the rate of interest. Bismarck is charged as the cause of the present dearth of money in England, but let it be known to the people of Buenos Ayres...

diver Plate Railways to-day amounts to over three millions sterling, and at the rate we are going on there will soon be a million sterling sunk in tramways alone in this city.

"This last straw that breaks the camel's back." All this immense flow of foreign capital to the Plate came to us in the ordinary channels of trade, commerce, and enterprise...

It is really astonishing the vast amount of British capital, one way or other, employed in the Plate. The Argentine Republic is a South American country worked on English capital...

A matter so interesting to the general public deserves to be discussed, and the subjoined leader from a London colleague will probably be read with as much interest in Buenos Aires as in London...

"Once upon a time 5 per cent was considered to represent a fair mean for the value of money, and even still it is to the great body of Englishmen the typical rate for a profitable and at the same time reasonably sound investment."

Well, after certain uneasy and perturbed throes, the Money Market has at last reached that point, and a citizen tells us we are on the brink of a crisis. On Saturday the Bank of England rate of interest was suddenly raised to 5 per cent.

THE SECRETARY. The withdrawal of money which was deposited in England at the commencement of the Franco-German war, and of which we had the temporary use...

or to part with it under the temptation of a high premium. That is the point to which raising the official charge for discount brings us. "There is no question that, explain it how we will, the situation must still appear complicated and perplexing."

"Now we come to the main cause—the payment of the great money indemnity by the French to the Germans. That transaction affected us in two ways: we subscribed freely to be eighty millions loan and are now making good our engagements; and, yet further, our capitalists virtually lent a large sum to France by passing their names as guarantors to a certain amount."

THE ROSARIO RAILWAY. We are informed that the most advantageous proposal set in for the construction of the railway to Rosario is that of Messrs. Torres and Keen.

Other advantages of this scheme are that the Government will be paid for all the public land required, and a workshop school for orphans be created. The Municipal Treasury will be freed from the charge of supporting the Invalids, for which a Fund will be set aside.

LONDON LETTER. Oct. 8, 1871. The withdrawals from the Bank this week amounted to £280,000, of which £230,000 was taken yesterday for B. Ayres.

The Germans are doing more wisely than hoarding their gold; they are reforming their currency, and in the right direction, namely, towards a decimal and an international system. They have adopted like ourselves a gold standard.
