Mendoza, 25th Oct. 1873. I informed our Consul vesterday that Peter Dudley, a respectable Englishman, had killed two soldiers while defending himself and house against an armed force without proper written authority. For this act he has been put in irons and solitary confinement, suffering torments and threatened to be shot. I beg of our Minister to exact from e National Government that Dudley be placed at the disposal of the Criminal Judge, the only authority that can legally try him.

PROPERTY AND MONEY

A kind of schism seems to be gradually taking place between these twin elements of wealth, and it has been aptly remarked by an old English resident that the word Capitalist may now be defined as-"A person that "holds large properties, 'owes a deal of money and is trying to borrow 'more." In fact property can no longer be regarded as capital, since the scarcity of money obliges men that are worth millions to pay higher interest than is usually charged to people of indifferent security.

How far this evil may go it is hazardous to guess, but we cannot help seeing that as properties have multiplied in value money has grown scarcer; and as hundreds of houses and lands are still put up for auction this cir cumstance is rather calculated to make matters worse than better. It reminds us of the Souto crisis in Rio, some ten years ago, when the enormous properties held by that millionaire, were sold at a sacrifice, and his creditors received only a small dividend compared to the real value of the bankrunt's estate.

The present crisis is by some attributed to over-trading, by others to extravagance of living and to land speculations, by others to scarcity of money for an increasing population. Probably all are partly right.

1stly. The numerous trade auctions are a sign of too heavy importations. and the market in some articles is said to have stock enough for three or four vears. Nevertheless we see that our mports in 1872 had, only increased in half the ratio of our exports; and if the balance of trade against us were to produce a crisis it should have occurred five years ago when imports were 50 per cent. over exports, not now when the excess is only 33 per 2ndly. As regards our expensive habits, of which so much is said, the majority of wealthy natives and estancieros live much within their income. Compare B. Ayres with Santiago, the capital of Chile; in the latter city Patente is paid on 4,000 private carnumber.

3rdly. Land-speculations have in a 'bursting charge,' but none of the have suddenly become fictitiously ling public that their lives and proper murderers escape or are punished. wealthy it is hard to see how the com-_ej_ munity is anything the poorer.

as much as they do house accommodation, and their increasing numbers must tend to make money scarcer for everybody. Nor are they idle hands added to our community, but highly productive, if we cast our eyes round upon the various industries to which they give life and activity. Look at the new railways and tramrays in construction. Count the houses thaat are going up on all sides.

Mr Bridge, who is a working member of the Institute, sang 'Kitty Tyrrell' with much feeling. 'The Bell-ringer' and 'The Yeoman'

The audience was very much gratified at the very pretty little song volunteered by three young ladies, pupils of Mrs. Powell.

Madame Palladini is still drawing full houses in the Olimpo, one of the largest and handsomest theatres in South America. This distinguished actress is enchanting the public with her rendering of the Italian serious drama. I remember having seen her, on her first visit to Rosario, in the character of Juliet, and could not but acknowledge that I had never seen an English actress render the wonderful creature of Shakespeare's fancy so exquisitely, even to the appearance of the extreme youth of Juliet; it seem, ed to me that Palladini was the first actress I had ever seen who really and truly understood the character of Juliet: and I believe that Rossi, who was then in the company with Palladini, and who makes an execrable Romeo, our leading columns without shivering is the best Othello known.
