WAR IN EUROPE.

London, Jan. 6, 1871. Since the 29th ult. no important mi itary events have occurred except the successful attack of the Germans on the batteries at Mont Avron and a second and as far as we yet know indecisive battle between Generals Manteuffel and Faideherbe near Arras.-The result of the attack on Mont Av-

advance of the fort of Hosny. The latter are outnumbered three to one; last named General as either the first he was golding away as fast as possi- these clauses. I know a person who Germans followed up their success by and on the other hand that from this to attacked. Against ble, on the southern road. But in thinks himself a fitter party to govern a vigorous bombardment of the forts of moment France has commenced her the probability of Werder acting in fact, we know very little with certain- the Republic than its actual Presi-Rosny, Noisy and Nogent, all situated onward march upon Germany, and conjunction with Prince Frederick is ty of his movements. He twists and dent, and whose title deeds of a large just in the rear of the loop line of she will assuredly reach her destina- the fact that the French, 40,000 strong, turns, and comes again. He has sent estate, lately purchased, bear the 'rerailway which connects the main line tion! to Strasburg with Vincennes. The Germans unmasked their batteries on the north east of Paris on the 28th ult. and on the 30th the Saxons were in possession of Mont Avron, which had already been abandoned some hours by the French National Guards, whose the position was so weak as to augur badly for the future. During the night the Saxon guns enfiladed the French, who allowed themselves to be surprised; an excuse so often repeated on the French side during the war that one is afraid it does not arise from a courageous recklessness but from the apathy of a vain and uneducated people, who have still to learn that war is a business as well as an excitement. General Roy, who lately gained discipline is evidently not yet equal to some advantages over the Germans in the neighborhood of Havre, has just the loss of 500 prisoners, 2 guns and 3

The bombardment of the forts to the N.E. and to the south of Paris is still in progress without any marked effect that we yet know; but before I close this letter something will transpire in regard to the resistance of the forts to enable us to foresee the fate of the French capital.

Up to this moment the bulk of the intelligence received within the last long continuance of its defence. The Times has almost predicted the immediate fall of Paris from starvation; and its information may be correct, but it through the Rothschild's, whose valuable carriage horses have, with the last elephant in the Jardin des Plantes, been sacrificed by the Parisian butchers. From all one can gather from the conflicting accounts it seems that the period of comparative comfort in the city is at least at an end, and that the neously with the talked of scarcity comes the commencement of the bombardment of the forts by the besiegers, whose siege artillery is at last in posi-

In the meantime the relieving armies are as distant as ever. But they are not in the same state of disorganization and imperfect equipment. General Chanzy has well supplied himself from the western seaports with field artillery of a power equal, it is now once more on the move towards Paris, and has already made himself felt in skirmishing near Vendome, in which some advanced posts of the Duke of Mecklenburg were worsted. On the success of Chanzy it is pre sumed the movements of Bourbaki in the south of Paris will depend; as his fondo al Oeste; el edificio se compone de seis piezas de azotoa y baldosa, cinco de las piezas con piso de tabla, cocina, poso de balde y demas that General has evacuated Dijou, and is evidently feeling his way towards

From Lyons 100,000 men are said to be in march towards Dijon, which may account for the concentration of the German forces in the region of the Vosges. A general concentration within a certain area around the capital seems to be the present tactics of the Germans, and on all sides they are now certainly on the defensive. In the last battle in the North it was General Faideberbe who on the 2nd inst. advanced from Arras towards Bapaume, where the most serious engagement since the battle at Orleans took place on the 3rd inst. On the previous day there was hard fighting between two divisions of the French and the Prus-
