The Olbers' papers are to the 3rd Feb., and the freshest in town; they contain much general news, but we find in none of the London papers any prospectus of the different River P ate companies said to have been launched. Respecting the lowering of the bank rate the Economist thinks that the reduction in the rate of discount 1.45 to 1.50 on Thursday last is extremely to be regretted and adds :-- Undoubtedly, if there were no great recent change of circumstances, if the Bank of cent change of circumstances, if the Bank of hides during the last 16 days. But in fact, as we believe, the change of circumstances is most important, and therefore, though the fundamental principles are the same, the policy of the Bank requires an important alteration. We must be excused for saying that we cannot, as is sometimes wish d. attribute conclusive author ty to the decisions of the Bank of England. What is now called the old rule, that the Banking Department ought to keep as a reserve one-third of the liabilities shown by the accounts, and should promptly mise the rate of interest in order to maintain that reserve, is in fact a rule of very molorn origin. Before the panic of 1857, indeed before 1860, it was never really observed at all. The Bank of England never aid raise the rate of interest, nor did they steadily keep the amount of reserve which the rule prescribes. That rule was gradually enforced by pressure from without. took years of writing to induce the Bank to adopt this rule, and therefore we altoget ier decline to submit deferentially to the authority of the Bank upon the subject. The Bank directors are now clinging, under inappropriate conditions, to a ru e of management which was long in vain inculcated upon them, and was at last adopted by them under different circumstances. The following is important -

"The following, on the Manchester markets during the past month, is from Messrs Robert

Barbour and Brother :-"After three months of comparative activity quieter feeling has been experienced since the pe year commenced. Owing, however, to the heavy pre-engagements of the tride, prices have not been affected to the extent apparently warranted by the very moderate business transacted; but where contracts have expired producers were fain to renew them at a tangible reduction from the high rates current at the end of December. In the absence of any steady demand for the staple manufactures of this district, the market has shown irregularity, and the daily receipts of cotton at the American ports have been watched with almost feverish anxiety, as affording, in comparison with previous years, the only clue to the probable extent of the crop, the result of which is so all-important to the cotton trade. The gradual diminution of exports to the larger Asiatic markets has a beneficial effect. After a most animated bidding, the land, 581 and prospects consequently are brighter; but at the same time, it is doubtful if there will be an augmentation of demand for the East sufficient to establish any lasting advance on home values notwithstanding the enhanced cost of production. The increased case in the money-market, the Bank rate having fallen from 5 to 31 per cent. during the month, has not, so far, led to any expansion of business: on the contrary, a more than usually cautious policy has of late pervaded all c'asses of buyers, and any operations of importauce have only been induced by the acceptance of rates under those generally current. In the Liverpool Cotton-market values have declined from §d. to 11-16d. in American and Egyptian."

The Olbers has brought London papers to Feb. 3rd—for the Standara office.; Public opinion is setting in very strong against Messrs. Waring, Bros. in the question with Don Nicolas Calvo at London. If this was the letter which Calvo threatened to publish, and that his client Wells, had a previous concession dated 1868 which the Warings thought to ignore, the conduct of Mr. Calvo has been throughout correct.
