Even the Baradero murder.

What are they compared to the cold blooded butchery of fourteen of our fellow beings, by a gang of villains who, owing to the criminal carelessness of the authorities, have been allowed to escape from prison, and are again loose upon society?

First are two Sewing-machines called "the little stranger" by Silver & Co. of London; then 3 other "silent" ones by Messrs. Thompson & Co.

At the extreme South end are brads and iron bedsteads, 4 handsome eight-day clocks by Cartwright of London, 3 models of steamboats of light draught for rivers, 2 patent filters &c.

At the southern entrance is a glass case containing saddles and breech-loading rifles of the newest English patent, also candelabra and other like articles.

Facing a fountain is a table, whereon are shewn 30 splendid pairs of epaulets, gold and silver lace, for officers of various grades.

Going north we meet 4 Norwegian cooking-stoves with all appliances, including a patent refrigerator for ice; fire-proof safes, portable boilers, saws, saddles, illustrated books, garden tables, wheelbarrows, washing-machines, knife-cleaners, harness &c.

This part of the English court concludes with Tennent's beer, Blood Wolfe's porter, Meston's gin, Martell's brandy and a preparation called "solid wort" for making beer or porter instantaneously.

The most important section, however, belonging to England is that of the machinery. The basement of the Exhibition Palace is lined with compact rows of English and American ploughs—a very army to open up the soil of a young country like ours and raise fields of waving corn.

There are 34 English agricultural machines, some wood, some iron, moved by one, two or three wheels, viz. A Norfolk sower, with 13 blades, drawn by 2 horses.

A cultivator with a wheel and 5 teeth.

A wheel of indented discs.

2 patent sowers.

2 automata mowers, 28 blades.

2 harrows with 5 sets of teeth.

2 corn-shellers.

In the pavilion set apart for machinery in the Park, we find the following:

A steam-engine, 8 horse-power, for threshing wheat.

Another for winnowing grain.

Another for threshing, 4 horse-power.

Another for same, 2 horse.

A 3-horse locomotive; another 2-horse.

3 machines for reaping and mowing.

4 patent winnowers.

2 mowing machines.

3 patent reapers, and a winnower.

A powerful automaton do.

A 12 horse locomotive.

Another 8 horse, burning 40 lbs. coal per hour.

immediate measures, and if the keeper of the Tandil prison can be tried by court-martial, by all means let us make an example of him; it may have a salutary effect on other prison-keepers.

ENGLAND AT THE CORDOBA EXHIBITION.

The official report of Dr. Ojeda, published on Dec. 31st. at Cordoba, contains the following on the section of "England".

The south part of the nave is set apart for England, and here we find the various articles, grouped in admirable taste and order, as becomes a nation of shopkeepers who send their goods to the uttermost ends of the earth, who have long been the first commercial and maritime power of the age, and whose industrial pre-eminence is due to so many centuries of peace and internal progress.

In the main building we find— 4 Howard ploughs. Featherston Griffith's railway model. Looking at these objects of machinery we are impressed with the immense utility which they promise this country where our untrodden Pampas only wait European industry. Our undeveloped resources are immense, so will our public riches be when we become a producing nation.

DEATH OF DR. FITZSIMON.

The close of the year that is now past took with it one of the ripest scholars and most genial friends that it could be the lot of anyone to meet with.

It is now about ten years since Dr. Fitzsimon, accompanied by Professor Power, a graduate of Dublin University, came to this country, with the purpose of opening a first-class school.
