Delague Ocean towards the South pole.

One of the most singular features of Mars is the prevalence of long and winding inlets and bottlenecked seas. These features are wholly distinct from anything on our earth. For example, Higgins Inlet is a long forked stream, extending for about three thousand miles. Bessel Inlet is nearly as long, and Nairn's Inlet still more remarkable in its form. On our earth the oceans are three times as extensive as the continents. On Mars a very different arrangement prevails. In the first place there is little disparity between the extent of oceans and continents, and then, these are mixed up in a most complex manner. A traveller by either land or water could visit almost every quarter of the planet without leaving the element in which he began his journeying. If he chose to go by water he could journey for upward of 20,000 miles, always in sight of land, generally with land in view on both sides, in such intricate labyrinthine fashion as the lands and seas of Mars intertwined.—Boston Journal.

INTERESTING PLANETARY DISCOVERIES.

The planet Mars is the only object in the whole heavens which is known to exhibit features similar to those of our own earth, and the accumulated explorations and discoveries of astronomers during the last two hundred years have resulted in the construction of a globe representing the diversified features of this planet as astronomers believe them to exist. At a recent meeting of the Astronomical Society of England a globe of Mars was exhibited, on which lands and seas were depicted as upon an ordinary terrestrial globe. By far the larger part of these lands and seas were hitherto unknown entities, respecting which no more doubt is felt among astronomers than is felt by geographers concerning the oceans and continents of our globe. An interesting description of this globe appears in Fraser's Magazine. To the lands and seas depicted on the globe of Mars were applied the names of those astronomers whose researches have added to our knowledge on the subject. Each pole of Mars, it seems, is capped by ice, which varies in extent according to the progress of the seasons. Around each cap there is a polar sea, the northern sea being termed the Schroter Sea; the southern, Phillips Sea. The equatorial regions of Mars are mainly occupied by extensive continents, four in number, and named Daves Continent, Madler Continent, Secchi Continent, and Herschel (Sir W) Continent. Between Daves and Herschel Continents flows a sea shaped like an hour-glass, called Kaiser Sea, the large southern ocean out of which it flows being denominated Daves Ocean. Between Madler and Daves Continents flows Daves Strait, connecting a large southern ocean and a northern sea, named after the latter. Herschel Continent is separated from Secchi Continent by Higgins Inlet, flowing from a large southern sea, termed Nairn's Sea. In the like manner Bessel Inlet, flowing out of Airey Sea (a northern sea), separates the Madler and Secchi Continents. Daves Ocean separates into four large seas, and large tracts of land lie between them, but whether they are islands or not is uncertain.
