indifferentism of the age, and to raise the moral and intellectual standard of the many, is one he hopes to see warmly taken up and substantially supported in this country.

MR. MACDONELL'S REPORT. REMARKS ON THE RIVER PLATE REPUBLICS AS A FIELD FOR BRITISH EMIGRATION.

On page 30 it is stated that "a considerable number of Piedmontese families from the neighbourhood of Montevideo had resolved to join the Alexandria Colony."

I am reliably informed that this statement is incorrect, and that if any of these colonists have proceeded to San Javier their number is but small...

Messrs. Thompson, Bonar & Co. offer their lands at £2 10s. per cuadra, payable in four yearly instalments...

On page 5 it is remarked that the emigrant will be required to give notes of hand for the several instalments of purchase money...

Again, page 23, it is materially impossible for a family of four persons, whose united capital amounts to £250, to settle in the colony on an outlay of £227...

However rich the soil may be, it can be of little or no avail when agriculture is constantly subject to disturbing influences...

The climate, moreover, said to be somewhat warmer than Buenos Ayres, "the healthiest on the globe," is by no means adapted to the native of the north of Europe...

Wheat-growing being a precarious pursuit throughout the Republic, it is not probable that the Alexandria colonists, distant as they are from all important markets or centres of consumption...

Respecting the produce of tobacco, on which such great stress is laid, page 20, and from which it is estimated that the colonist may derive 40 per cent. of his income...

price of burnt bricks is likewise said to be £2 10s. per thousand. Their cost, delivered at the colony, would be found to exceed double that amount.

Much has been said about the prospects of the agricultural colonies on the Central Argentine Railway in the Province of Cordoba. Save good management there is but little evidence of marked success...

Some most interesting discoveries have been recently made among the ruins of the buried city of Pompeii.

Everybody knows that there have been picked up at Pompeii thousands of cylinders of bone, pierced with one or two holes.

The inventories have designated them as 'bits of flute,' and one might have supposed that all the inhabitants must have had an excessive passion for music...

In the tombs of Greece and Italy, too, similar cylinders of ivory or bone have been often picked up by explorers, who have contented themselves with saying 'bits of a flute.'

What, then, was the satisfaction of M. Florelli, when, in breaking the carapace of ashes which covered the plaster poured into one of these cavities, he saw appear the cast of a large coffer...

Our neighbour Mr. Cohen, who had intended to rifle his famous engravings, has had one of them, a Spanish painter for £2500 more. The copyright of the picture alone cost £15.

Several 'connoisseurs' who would not know an engraver B from a bull's foot [there are lots of them in town] inspected the engraving and declared they did not think much of it [they never do].

The macadamising of the Santa Fe Road goes on apace, and is now completed as far out as Mr. Julio Mendez's quinta; the whole length to Belgrano is expected to be finished in 6 months.
