We have a letter from Mr. Coghlan respecting City Improvements, which we must hold over till Tuesday.

DARING OUTRAGE
Asuncion del Paraguay, Sept. 23rd, 1869
To the Editors of the 'Standard'

On Monday the 20th, September the Argentine steamer 'Guadua Nacional' came alongside my ship the 'Johannes Kier' at 6 p.m. and damaged my bulwarks, the Captain wanting coal, but had no order from my charterers, Marciano Molina & Co.

BRIDGES
In a late number of the 'Standard,' I read a correspondence from one of the northern districts deploring the want of bridges in the country, and appealing to President Sarmiento to remedy that evil.

Our friend Don S. Estrada has presented to the National Library of Santiago a most valuable collection of books, numbering one hundred and sixty-nine volumes, bearing on the history, laws and resources of the Argentine Republic.

The Government of Sr. Castro has just laid before the Provincial Chambers two bills of vital importance for the future welfare of the Province.

A curious accident is said to have occurred during the thunder-storm on Tuesday evening. A fine Newfoundland dog was killed near the Socorro Church by a flash of lightning.

Great Britain something less than 11... which we have had amongst us for some months...

which we have had amongst us for some months, has taken his departure for Gualeguay, probably having found Fray Bentos too healthy a place for his profession.

As a specimen is a part of Christian... allow me after a number of years to re-appear again.

Business is improving slightly, but Fray Bentos will never be of any importance until it is separated from Paysandu, and it does seem a shame that a rising town of such position and shipping should be completely governed by the above mentioned place.

With two friends I went to the ground where the race was to come off, and really it is a mile distant from the town...

Office of the Colonia Submarine Railway, Colonia, October 7th, 1869. Messrs. Mullall, Standard Office.
