NEAR THE ROCKS.

While commenting some short time since on the situation of this country, we felt dited to like it to a ship that was fast drifting, if not to destruction...

We have been drifting for many a day helplessly towards those rocks of commercial and industrial trial now so high above the horizon...

The time when warning or appeal might have had its effect in mitigating the evils threatening the Argentine Republic has passed...

Our limited columns will not permit of our referring at the length we could wish to the accumulated dangers in our path.

We turn with pity, almost with a stronger feeling, from the spectacle of a national and able press, rendered silly by deep draughts of inane political discussion...

Yes, we are near the rocks, and the wind is rising: the commercial mercury, the rate of exchange, is quivering in the tube...

The Paysandu rebel force was encamped at the Arroyo Negro.

The loan effected by the Government with the merchants is at 1 1/2 per cent. a month; the sum of $200,000 is, however, wholly insufficient for the exigencies of the occasion.

Von der Weyde has taken some excellent photographs of the Bishop of Honoluh and Lord Hervey, which are on exhibition at Lastarria's.

The share holders of the Floating Baths project call on the Chairman, Dr. Fidal Lopez, to know what about their funds, and whether the Baths will be ready next summer.

Every morning we have news of the rebels cutting the telegraph wires, but so indefatigable is Mr. Oldham and his staff along the line that the wires are always mended in an hour.

WE TURN TO THE PEOPLE.

Taking the temporary suspension of our wool trade for granted, what resource is left to them? We believe that the export of hides and tallow...

For the poor man who can command none of these, there is not only hope but promise to be found in the necessity that will force him for very existence into that branch most open to all-agriculture.

This change in our system of raising wool is inevitable: it must be carried out if we are to sell wool at all.

But it is not in the camp alone that the coming time will work a change. We want it quite as badly in the city...

LATEST FROM MONTEVIDEO.

NO NEWS OF THE WAR.

LETTER-WRITING INSTEAD OF FIGHTING.

GENERAL BATTLE OFFERS AN ARRANGEMENT.

Friday. President Battle's letter to Bustamante has taken the town by surprise and caused a most uneasy and unfavorable opinion.

Headquarters, June 7, '08, 9 p.m. To Minister Bustamante. My esteemed friend, Caraballo has not moved from his position; he is encamped on the coast of the Pantanoso, three leagues from here.

To-day I found out his position and sent it to him by Francisco Fernandez, who has just returned, and tells me that Caraballo, after reading it, expressed himself most willing to come to an arrangement.

Don Juan Magariños brought word that General Caraballo could not come to any terms without first consulting the Gefes that he expected from the various departments.

You will be surprised to hear that among the leading men in his support he counts on Maximo Perez with a column of 1,400 men!

As I require a couple of days to organize the militia of this department, we must remain meantime in suspense, awaiting the wind-up of this singular revolution.

General Battle then rose, and with that fervid eloquence he so well knows how to employ, proposed the Allied Armies!

The stirring words of the ex-President, and the individual feelings of the company, caused this toast to be received with unbounded demonstrations of approval.

The next call on the attention of the company was made by a member of the Paraguayan Commission, whose name we were unable to ascertain.

The speaker alluded in a feeling manner to the woes of his country, and the injuries inflicted on her people by the fatal war rendered necessary through the mistaken ambition of her ruler.

The toast was most cordially received and drunk to.

After some time the host again rose, and in brief but forcible terms reminded the company of the sacrifices the Allies had made in the struggle against Lopez.

Dr. Gorostiaga, Minister of Finance, then proposed in eloquent terms 'the health of the host.'

Don Mariano Varela, Minister for Foreign Affairs, followed with a toast to 'the Alliance,' which being duly honored, Sr. Carvalho Borges rose, and in the happiest terms referred to the anniversary they had assembled to celebrate.

A letter from Fray Bentos of the 8th inst. confirms the news that Tolosa, with 200 men, has joined Maximo Perez.

The Paysandu rebel force was encamped at the Arroyo Negro.

THE RIACHUELO BANQUET.

The banquet given on Friday night by the Special-Envoy of Brazil to the President of this Republic was not exceeded, if equalled, in splendour by any of those incidental to the late visit of General Onorio to this city.

The Brazilian Legation, where the banquet took place, was profusely and tastefully decorated with flags and flowers.

Shortly before six o'clock p.m. H.E. the President of the Republic arrived, accompanied by his aides-de-camp, and then in quick succession carriage after carriage arrived and set down their occupants at the Legation.

The distinguished host led the way to the dining-room shortly after six o'clock, the brilliant company around the table including—H.E. President Sarmiento, Don Mariano Varela, Minister of Foreign Affairs; Dr. Avellaneda, Minister of Worship; Sr. Posadas, Postmaster-General; and the other members of the Cabinet.

When dinner had concluded, Sr. Paranhos rose, and in a speech remarkable for eloquent and elegant courtesy proposed the health of H.E. Don Faustino Sarmiento, President of the Argentine Republic.

The toast was received and drunk with the utmost enthusiasm.

H.E. the President replied briefly in felicitous terms, concluding by proposing the health of the Emperor of Brazil, and coupled the toast in a graceful manner with the name of their hospitable entertainer.

General Mitre then rose, and with that fervid eloquence he so well knows how to employ, proposed the Allied Armies!

The stirring words of the ex-President, and the individual feelings of the company, caused this toast to be received with unbounded demonstrations of approval.

THE BRIGAND OF LUJAN.

A MURDERER SHOT.

EXCITING SCENE.

Villa Lujan, June 11, '08.

We have received from a Lujan subscriber the following gratifying intelligence—

You will be delighted to know that the assassin Peñalva was shot on yesterday morning. He is the fellow who murdered the German about three years ago, and also a boy about sixteen years old, in the month of April last, at the station, without the slightest provocation.

On Wednesday he sent word to the justice of the peace that he would go to the Cabildo and beat himself and the police.

At six o'clock the same evening the juez got positive information that he was in his mother's house, which is a league and a half from the Villa.

The attention the River Plate is attracting in Europe is really extraordinary. All the papers are busy about this country.

Several of our subscribers complain of the deplorable state of the pavement in some of the principal streets in town.

Yesterday our museum was crowded. Some of the most distinguished subscribers called to inspect the huge tobacco plant we received from Entre Rios.

We understand that the National Government purposes erecting a new battery at some point overlooking the river.

Martin Garcia we hear is also to be set in order, and the fortifications strengthened and repaired.

The vote of Congress granting the full amount asked, £40,000, for the Cordoba Exhibition was received by the public with general satisfaction, though where the money is to come from, small as is the amount, is not quite so clear.

We were yesterday informed by a wealthy estanciero from the neighborhood of Moreno that the country in that direction never looked better.

The musical committee of the Philharmonic Society requests us to inform their members that the third rehearsal for the next concert will take place tomorrow, Monday night, at 7.30 p.m.

Lo Pont des Soupirs is announced for to-night at the French Theatre.

Colonel Orquera, the military fiscal of the National Government is now preparing to leave for the frontier.

Everyone in town now is speaking of speculation in bonds. It appears one or two outsiders (shopkeepers) have netted a small fortune in this most dangerous business.

Congress on Friday voted $230,000 in National Bonds to pay off some antiquated claims of Entre Rios.

We deplore the fact that on Friday another hole in the mole accident occurred. Mr. Morvonnais, the well-known saladerista of the Uruguay, fell in and was most miraculously saved by two sailors.

We were not wrong when we stated that one of the officials of the Southern Railway had won a good prize in the lottery.

We call the attention of our friends in the country districts to our having today received from the bookbinders the special edition of our Handbook, prepared for circulation in the camp.

We copy from one of our morning colleagues the following remarks on this new company:

This important institution is destined to give additional facilities to capitalists and the trading public in general, advancing money at a moderate rate of interest, but always on the basis of a real and realizable security.

Flow often do we see persons who have not credit in the banks obliged to pay one and a half and two per cent. a month for the necessary funds to extend their operations.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

To-day the attendance at the English Church will be unusually large. We understand that there are over 200 persons to be confirmed.

CREDITO MOBILIARIO CO.

We copy from one of our morning colleagues the following remarks on this new company:

This important institution is destined to give additional facilities to capitalists and the trading public in general, advancing money at a moderate rate of interest, but always on the basis of a real and realizable security.

Flow often do we see persons who have not credit in the banks obliged to pay one and a half and two per cent. a month for the necessary funds to extend their operations.

Sometimes a man is forced to call a trade action to meet his compromises.

The Credito Mobiliario will advance funds up to 60 or 90 per cent. of the real value...

The recovery of sums due will be regulated so as to suit both the company and its debtors.

The company devotes one-fourth of its capital to the above manner of advances, keeping the other three-fourths as a kind of reserve fund.

The multiplication of its capital by means of 'titulos' gives splendid profits. For instance if the company subscribes a million and call up only one-fourth, the 'titulos' for a million will also add to the realised capital of say $250,000.

In this manner similar companies have proved most lucrative in Europe. There are few places where so much capital lies dead as in Buenos Ayres, and hence the peculiar advantages of an enterprise like the R. Plata Credito Mobiliario Company.

THE NEW BOLSA. Buenos Ayres, June 11, 1869. To the Editors of the "Standard." Gentlemen:

Permit me, through the medium of your influential journal, to suggest to Mr. Rom an addition to his admirable scheme, in reference to the proposed new Exchange in the Plaza 25 de Mayo.

It is to combine with it the building of a suitable post office and telegraph offices, for which the site in question could not be more eligible, and is extensive enough for all three purposes.

The advantages of an arrangement of this kind are so obvious that it would be an insult to his well-known intelligence were I to waste time and your space in dwelling upon them, but I may cursorily mention:

The central position, indispensable for a postal institution. The proximity of the place of landing and embarkation, so convenient for the prompt receipt and despatch of mails.

South America) are not flourishing but in a state of bankruptcy; and this applies to the French as well as the Swiss.

This applies to the Argentine Confederation as well as the Banda Oriental, and I am sure I shall be borne out by all settlers (not recent) that an English colony is much to be preferred.

With respect to the province of Santa Fé, where, on the railway from Rosario to Cordoba, and at about Frayle Muerto, a number of young Englishmen are settled, having bought land at from £100 to £200 to the square league, what has resulted?

Why—and not so very long since either—three poor Englishmen were killed in their house (the houses are obliged to be built fortress-like) by Indians, and all the cattle in the neighborhood were driven off, the owners only escaping with their lives by hard riding, until not a soul was left in Frayle Muerto or for leagues around.

This is another feature, apart from internal revolutions, when your horses are articles of war, yourself left alone, perhaps (servants having fled,) subject to insults, and in danger of losing your life if the best of your provisions are not placed before the rabble Gancheo soldiery. I could mention cases where English women have been violated and carried off into captivity; in only the last inroad made, some 45 to 50 persons were taken.

Of what use is cheap land, even if you know the language? Cartage and freight to market costs as much almost as it is worth. It is true wheat is cheap, mutton being pretty good, although beef will never prove an article of export for the European markets, being so inferior; every other article is very dear, and clothing exorbitantly so.

I contend, then, with all deference to your correspondents (not one of whom I know or have ever seen,) that it is not a good place for an English emigrant.

Have I said enough to caution your readers? Have we not examples in those before us? The Welsh colony of 150 persons in the South, unable to keep themselves, would have been starved to death but for us in Buenos Ayres, their fellow-countrymen, supporting them, with the aid of Government, for over two years.

Then, again, the colony of Californian emigrants in Santa Fé, who are now accustomed to a hard life in America, buying land at £50 the league, the very finest in the province—they did not succeed. And, as in Frayle Muerto, all those who were able—excepting, of course, the actual owners of land—have left.

Above all, I would say, beware of land or halves of profit—the improving of land not your own. Should any want land, let them get it of their own. The Montevideo Government will give small farms of fifty to sixty acres to all settlers in Rosario Colony who build themselves a sod or mud house, on conditions of their paying cost of transfer, 1 dollar, equal to 4s 2d, for making out the title deeds.

far in the interior, and consequently are debarred at present from turning the same to good account. I also allow that the Indians have from time to time committed some of the ravages spoken of by 'An Old Scotchman,' and I therefore think it advisable that the settlers should keep well together.

At the same time, I am sure your correspondent will allow that half-a-dozen Englishmen well armed would defy any number of Indians almost, and that the latter, finding no horses or cattle worth speaking of to drive away, would very likely never trouble them at all. I look at it in the battle of life. We must all risk something; the soldier, the sailor, the engine driver, and the miner all risk their lives to a certain extent, and so must those who go to the River Plate for a livelihood.

If a man is afraid to do so, he had better stay at home. As for 'young men who take to drinking and other vices, and so disgrace their countrymen in Buenos Ayres,' all I can say is, this, that if any country can be found where such persons will not carry on these disgraceful practices, by all means let them go there, as they do much more harm than good at the River Plate. I still think that country, on the whole, the best place to settle in; and as a proof of this I may mention that I have taken a farm of 1500 acres near Frayle Muerto, 1000 acres of which have been already ploughed up nearly two years, upon which I intend sowing wheat, flax, and maize this season. Should my life be spared so long [of which, so far as Indians are concerned, I have very little fear], I will let you know the result before nine months are over.
