and one adapted to the race who in health. In fact a kind of walking collection of all that pertains to an honest energetic lover of his fellow citizens' good. But in the case of our worthy 'Patrons' for a disinterested necessity for a 'disinterested' necessity for an important duty, they are embraced in the one word 'positive'.

Now, this is a quality that but few possess, and probably accounts for the fact that they are indeed a body solely and alone in this city. Complaints may pour in of radical abuses and of coming danger, may roar and break against their body; but vain the effort, for they only rebound from its sides as water runs off the back of a stone. And this last simile of mine exactly expresses their mode of action; they exhibit no vehemence of speech or deed, but simply allow public opinion to gently leave them without any sign whatever of its visit.

I cannot do better than end by asking our City Fathers who individually, I do not, are men of kindly hearts, to apply the following to themselves in their official capacity—

EMIGRATION TO THE RIVER PLATE. Shelburne Hotel, Dublin, 9th July, 1872.

Sir—May I again, through your columns, draw attention to this new field for enterprise. I have already told you that the Government has 6,400,359 acres of land, surveyed and divided into farm lots, which it is prepared to dispose of at prices varying from 20 to 30, and 60 cents per acre.

Some of the sharpest reporters at times play them false; the pens of ready writers do not, as a rule, shape letters in the way Lord Palmerston loved; type, like other matter, will get in the wrong place, and consequent errors escape the most luxuriant of 'readers'. The results may be annoying to the writer, provoking to the orator, and puzzling to the peruser, but are none the less amusing for all that.

ON 'CHANGE. Dear Sirs, Accept my best thanks for five hundred dollars, the prize you offered for the best essay on the influence of climate. I am, Sirs, Yours most resp., Oct. 5th, 1872.
