With Englishmen it is no wouder leather and wickerwork. After them came the Danes with their carved romes, as Sir Walter Raleigh informs us in his "Invention of shipping." In every successive age Englishmen have made boats their special study and amusement, till yachts are now made for ocean-racing, in the Cambria.

It is at all events a healthier and more rational amusement than bullfighting in Spain or cock-fighting in Buenos Ayres. As President Sar-Anglo-Argentine Hotel miento said at last year's Regatta :-

"It is desirable the youth of this Republic should learn such manly tastes, which go far towards the formation of national character by realizing the desideratum of the Latin not so much the revolution as how to philosopher-'Mens sana in corpore harvest and save our magnificent crop

This preparation is composed of the finest French Cognac, distilled in Charrente, and highly concentrated fresh juices carefully extracted from the choicest portions of prime fed oxen, both ingredients being amalgamated and rectified by the process known as Collingridge's Patent.

It is guaranteed perfectly free from acid, essential and empyreus atic oils, and aqueous impurities; moreover it is the oully non-toxicant applirt in existence, the chief characteristic being, that while it imparts all the stamins and aciport of brandy and beef tea, it does not cause any of the disagreeable ffectses oinesparable from the use of ordinary organes, for while the spirit imparts strength, cleaticity and vigour to the mind, the powerful extract from well fed beef renders such sustemance to the body as to resist any intoxicating effect, consequently it has become a general favourite in Europe with those who have either to undergo much mental labour or physical exertion.
