PARIS LETTER.

(From Our Own Correspondent. September 8th. St. Cloud is perhaps for the moment part of Parisians; its annual fete has 3,500 arrived, the most noisy and most gay of all such revels held in the suburbs; it is the longest also, as it lasts 44,500 throughout September, and high and low, rich and poor, are expected to put in an appearance, to patronize the mountebanks, the wheels of fortune, the swings, the balls of half a franc and the dinners under tents, where The Telegrafo says that the Monte- you wait your turn for a fowl or a standing dish, then fried potatoes, pork butchers add to their trade those of the baker, the green grocer and the wine merchant; there are pyramids of loaves, suggesting the time when the streets were paved with such, and galettes, in mountains, recalling the good old days' when houses were thatched with pancakes. One practice was very astounding, that of a wine merchant bottling his wine before a crowd of anxious customers; he wine into the bottle, making no reduction in price. The public seemed to relish this 'honest' plan of adulterating, but none ever thought like Liston and his dairy man; the former bought his own milk with a jug in each hand, one for the milk and the other for the water. We cannot speak too highly of the various plans submitted for inspection, the difeatures of park scenery as seen in the most noted parks in the world, such as the Central Park in the United States, Hyde and Regent's Parks London, the Phænix Dublin, etc. That marked G S appears to us to be one of the most suitable, as exhibiting in its various sections the greatest variety of park scenery. The arrangement of the various flower beds is really pretty. Other excellencies there are in to see and judge for themselves the very handsome plans on exhibition.

Modern Society does not get half as much enjoyment out of this and similar festivals as its grandmothers, whose idea of the present one was that it is the National Independence Day and great anniversary of the Good People, or Fairies, and that witches, devils and other mischief-making beings also make it a point to be abroad at night. We would recommend them, however, to stop at home on this occasion, or they may be taken to the 'cuarteles.'

several months' salaries. Dr. Maximiano, Marquis of Carvalho, has startled the whole of the West Coast by a bold project for suppressing earthquakes! The noble lord writes to the University of Chile that those terrible calamities can be as easily averted by lightning conductors under the earth as the dangers of electricity are by those above it. He proposes to place conductors of electrodinamite in all the deep wells, connecting the other end with the sea or the nearest river, which, he says, will completely do away with subterranean convulsions. If the noble Marquis accomplishes this, he will lick into a match chip anybody and everybody that has yet appeared in this Vale of Tears in the benefactor-of-humanity line. Philosophers say that earthquakes are the only mundane mistortune familiarity with which does not breed contempt for it. Marquis, we salute you! .

Mr. Cranwell's new apothecary hall corner of Artes and Victoria, is decidedly the nicest thing of the kind in B.
