

man Resuie O.B. is a gentleman of sound practical knowledge. The Provincial Government guarantees 5 per centum on the capital, not exceeding a fixed sum, expended in the construction, but it is not likely that the guarantee will have to be made effective, unless for the payment of interest during the making of the road, as, once in operation, a line constructed at so little cost, its gauge being the narrow one of 3 feet 6 inches, through a rich district already abounding with traffic, and whose population is augmenting rapidly under German immigration, must yield ample dividends and prove a lucrative speculation for the shareholders. The new shares reserved for Brazil can be had by application to Messrs. Manó & Co."

ITEMS FROM GERMAN PAPERS.

A rapid glance at the summary of events which crowded upon one another in the last Franco-German war will give us a faint idea of the extraordinary exertions of both belligerents, during the terrible struggle which resulted in the final success of the German allies, now members of a powerful German empire, which in its present form is completely new to history.

The war was declared from Paris on 19th July 1870, and terminated on the 16th February 1871, after the retreat of Bonaparte's army into Switzerland. It lasted therefore 210 days, of which 30 have to be deducted for the time occupied by the mobilisation and forwarding to the frontiers of the German armies, and that taken up by the negotiations conducted in Versailles, which led to the settlement of the preliminaries of the peace. During the remaining 180 days the Germans had to fight 17 great battles and 150 encounters of more or less importance, made prisoners to the extent of 1,650 officers and 363,000 men, and took 26 fortresses, 6700 pieces of ordnance and 120 eagles and flags. For every day therefore an action was fought, for every nine days a great battle took place, and every sixth day a fortress fell into the hands of the besiegers. For every day during the war the number of prisoners made amounted to 65 officers and 2070 men, with an accompanying of 38 guns. No war is on record in the annals of history which can at all be compared to this one, and it we remember the masterly manner, in which it was conducted and carried out by the Germans, we can hardly be surprised by the extent of the losses of their spirited but badly prepared opponents.

A corollary to the numbers just mentioned is the indemnity of 5,000 millions of francs agreed to be paid by the French to the victors. To form an estimate of this sum let us take a glance at the greatest values that administrators of finance have to deal with. The following is a list of the budgets of some of the principal countries of the world for the year 1870, in round numbers—

France	2,160,000,000
United States	2,119,000,000
Russia	1,942,000,000
Great Britain and Ireland	1,777,000,000
China	1,612,000,000
British India	1,282,000,000
Austria and Hungary	1,210,000,000
Italy	982,000,000
Japan	900,000,000
Prussia, 1871	650,000,000
N. German Confederation	29,000,000

Of all these States only the three first approach 2,000 millions, five lie between 1,000 and 2,000, and only the budgets of Russia, Great Britain and Ireland, and Austria and Hungary together amount to almost 5,000 millions of francs. Countries which require 3,000 millions for their annual expenditure do not exist at all.

The debt of Prussia is covered by 1,500 millions; Turkey could redeem hers by something like 2,000 millions. The debt of Spain amounts to 5,650 millions, of Italy to 7,300 millions, Austria to 8,850 millions, Russia to 10,000 millions, United States and France each to 14,100 millions, Great Britain and Ireland to 20,200 millions. The real magnitude of the sum of 5,000 millions of francs, however, becomes most visible when we consider the amount of hard cash available in the most important financial centres. The sums which figure in budgets are composed of many small payments, which are balanced by a continuous current of outgoing expenses. In the cases of budgets and public debt the sum of a thousand millions of francs may be considered as an imaginary unit to facilitate calculation, but the case becomes different when 1,000 millions have to be paid cash down. Then we do well to consider that on the 28th February, 1871, the Bank of Prussia had in its possession not quite 500 millions of francs worth of coin and bullion. On the 24th of February, 1871, the Bank of England had only 560 millions. The Bank of France had in its coffers on 30th June, 1870, about 1,207 millions. In all the banks of Europe together, towards the end of November, there existed not more than 3,400 millions of francs in the aggregate.

The circulation of specie in Germany at the end of 1871 in all kinds of coin did not exceed 2,500 millions francs. In Great Britain from 1821-1868 there have been coined £199,680,033, which amount to about 5,000 millions of francs; but the coin in actual circulation in Great Britain is calculated by competent authority at about £23 per head, which comes to about 2,000 millions of francs. In France the mint has produced from 1825 to 1867 19,405,290,526, and its actual circulation amounts to about £4 5s per head, or about 4,000 millions; there exists, therefore, at the present moment in France not money enough to pay the whole of the 5,000 millions due to Germany.

CLEANSING THE RIACHUELO.

The following important note on the best means of dealing with the Riachuelo was received by the last mail. Dr. Frankland is a very high authority on such subjects, and his remarks will be read with great interest by all in Buenos Ayres.—

Sir,

In accordance with your request I have given my consideration to the condition of the Riachuelo, and to the best means of remedying the evils of which it is the cause, and I have to inform you—

1st. That the saladeros should in future be strictly prohibited from throwing into the river blood or any other offensive liquid matter. Such materials make excellent manure, and should be used for that purpose.

2nd. That while the temperature of the air and water is above 50, the use of the dredge would only augment the evil effects arising from the injurious exhalations from the river.

3rd. That in order to diminish and perhaps entirely prevent the putrid exhalations arising from the river, the best material to employ is quick-lime, which should be applied immediately in the following manner:—In the highest point of the river to which the offensive matter at the bottom reaches ten tons of quick-lime freshly turned should be thrown into the water, so as to form a belt across the bed of the river.

4th. That while the temperature of the water continues above 55, one to three tons should be thrown daily into the same spot in the river.

5th. That if a covering of sand or gravel an inch or two in thickness be applied to the bed of the river in the most offensive parts, the beneficial action of the quick-lime would be much assisted; but if the slime at the bottom should be so soft as to allow the sand or gravel to sink in it, the measure would be productive of no advantages.

6th. That the only means by which a permanent improvement in the river can be effected in a moderate time is the use of dredges, which can be employed with security when the thermometer falls below 50.

7th. That the lime obtained from the limestone, of which you have lately sent me a specimen marked H (1), would be adequate for the object in question, and that marked 3 (2) could be also made use of; but 2 cwt of the latter would have to be employed to produce an effect equal to one ton of the former as a deodoriser.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

E. FRANKLAND.

Note.—Dr. Frankland has evidently written this report under the impression that there was a constant current and that the good effects of the quick-lime placed in a high point of that part of the river which requires purifying, would be carried downwards by the natural current, as the quantity of water which comes from above is little or nothing in dry weather, and as the current varies with the tide, the lime should be placed in various points of the river, so as to insure its spreading over the whole extent of the bottom.

THE CONVENTILLOS.

To the Editors of the STANDARD.

Gentlemen,

Allow me to contradict the few words you wrote in yesterday's edition. I cannot say where you got your report from, but the fact of the case is, I have not been entrusted especially or personally with any such charge. It is true, I have visited, as in duty bound, all the so called "conventillos" in the parish, but the person who superintended more immediately these domiciliary visits was Mr. Carrega, who, let it be said, behaved on this and other occasions of the plague with a courage and humanity to plague with none other in Buenos Ayres.

I write this not for contradiction sake, but simply to eschew praise to which I have no right.

Yours truly,

D. LEWIS.

RELIEF FROM MONTEVIDEO.

The following letter has been addressed by Mr. Parish, British Consul here, to Major Munro, H.M. Consul General at Montevideo:

British Consulate,

Buenos Aires, May 6th 1871.

Sir,

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch dated 13th of last month accompanied by a draft on the bank of Messrs Wanklyn and Co, for the sum of five hundred and forty patacons, equivalent to $603.80 mlv. currency, being the amount contributed and handed over to you by British residents in Montevideo, for the relief of their unfortunate fellow countrymen in Buenos Ayres who might be suffering from the effects of the ruling epidemic.

While acknowledging publicly this generous donation I beg you will convey to the contributors my personal appreciation of this kind expression of their sympathy which while it will tend to alleviate the sufferings of many, affords a gratifying proof of the bond of union which exists among British subjects in all parts of the River Plate.

I have the honour &c.,

F. PARISH.

Major Munro, &c. Montevideo.

The effects of yesterday are still apparent; business although resumed by law, still suffers from the shock, and it will take some time before things right themselves thoroughly. The banks have played their part well, although their position was more critical than that of the merchants, since they were called upon to pay to everyone, and still collect from none, an anomaly in the history of commerce. The protesting of bills still continues, but virtually amounts to little owing to the Provincial Bank notice to the effect that the bank would renew all bills that were protested in these days, thus the black mark which usually attaches to any signature protested, is under present circumstances of no significance. Bills were protested on Tuesday night, payment for which was sent to the bank, but owing to the immense press of business could not be received by the bank; others lost three hours waiting to pay a bill; in fact, such was the crowd, that if the bank had doubled the number of clerks, it would still have been unable to get through the business. To-day business of this character continued as brisk as ever, except, however, at the Provincial Bank, where there was no crush at any of the banks. Collections, of course, at present are almost out of the question; the collection even of rents is difficult, and in many cases landlords will have to give their tenants several months time.

A meeting of Directors of the Popular Argentina Insurance Company was held to-day, and after the transaction of some business, was adjourned till Saturday. The business of this company has, of course, been much interfered with by the epidemic and 'fever,' but the first drawings for this year will nevertheless take place on the 30th June. As yet it is impossible to state the amount of the prize as the accounts have to be closed, but it is probable that the chief prize will be eight or ten thousand patacons, as notwithstanding the loss of time caused by the 'fever,' the affairs of the company are in the most flourishing condition.

Messrs. Planter Abren and Co. have obtained from the Legislature of Paraguay a concession for the establishment of a bank of emission and deposits in Asuncion. The bank will be called the 'Banco Comercial,' and will have an agency in this city.

The banking firm of G. Stamp and Co. in Montevideo has gone into liquidation, and in its stead a new joint stock bank called the 'Banco Franco-Platense' has been formed.

The mails from Montevideo were received yesterday, very little is doing there at present in specie, owing to the belief that soon large specie remittances will be received from Buenos Ayres. Exchange for the Doune is quoted at 54d. On England 56; 00 passed and rate firm. On France nothing doing. On Antwerp 300,000 francs passed at 6-60, 6-65 good. Most of the Montevidean houses now that the epidemic is subsiding in Buenos Ayres have sent up all the cargoes afloat in the harbour of Montevideo, in consequence of this commodities are beginning to show some improvement. ## BANK MAUA AND Co.

BUENOS AYRES.

The immense advantages of Accounts Current, now so generally left and appreciated in the two great emporiums of the River Plate, Montevideo and Buenos Ayres, that there are very few Merchants who fail to keep one at the bank in which they place the most confidence.

The Bank of Maua & Co. in Montevideo has already provided for the working classes in that city a safe and profitable depositary for their savings.

The sums deposited in that very important institution are daily increasing, and already reach a very large amount.

These advantages have not hitherto been enjoyed in this city by an immense number of clerks, artisans, working men, and servants of all classes and conditions, who are equally interested in putting their savings out at interest, thus providing themselves with a reserve fund in case of need, sickness, or old age, instead of spending them in the immoral gambling, in lotteries, and other frivolities.

The Bank of Maua & Co. of this city, following the noble example of their firm in Montevideo, now offer the same facilities in this city, and are
