The North American papers inform us that the Boston Musical Jubilee was to come off on the 17th June in spite of the delay caused by part of the building erected for it being blown down.

Notwithstanding the miserable weather Mr. Kelsey's skating scenes at the Coliseum continue to prove a decided success. The performers and spectators increase every night, and the healthful amusement has now taken a decided hold on the fashionable world.

The United States mails bring the following extraordinary story—"The people of Fulton, Oswego county, are greatly excited by a case of suspected animation, or something like it, which has as yet baffled all investigations, and which still remains a mystery.

Having written to her father to meet her in this city, she, on Saturday morning last, left New York, carrying her trunk and baggage, and her father failing to meet her at the depot, and there being no train going north, she proceeded to the residence of her brother-in-law, on Canal-street, near McBride-street, where she proposed to remain over till Monday morning, and then proceed to Fulton.

Mr. A. G. who advertizes, and Mr. Mangum, who has replied to an advertisement respecting circular sawing, timber, &c., are requested to communicate with Mr. O'Gorman of this office. He has something tolerably advantageous to say to them.

We call attention to the advertisement in another column of the new firm of Messrs. Lowdell Jones & Co., druggists and apothecaries, Calle Florida. Both the old and new partners are most favorably known to the public, and will, no doubt, obtain an increasing share of the patronage they have so well deserved.

All charitable people in this city are begged to have a look-out for a little girl four and a half years old, named Julia Dacia, who has been stolen from her unhappy parents in Patagonia. The little thing has blue eyes and light-colored hair.

The batteries fired a salute yesterday at noon, and all the Legations and Consulates flew their flags, in honor of the great anniversary of North American Independence. In North American circles several private banquets were given.

But the government of a constitutional country cannot be held responsible for the language of its press, as might with justice be the case with its utterings in despotic countries, or in those partially despotic ones wherein an official censorship gives them official significance.

Friend Sarantona, the goodwill which every foreign government bears to one you nominate has been lost to that of now by the language of your Minister for Foreign Affairs. Even the Great Republic of the Northern Continent, so jealous of monarchical designs, so prone to favor at their cost the views of republics, and wherein your name alone suffices to command the warmest sympathies, will tell you that the note of Sr. Tejedor has placed that Government outside their pale.

But never can I consider responsible for the Sarantona whose apostolic mission has been in all times the diffusion of instruction, happiness and peaceful progress, and whose career I have watched with earnest interest in his triumphal battlings with the demon of ignorance and the hydra of revolt, ever since his accession to the presidency, for which I was the first to raise in the South American press the cry of advocacy—never can I consider him responsible for the insulting and provocative note with which his Minister for Foreign Affairs is thrusting the brands of devastation into the hearts of neighboring nations.

But, as the world acquiesces President Grant of responsibility for Mr. Fish's folly, so will it acquit the urbane and peaceful President Sarantona of any complicity with the vile insult of Sr. Tejedor's remarkable note.

A black-and-white tiger from the river islands, was shipped to England from this port a few days ago. The animal, who believes goes to the Royal Zoological Gardens, London.

Rio Janeiro, June 22, 1872. To H. E. Domingo P. Sarantona, President of the Argentine Confederation. Esteemed Friend,

An intimacy of sixteen years' initiation, in which your kind feelings towards the humble individual who now addresses you were manifested at our last meeting here, and in your previous presentation to your "esteemed friend" of a copy of Mrs. Horace Mann's "Education of the World," which breathes in every line your ardent desire to crush the savage gaucha element and to urge your country over it into the path of civilization and peaceful progress, is stimulating me to address you at a time when my foreign home and that of my, whom I so fervently admire for his enlightenment, his learning, his literary talents and for those noblest qualities of a true patriot which he has displayed alike in adversity and prosperity, appear upon the brink of a bloody and disastrous war which will throw both backward many years in the march of their civilization, and will lay up seeds of enduring hatred, perhaps hereafter to our their brightest prospects.

A Paraguyan question has divided two peoples who for five years fought shoulder to shoulder against a tyrant whose ambition aspired to the absorption of your country and the spoiling of Brazil! They joined hands to annihilate him and all such projects of his ambition. They succeeded, after a year in which a Brazilian army aided yours to regain your conquered provinces, and a Brazilian fleet, by its stubborn valor, saved your commercial and political capital from lying helpless at the tyrant's mercy. Sad indeed, would it be, if after all the united sufferings and united triumphs of those years of tribulation for both countries, that fleet should have to turn its guns in anger upon the capital it saved, and that army to march to lay its former comrades and to destroy cities whose hospitalities it had shared.

What are the questions thus dividing the two nations and made the motives of war? A question of the interpretation of the letter of a treaty whose real ends had been accomplished; the celebration of a separate treaty when, after two years of sterile negotiations, Dr. Quintana's offensive pretension to dominate over the allied plenipotentiaries and Paraguay made self-assertion a point of honor; an acknowledgment of a war debt whose payment all know neither will nor can be exacted from Paraguay; the refusal of Brazil to join in forcing on Paraguay the surrender of its claims to a territory in whose ownership Brazil has no interest, which is in part claimed by a third power, friendly and republican; and the nature of the conflicting titles to which renders it peculiarly a fit matter for decision by the arbitration of a neutral government such as Switzerland or the United States.

But the government of a constitutional country cannot be held responsible for the language of its press, as might with justice be the case with its utterings in despotic countries, or in those partially despotic ones wherein an official censorship gives them official significance.

Friend Sarantona, the goodwill which every foreign government bears to one you nominate has been lost to that of now by the language of your Minister for Foreign Affairs. Even the Great Republic of the Northern Continent, so jealous of monarchical designs, so prone to favor at their cost the views of republics, and wherein your name alone suffices to command the warmest sympathies, will tell you that the note of Sr. Tejedor has placed that Government outside their pale.

But never can I consider responsible for the Sarantona whose apostolic mission has been in all times the diffusion of instruction, happiness and peaceful progress, and whose career I have watched with earnest interest in his triumphal battlings with the demon of ignorance and the hydra of revolt, ever since his accession to the presidency, for which I was the first to raise in the South American press the cry of advocacy—never can I consider him responsible for the insulting and provocative note with which his Minister for Foreign Affairs is thrusting the brands of devastation into the hearts of neighboring nations.

But, as the world acquiesces President Grant of responsibility for Mr. Fish's folly, so will it acquit the urbane and peaceful President Sarantona of any complicity with the vile insult of Sr. Tejedor's remarkable note.

Rio Janeiro, June 22, 1872. To H. E. Domingo P. Sarantona, President of the Argentine Confederation. Esteemed Friend,

An intimacy of sixteen years' initiation, in which your kind feelings towards the humble individual who now addresses you were manifested at our last meeting here, and in your previous presentation to your "esteemed friend" of a copy of Mrs. Horace Mann's "Education of the World," which breathes in every line your ardent desire to crush the savage gaucha element and to urge your country over it into the path of civilization and peaceful progress, is stimulating me to address you at a time when my foreign home and that of my, whom I so fervently admire for his enlightenment, his learning, his literary talents and for those noblest qualities of a true patriot which he has displayed alike in adversity and prosperity, appear upon the brink of a bloody and disastrous war which will throw both backward many years in the march of their civilization, and will lay up seeds of enduring hatred, perhaps hereafter to our their brightest prospects.

A Paraguyan question has divided two peoples who for five years fought shoulder to shoulder against a tyrant whose ambition aspired to the absorption of your country and the spoiling of Brazil! They joined hands to annihilate him and all such projects of his ambition. They succeeded, after a year in which a Brazilian army aided yours to regain your conquered provinces, and a Brazilian fleet, by its stubborn valor, saved your commercial and political capital from lying helpless at the tyrant's mercy. Sad indeed, would it be, if after all the united sufferings and united triumphs of those years of tribulation for both countries, that fleet should have to turn its guns in anger upon the capital it saved, and that army to march to lay its former comrades and to destroy cities whose hospitalities it had shared.

What are the questions thus dividing the two nations and made the motives of war? A question of the interpretation of the letter of a treaty whose real ends had been accomplished; the celebration of a separate treaty when, after two years of sterile negotiations, Dr. Quintana's offensive pretension to dominate over the allied plenipotentiaries and Paraguay made self-assertion a point of honor; an acknowledgment of a war debt whose payment all know neither will nor can be exacted from Paraguay; the refusal of Brazil to join in forcing on Paraguay the surrender of its claims to a territory in whose ownership Brazil has no interest, which is in part claimed by a third power, friendly and republican; and the nature of the conflicting titles to which renders it peculiarly a fit matter for decision by the arbitration of a neutral government such as Switzerland or the United States.

Mr. A. G. who advertizes, and Mr. Mangum, who has replied to an advertisement respecting circular sawing, timber, &c., are requested to communicate with Mr. O'Gorman of this office. He has something tolerably advantageous to say to them.

We call attention to the advertisement in another column of the new firm of Messrs. Lowdell Jones & Co., druggists and apothecaries, Calle Florida. Both the old and new partners are most favorably known to the public, and will, no doubt, obtain an increasing share of the patronage they have so well deserved.

All charitable people in this city are begged to have a look-out for a little girl four and a half years old, named Julia Dacia, who has been stolen from her unhappy parents in Patagonia. The little thing has blue eyes and light-colored hair.

The batteries fired a salute yesterday at noon, and all the Legations and Consulates flew their flags, in honor of the great anniversary of North American Independence. In North American circles several private banquets were given.

The United States mails bring the following extraordinary story—"The people of Fulton, Oswego county, are greatly excited by a case of suspected animation, or something like it, which has as yet baffled all investigations, and which still remains a mystery.

Having written to her father to meet her in this city, she, on Saturday morning last, left New York, carrying her trunk and baggage, and her father failing to meet her at the depot, and there being no train going north, she proceeded to the residence of her brother-in-law, on Canal-street, near McBride-street, where she proposed to remain over till Monday morning, and then proceed to Fulton.

But the government of a constitutional country cannot be held responsible for the language of its press, as might with justice be the case with its utterings in despotic countries, or in those partially despotic ones wherein an official censorship gives them official significance.

Friend Sarantona, the goodwill which every foreign government bears to one you nominate has been lost to that of now by the language of your Minister for Foreign Affairs. Even the Great Republic of the Northern Continent, so jealous of monarchical designs, so prone to favor at their cost the views of republics, and wherein your name alone suffices to command the warmest sympathies, will tell you that the note of Sr. Tejedor has placed that Government outside their pale.
