ALCERTAIN AND EFFECTUAL
REMEDY For Fever and Ague, Intermittent and Remittent Fevers, &c.

This class of diseases, so common in all parts of the world, and especially prevalent in maluious districts and vicinage of water courses are almost invariably accompanied by more or less derangement of the liver, and frequently by a defective action of the digestive organs.

The mere breaking of the Chill is but a step towards completing a radical cure. The various organs of the body, especially the stomach and liver, must be brought to a healthy and vigorous condition before a permanent cure can be established, and this fact has been specially kept in view by Dr. Jayrae in his treatment of these complaints. The use of Jayne's Ague Mixture, in conjunction with the Sanative Pills, as prescribed in the directions which accompany each bottle, will not only bottle, will not only

THE CARNIVAL OF LIFE AND DEATH.

I had a vision when the night was still.

And all the slumbering world lay wrapt peace.
Methought I sailed away o'er sunlit seas.
Upon whose restless bosom the blue heavens seemed breathing benediction. The still air Exhaled a balmy odor, and there egue,

From far-off isles, a murmur musical, Tuned to the waves and beating with their pulse.
And last, 1 dreamed, appeared above the surge
A land embowered in fragrant summer-blooms
That wooed the liquid air and shed around
A sense of calm delight, making my heart to call with its. Above the winding shore

A sense of cann dengar, making my heart O'er fill with joy. Above the winding shore There rose a gleaming city, crowned with towers
And domes of stately temples, while o'erhead

And domes of stately temples, while o erneat There seemed to float a golden atmosphere, With such a pure, etherial splendor filled; It seemed that only angels should enjoy. A clime so beautiful. Yet as I gazed Upon this kind luxuriance of nature, There came to me a solemn undertrone Of some vast woe; for there was neither soun Nor sign of human-life, but over all There rested a mysterious gloom, (as when Some sad presentiment of mysery). There rested a mysterious gloom, (as when Some sad presentiment of mysery Preys on the soul, and will not left it smile.) And when the morn broke from the tinted east I rose and sought that silent capital, Wherein no care should bide; but as I strolled From street to street, such horrors met my 222.

That I did half awake—within myself, That I did half awake—within myself, Low memoring: 'tis surely but a dream. Yet no; the horror was no famey caught From the dim realm of midnight mystery For, as I wandered on, I saw the shapes Of ghastly death—for insthat but now had beer shrines of sweetest hopes; while youth

and age
Were mingled in one miserable fate. Were mingled in one miserable fate. Here lay the mother, with her darling child Secking the pulseless breast; here slept the boy That was his country's idol; here again, Where scarce'a footfall stirred the narrow way, I saw the livid lines of agony On faces that had smiled on happier homes;—The azure—skies of Ita y, the vales of France, England's—fair groves and many a threasured section.

That hailed life's dawn; there, lying low, I marked, with tears, those hapless wanderers: Young maidens on whose checks the bloom of meanth Was once a parent's joy : old men, whose year

Too sacred seemed to reap so sad a doom; Wives that had gearned and only lived to

Now torn from the dear boson; stalwart men, Upon whose brows lingered the shades of death,
As loth to darken such nobility:
All gathered here to deck the Carrival
On fiery Desolation! Far and wide,
As if Earth's sons were called by some decad weath

As if Earth's sons were conturies, wrath. To explate the sins of centuries, Brooded a dark despair. The songs of birds, That yesterday were full of tender joy, Now, hushed or quivering tremulous and lo Betold too well the runversal grief; And even the fairest blossoms of the year Seemed but a flaunting mockery.

Sick with pain,

And even the fairest mossums of the Seemed but a flaenting mockery.

Sick with pain,
And tortured with a doubt unfathomable
And secret, subtle questionings of truth,
I, turning, saw, above the city's gloom,
A phentom wild and strange, that cried aloud:
Behold the spirit of a nameless plague!
Dread Retribution is my messenger;
I call the happy children from their play;
I cause the world to mourn, and I rejoice.
No heart can move, no tears subdue my will—
For I obey a higher, holier law
Than mortals e'er conceived; yet underneath
The suffering, that, by my destiny,
I bear to men, there flows a secret stream of natural good—a purpose whose decrees,
By finite creatures misinterpreted,
Are tember as the Love from which they spring."

• As thoughts, like vapors, quickly vanish, ere They have been garnered in by memory, So passed the sombre vision, and I saw That capital again; but all was changed. For now, amid the crowded thoroughfares

There througed a reatiess people, mad with joy—As if the setting sun no more would shine I pon Earth's revels. Ringing for I heard The music and the shouts of heedless youth, Along the way where, but an hour ago, The plannes of death unbared each reverent had

Now, underneath 'pavillioned balconies
And flower-laden arches, moved a mass
Of various hues and costumes strange and rare;
A page antity of every race and clime,
With merry maskers joining in the sport,
And troops of youths with favors garlanded,
Thrown by fair hands above. The air was filled

Thrown by fair handsabove. The air was filled With sound of cymbals; everywhere a joy Pervaded tre glad scene, and the pure ether Resonnded with the songs of revelry; While rich and poor, commingled in one aim—Proud, charioted beauty, with an ear too line To catch the beggar's mount; strong laborers, The nation's sinews), and the lowlier birth, Spring from the haunts of pennity and shame, Pascel side by side in that equality. Which makes a peissant happy as a king. No thought was there of pain, nor the dread woe That once had made that scene a sepulchre, But all was mirth and boundless cestasy. I backed with eager eyes to find some trace. I backed with eager eyes to find some trace Of that supreme distress, which they may dreat legan to float in darkling recollection; But the wild music of the multitude

Betrayed my senses, and I strove in vain Retrayed my senses, and an agony
To read this meaning of an agony
So soon forgot! nay buried in these smiles.
'Is it,' I asked, 'that mankind is composed
Of elements so opposite that we to-day
Weep for the vanished loved ones, and to-mo

Is then the soul, That image of perfection, grown so weak and That even remembrance of its high employ That even rememorance Excites no thought of sorrow? Here, half waking Here, half wakin The phantom of my carlier vision came, But not alone; for hand in hand with him, Appeared another brightlier clothed, and yet Wenning a fourful smile, who will to make Wearing a tearful smile, who said to me:— We are twin brothers, born to share a fate We are twin brothers, born to share a fate Which, seeming merciless, is merciful. As three a vale sunlight and shadow play, Still tending to a harmony which nature Designs and cherishes, so were the hearts of men Do move to tears and laughter, and with joyand

The telegram from Montevideo is as follows:—
Wednesday 3 p. m. A meeting of officers and chiefs was held last evening at the Cabildo to protest against the peace and uppoint a deputation which should wait on Pres. Battle, demand his resignation, and insist on the dismissal of Lamas and Herrera. On receiving the deputation the President said he would not resign power a single hour before his time was up, but he consented to dismiss Lamas, and said he would not dismiss Herrera unless they proved him a traitor. To this the deputation said they would bring the proofs in the morning. This morning Herrera refused to sign the decree against Lama-, which was they force signed by Torrilla. Then Herrera resigned whereupon Battle accepted his resignation, which caused much sensation. Jose Pedro Ramirez of the Siglo was named to succeed Lamas, and accepted the post. Let the reader remember that the first column represents business done by 31,000,000 people under the lowest of all our tariffs, the latter column, business done by 38,000,000 people under the highest of our tariffs, and he can perceive how the highest of our tariffs, and he can perceive how the highest of our tariffs, and he can perceive how the highest of our tariffs, and he can perceive how the highest of our tariffs, and he can perceive how the highest of our tariffs, and he can perceive how the highest of our tariffs, and he can perceive how our system of taxation 'has not embarrassed the business of the country.' How it has 'not been oppressive to individuals,' may be seen in the fact that our 40,000,000 consume far less 'percapita' and but little more in aggregate than the 'd,000,000 of a former decade consumed, of cotton cloth, of sugar, and of coffee. Our prosperity is unexampled, says Mr. Boutwell, but the mercantle aggencies report the business failures for 1870. unexampled, says Mr. Boutwell, but the metalest itle agencies report the business failures for 1870 as 25 per cent, in excess of the previous year, and the forthcoming circulars a month hence will not improve the picture. *Our system of taxation has not embarrassed the business of the country, says Mr. Boutwell, but the commercial telegraph reports give him the lie, and our reporters inter-viewing prominent merchants in all kinds of trade record daily in these columns their unani-mous testimony to a disastrous dulness in busi-ess everywhere.

The chief cause of the e disasters to our in-

The chief cause of these disasters to our industry is not a fluctuating and depreciated currency, although that does its abundant share of mortal injury; not our debt which is but lialf of Great Britain's debt; not our burden of annual taxation which is less per head than Great Britain's, whose domestic industries, foreign exports and foreign imports all alike augment by unfailing increments their gigantic totals every year. It is none of those things, an inconvertible currency, a gigantic debt, nor a heavy burden of currency, a gigantic debt, nor a heavy burden of taxation. All these things we might bear and possibly thrive. But it is that very "system" which Mr. Boutweil holds blameless, that distrioutes and doubles all these burdens into an ntolerable oppression, It is the Protectice (System, of Taxation which denies to Ameri-"System," of Taxation which denies to American freemon the choice of their activities, in fact pampers a few less profitable industries at the expense of al., while starving out many industries self-established in robust prosperity against the competition of the world. It is the Protective "System" of Taxation which "diversifies them with debt, disaster, and death. It is the Protective "System" of Taxation which refuses to load the back of our patient beast of public burden, but cripples his legs with one weight, ties to his tail another, hangs upon his teeth a third, buckles around his gasping throat a fourth, and then invents a financier to applaud his "unrivalled" speed:
