obligado is 108 miles from Boca del Guazu, the river here narrowing to 200 feet; or halt its average width, and deepening to 150 feet; the current is so strong that sailing vessels are often delayed here for weeks.

Forty miles higher is San Nicolas, a port of rising importance, and 22 miles further Mr. Revy made patient surveys, finding the river 4787 feet wide, 72 feet greatest depth, current 257 feet per minute...

Rosario is 35 miles above San Nicolas, or 202 from Martin Garcia, being the largest town on the Parana, 80 feet above the river, with desultory attempts at engineering...

The Falls of Guayra are among the most remarkable in the world. In 1863 Lopez sent Colonel Platin to explore them, and his report was as follows:—

The falls are 230 leagues above Corrientes, and at a distance of 30 miles a noise is heard like thunder. Even three miles off it is difficult to hear anyone speak.

Little or nothing is known of the Parana above the Guayra falls, except that it drains chiefly Brazilian territory. At Corrientes Mr. Revy says it drains a basin of 500,000 square miles...

This river at times rivals the Parana, but often sinks to comparative insignificance. It is of remarkably uniform depth, averaging 27 feet in February, and 45 feet in October.

Higueritas is 3 miles above Punta Gorda, where the Uruguay joins the River Plate. Three miles above Higueritas the river expands into a lake 6 miles wide and 56 long, without any islands.

We have not space to go more fully into Mr. Revy's tables and diagrams, but any of our readers wishing to see this fine work can do so at our office.
