PRINCE NAPOLEON ON THE CRISIS.

The following is a translation of a letter which has been addressed by Prince Napoleon to M. Jules Favre, on the present situation of affairs in France:— Peace, is signed with the conqueror, Paris the grand capital is in flames, its finest and most venerable structures are reduced to ashes, blood flows in streams, your work is complete!

The deep sorrow which weighs down each French heart must not be allowed to obscure that reason which has the right to require of you a strict reckoning for the accumulated disasters you have caused.

The 4th September the armistice discussed at Ferrières, the defence of Paris, the preliminaries of Versailles, the 18th of March, the peace of Frankfurt, the burning of Paris—behold your mournful dates! History will call you 'l'homme fatal.'

The war 'fausteste' commenced the 19th July, 1870, by the Empire, it terminated the 10th of this May, by the Government without name to which you belong.

The 4th September you propose 'la déchéance,' the riot guided by you drives away your colleagues, you break your oath, against universal suffrage you proceed to usurp power at the Hotel de Ville.

The Empire had committed great faults, our defeats were great, but our disasters date from you. Let each bear his part. Without doubt it was a grievous error to count too much upon the forces of France, and to commit in 1870 the fault which Prussia committed in 1806; to look too much to our victories under the great Republic and the First Empire; to think too little of the powerful enemy we had to combat.

You have known better than any one the conditions which Napoleon III. could have obtained from Prussia at Sedan. Undoubtedly they were hard, but incomparably better than those accepted by you.

The faults belong to the Empire, the disasters to you; and I ask myself if, amidst the faults of the Empire, its greatest has not been to have tolerated within itself your criminal attempts.

The inevitable consequence of your usurpation is the Revolution of March 18, which you accuse to-day, and the burning of Paris, for which you are responsible.

To defend Paris, you limited yourselves to proclaiming imaginary successes. You have not utilised the terrible but vigorous elements which you had utilised, and which have held the soldiers of France in check for two months, and yet these were the same men, maddened since by demagogic frenzy, and with whom you might have aroused a patriotic fervour.

pronounce these those dangerous words which ought never to have been uttered by a statesman: 'Not a stone of our fortresses, not one inch of our territory.' Your conscience ought to feel the burden of this.

At Versailles the conqueror proposed the disarmament of the National Guard or that of the army, and you chose that of the soldiers, because you feared the Bonapartist elements in the ranks; while the elements of disorder in an irritated crowd—discontented with itself, badly directed, humiliated, and in serable—elements which might have been expected to culminate in the terrible explosion of the Commune, did not even preoccupy you one moment.

You sell France to the negotiating enemy in exchange for your personal Republic. Why did you give way? I will tell you. It was because the Foreign Minister made you comprehend the possibility of reassembling the old legislative body; then you signed anything!

Let us continue. Your ineapable conduct has brought on the triumph of the Commune at Paris, and on the part of the Germans demands which increased every day. The negotiations languished at Brussels—nothing was concluded. You go to Frankfurt. What do you do there? You sign there an aggravation of the preliminaries of peace.
