CRICKET.

The record stand for the first wicket of 283 made by Messrs. W. G. Grace and B. B. Cooper at the Oval in 1869 for the Gentlemen of the South against the Players of the South, has been most thoroughly put in the shade by Messrs. L. C. H. Palairet and Mr. H. T. Hewett, playing by Messrs. L. C. H. Palairet and Mr. H. T. Hewett, playing for Somerset against Yorkshire at Taunton. Going to the wickets first, Yorkshire totalled 299, Mr T. S. Jackson 55, Peel 47, Mr E. Smith 45 and Wainwright 43. Messrs Palairet and Hewett went in to bat first for Somerset, and when the former had scored 123 and the atter 167 the Yorkshire total was beaten without loss midst tremendous excitement. Just after scoring his econd hundred Mr Hewett was cleaned bowled by Peel at 346, and a record was established which it will take a very long time to beat. Mr Palairet, when he had made 146 runs, was brilliantly caught at short slip. Mr. W. C. Hedley scored the third three figures for his side, which concluded their innings for the splendid total of 592. With 293 runs to the bad it did not look at all bright for Yorkshire's chance of saving the match, the result of which we have not yet heard, as the mail left before of which we have not yet heard, as the mail left before t was finished.

By their victory over Gloucestershire on August 20th, By their victory over Gloucestershire on August 20th, Surrey'got on level terms with Notts, with nine points each; their loss against Somerset having reduced Nott's score of ten points to nine. In both innings of Gloucestershire Mr W. G. Grace scored the best total: in the first 25 out of a small total of 98, and in the 2nd 64 out of 197, Mr R. W. Rice in the latter innings scoring 42. Surrey had totalled 264 runs in their first innings, so had only 27 to get to win when they went to bat the second time, and obtaining these without loss, won the match by ten wickets. match by ten wickets.

After the above match, an immense amount of interest was naturally taken in all future matches played by Notts and Surrey, especially as they had now the same counties to meet. Lancashire was tackled by both councounties to meet. Lancashire was tackled by both counties in the week ending Aug. 27th, Surrey scoring a decisive victory and Notts, though we have not yet received the result of the last day's play, an almost certain defeat, so that it is now impossible for Notts to divide the championship, as with only Kent, whom Surrey had already beaten, to meet on the following week, they must at least be one point behind last year's Leicestershire opened the batting against Surrey, and were all dismissed for 99 runs only, Sugg and Mr. Kemble being the only two to make double figures. Lockwood took seven wickets for 60 runs. Surrey replied with 229, Briggs being most successful with the ball and taking six wickets for 73 runs. Lancashire at the beginning of their second innings, looked like having a single innings defeat, but Baker and Mr Kemble managed to avert this, and 197 was their total. Surrey, with noly 68 runs to get, obtained this required number with seven wickets to spare. Score:

The Sussex v. Kent match, finished on Aug. 24th, was interesting to an exceptional degree, and for unusual reasons. Kent went in first, and though all the Sussex bowling talent was brought against them, 422 went up on the board before they were disposed of, Mr Le Fleming 194 and Wright not out 70. To this capital total Sussex replied with 229, 105 of which were compiled by Mr G. Brann. This necessitated a follow on. Mr. Brann, who had narrowly escaped being run out before he had scored, by first-class cricket scored 101 in the second innings. This feat of scoring over 100 in each innings has been performed by only one other cricketer—Mr W. G. Grace. With plenty of time in which to get out, the last few Sussex men managed to keep up their wickets till time was called, Humphrey batting for one hour and ten minutes without scoring a run, a performance worthy of Job himself. The total steod at 223 with one wicket to fall, so the game was left drawn.

After beating Notts, Somerset met Middlesex, the match being for the benefit of A. J. Fothergill, the Somerset professional left hand bowler. When these counties met before, Middlesex proved victorious by 112 runs, but showing superior form to their opponents on this occasion at every point, the Somerset team gained a most creditable success. Neither side made much of a batting performance in their first innings, Somerset scoring 160 and Middlesex 123. Somerset to together 217 at their second attempt, and as Middlesex only managed to make 184 the latter were beaten by seventy runs. Nichols, in the second innings of Middlesex, bowled with remarkable effect; he took five wickets for 28 runs. For Middlesex, Phillips, who also batted well, did most damage with the ball.

Rain quite spoilt the match between Gloucestershire Ran quite spoilt the match between Gioucestershire and Yorkshire, and made a definite result impossible. Yorkshire went in first and compiled 258. Mr W. G. Grace, who, towards the, end of the season, seems to have returned to the form of his best days, taking five of the wickets for 85 runs. Gloucestershire replied with 240, the champion making top score. Yorkshire, on going in a second time, scored 174 for nine wickets, when time was called and the match had to be left drawn. Hampshire and Leicestershire brought a successful match to a conclusion at Southampton on Aug. 24th, Leicestershire winning by six wickets. Hampshire totalled 116 and 145, and Leicestershire 187 and 75 for four wickets. Capt. Barton bowled remarkably well for Hants, altogether taking nine wickets for 74 runs, and Pougher for Leicestershire captured ten for 77 and Woodcock eight for 72. Woodcock eight for 72.

The match between Kent and Yorkshire resulted in a The match between Kent and Yorkshire resulted in a very even draw. The first part of the match was spoilt by rain, which only left the last day practically for play. Yorkshire totalled 188, Mr. E. Smith's 88, Mr. A. Sellar's 32, and Tunnicliffe's 32, being the only respectable scores. Kent only fell eight short of this total, Mr. W. H. Patterson 47, and G. Hearne 34. No less than 35 byes were recorded for Kent, the result of Yorkshire not having their regular wicket keeper.

Surrey v. Kent was the last real important match of the Metropolitan season, and Surrey finished a brilliant season by beating Kent by ten wickets. Their record is thirteen wins, two losses, and one drawn game. Score: Surrey—Abel 7, Baldwin 3 and not out 34, Mr M. Read 28, Henderson 19, Mr W. W. Reed 23 and not out 27, Lockwood 39, Mr J. ATHLETICS

Godfrey Shaw was robbed of what would certainly have been a record for the hurdles through faulty measurement of the course of the annual sports at Eastmeasurement of the course of the annual spots at assis-bourne. There were only nine hurdles and the course was found to be a yard short, but nevertheless he took 15 % sec only to complete the distance, and as his form was said to have been very fine, it is to be regretted that the arrangements for the race were so bad.

During the week ending on Aug. 27th, Reading A.C., Coventry, Barnsley C.C., East Stirlingshire Bicycling Club, Greenock F.C. and Rochdale C.C. all held successful meetings, but no performances of special interest were recorded.

RACING

PALERMO--SEPT. 19.

We have seldom seen a more brilliant assembly at Palermo than that which filled the stands and occupied the carriages on the course last Sunday to see the Gran Premio de Honor.

By the way, there is, perhaps, no racecourse in the world which can hoast an attendance of such a cosmopolitan character as can Palermo. In the stands on Sunday, one could hear all round every language under the sun, and amongst the ladies were to be seen every type of beauty, from the black eyed senorita to the fair haired English or German girl.

In spite of a high wind there was little dust, and on the whole, the weather was as nearly perfect as possible, though the long spell of drought has made the course very dusty and hard.

As was perhaps excusable, the race of the day was started nearly half an hour behind time. Out of the fourteen coloured on the card, six went to ot the fourteen coloured on the card, six went to the post. Don Carlos, with Diaz up, led the parade, with Athos next. Eridan (who was led) coming third, then San Martin, Sargento, and Puri. There was little to find fault in the condi-tion of any of the competitors, though both Sar-gento and Puri looked rather light.

The runners were kept waiting a long time, as usual, for the "sport" to close, which it at length did, showing a total sale of nearly 40,000 tickets. This total is considerably less than last year's, which was over 50,000, but then two more horses went to the post and the race was thought to be a much more open one. The public on Sunday seemed to think only one horse was in the race, and half the total number of tickets were taken on Athos; San Martin being fancied next with only 4000; Eridan came third in the betting, with Sargento, Don Carlos and Puri next in the order named.

Correas got his horses well away from the fall of the flag, the start taking place in front of the stand, and his success called forth considerable applause. Sargento, after going a short way, went to the front and made the running from San Martin, with the others close up except Athos, who was lying last some distance behind. Athos, who was lying last some distance behind. Passing the thousand me re post the first time, San Martin got level with Sargento and in a few strides had passed him. Don Carlos and Athos here both began to improve their position, the former taking second place coming into the straight. Passing the stand the first time, the order was San Martin, Don Carlos, and Sargento with the others close together a length behind the last named. San Martin forged a head in every stride in the last round, so that a thousand metres from home he held such a lead that it seemed impossible any of the others would catch him, and so it proved, as he passed the post quite six lengths in front of Athos without an effort. Sargento wa: close up third. The victory was a popular one, and the crowd showed great enthusiasm when Dionisio brought his horse back to the paddock. Athos, as usual, came well at the finish, but he best horse in the world could not have caught San Martin, going as he was. with a lead of eight or ten lengths five hundred metres from home. Eridan was beat soon after he had gone a mile and a quarter.

It will be remembered that San Martin did not run at all last season. An accident to one of his knees necessitated blistering, and not being proknees necessitated blistering, and not being properly looked after he was allowed to get at the knee with his mouth, and with the result that he ran a narrow escape of being thoroughly incapacitated for the turf. However, he seems to have now quite recovered, and since his first appearance at Belgrano at the opening meeting has run a better horse every time he has appeared. As his progeny have done so wonderfully well all through the season, it is only right that Phoenix should have carried off the Premio de Honor. Especially meritorious is this victory, when it was against such sires as Robert the Devil, Barcaldine, Zut, and Patriarch, the only country bred one beside San Martin being Puri, who is by Chivalrous.

With regard to the reported lameness of Athos. With regard to the reported lameness of Athos. which at one time during the week had sent him back considerably in the betting, the rumour had some foundation, but the favourite moved perfectly sound on the course. Sr. Even had been called in to look at the horse on Wednesday last; he had been of necessity thrown back somewhat in his work, as he lost a couple of days, but all trace of lameness had disappeared by Friday. Friday.

None of the remaining events require special ention. The last race was run very late, as a lot of time was lost at the post, where the starter

THE SAN JOSÉ RACE MEETING

Great was the gathering of English on the 15th inst. at the Estancia San Jose, Sauce Grande. In perfect weather spectators and competitors turned up in great numbers on horseback, in sulkeys, dog carts, and four-in-hands, and after a breakfast that did great credit to in-hands, and after a breakfast that did great credit to hosts, all adjourned to the racecourse which had been laid out, to see the steeplechase.

At 11.39 seven horses came to the post, and after a good start Mr. E. Geddes took the lead on his malacara and made the running all through, winning a very fast race by three lengths; Mr G. McMullen on Mr Sheriff's malacara second, and Mr J. Pettigrew a good third on his picazo. Mr F. Perch had a bad fall at the third hurdle, which was rather stiff, but luckily escaped with a severe shaking, though his horse was seriously lurt.

After this came the Cigar Race, which caused much anusement, especially amongst the natives. Mr E. Geddes got off first, but not being able to get his whip free, was beaten after a close race by Mr G. McMullen on Mr Sheriff's tostado; Mr. Upton arrived third, but minus his cigar, which being a good one, he returned to look for. Eight ran in this race.

The next event was the Ten Square Race, for which there were ten entries, all running. The start was not so good. Mr G. McMullen on Mr F. Sheriff's picazo took the lead and won by two lengths, Mr Cullen's bayo second, and Mr J. Perch's zaino, ridden by Mr A. Upton, third.

second, and Mr J. Perch s zamo, ridden by Mr A. Upton, third.

The Tandem Race was then run, Mr J. Pettigrew winning after a hard tussle with his leader, which almost got away from him; Mr G. M. McMullen second and Mr E. Geddes third.

The afternoon was filled up by matches and races amongst the natives, who mustered some 200 strong, and some well contested races resulted.

Thus ended a most enjoyable meeting. Great credit

HORSE SALES

A capital attendance filled Messrs Gomez and Lagos' yard last Friday to see the sale of two-year-olds belonging to General Francisco A. Bosch, Cabaña Laura. The prices obtained for the youngsters, none of which, however, were really good, could not have possibly naid their breeder, as eight hundred dollars was the highest price, and four hundred and fifty the lowest, the eight sold giving an average of only $556.

Saudades and Clarette were leased for racing for two years to SrF. Lavarello for $2000 each. Saudades is by Pan out of Leda by Winslow, and Clarette is by Pan out of Nana by Altyre, and consequently a sister of Manon Lescaut. A capital attendance filled Messrs Gomez and Lagos'

Messrs Funes and Lagos sold on Thursday last twelve pairs of cobs, most of them narrow and rather leggy, but well got up for sale, for an average of nearly four hundred dollars each, from the cabaña El Carmen, belonging to Sr J. Cano.

Messrs Collet and Llambi, in their capital new yard, have been doing good business during the last few days. On Thursday last they sold a pair of Russianstallions for $3300 each to Sr E. de Vivar, a pair of bay Anglo-Normandy mares to Sr J. M. Moreno for 2150 each, a chestnut Anglo-Normandy mare for $1500 to Dr Ll. Campbell, a grey of the same breed for $1200 to Sr Gutierrez, and another, a bay, to Sr C. Luro for $500. A chestnut stallion suitable for getting hunters, at least the catalogue said so, was sold to Sr Luro for $450.

A large number of buyers and others filled Messrs Bullrichs' yard on Saturday afternoon last, when ten stallions and a couple of mares belonging to Mr J. W. Nash, of the Refango, Santa Fé, were sold by auction. Some of these horses were the best we have seen in Buenos Aires brought to the hammer. Albert, a bay horse, four-year-old, went very cheap to Mr Alfred Dickenson for $1100, he was described as by a Cleveland bay out of a hunting mare, and will make a useful stallion to cross with almost any mare. Two chestnuts, one by Launcelot and the other by a halfbred hunter, made $900 and 1000 respectively.

Alarm, a three-year-old bay of the same stamp as Albert but not nearly so good, made $900, the price Mr Hale Pearson secured him at. General Moltke a three-year-old by General Ziethen out of a hunting mare, Hale Pearson secured him at. General Moltke a three-pear-old by General Ziethen out of a hunting mare, fetched $1700, and General Blucher, bred the same way as General Moltke, made $1100.

Arnold and Arnal, two three-year-olds by Cleveland bays out of Hackney mares, were sold cheap for $850 and 900 respectively. A rare Shire horse, six years old, who has served for two seasons in which he has got seventy-five colts, went very cheap for $750, the same price for which Top, a three-year-old Shire, was also knocked down.

same price for which Top, a three-year-old Shire, was also knocked down.

A price which has seldom been reached in late years was secured for the pair of marcs Camelia and Rosa. These marcs were each four years old, and were described, like Albert and Alarm, as by Yorkshire coaching stallions out of hunter marcs. They were beautiful marcs, and of perfect manners. They fetched $2600 each or $5200 the pair, the lucky buyer being Sr A. Alcosta. We do not think we have ever heard of a higher price having been paid for a pair of country-bred marcs.

Messrs Funes and Lagos' yard was well filled on Mon-Messrs runes and Lagos yard was well filled on Monday afternoon when the two-year-olds from the Cabaña Adela, Cordoba, belonging to Sr Ernesto Revol, were sold by anction. Prices were not high by any means, though two of the youngsters, notably Marina and Radamés, were much above the average. The others were small and weedy.

ATHLETIC TRAINING

As regards training for hurdle racing, a strict régime for the usual 120 yards is not necessary. Constant slow practice and continued exercise to harden the muscles, will in all cases be sufficient harden the muscles, will in all cases be sufficient to bring a man into condition for the race.

Three or four hurdles are sufficient to train over; once a week the number can be increased from six to eight, and about two weeks before the event comes off, practice over the ten hurdles every third day, increasing to every other day just before the race.

Great care must be taken in training for this Great care must be taken in training for this race, as strains and accidents are more apt to arise in it than on the flat.

The principal essentials for hurdle racing are strength and speed, combined with a certain facility for both high and long jumping, and anyone possessing these qualities who can run the 100 yards in 11 seconds, should he acquire the "three stride" method, need never despair of becoming a fast and successful hurdle racer.

It will also be found beneficial whilst practising for hurdle racing to do frequent sprints of at ing for hurdle racing to do frequent sprin's of at least 50 yards, as it helps to make a man quicker between the timbers. Always go off at best pace up to the first hurdle, and when over the last hurdle sprint in hard for the 15 yards, as many a race is won on the run in. It does not matter how many hurdles you are training over, always finish with this run in.

Such events as long jump, high jump, pole jump, putting the shot, and throwing the hammer, all require their share of training, though of course, not in any way equal to that for running. For the three former, two or three jumps a day are all that is necessary, so as to get the a day are an that is necessary, so as to get the required muscles hard, but care must be taken not to strain yourself; i is not wise to try and jump either higher or longer than your usua's tandard, you will best be able to perform such a feat when competing on the day of the races. The shot and hammer require a certain amount of practice, until the muscles have been brought into the necessary degree of hardness. In all of these events great care must be taken not to overdo the work, as it is very easy to become stale.

We will now treat upon steeplechasing, which at home is taken up by a large class of men, and is a great favourite among both competitors and spectators at all the meetings at which the race figures on the card.

There are, however, few real professionals at the game, and when we see so many who, having entered for a steeplechase, fail to acquit themselves with any degree of excellence, we must suppose some difficulty to exist in the sport and, therefore, some merit in overcoming it. It frequently happens that a first-class flat racer, who is also a fair jumper, makes but a poor show when combining the two qualities in a steeplechase. There is therefore some extrr quality which is wanted, some new difficulty which presents itself. I trust now to be able to explain where this difficulty lies, and so help to raise this branch of athletics to its proper place amongst us.

Steeplechasing may be divided into two classes, namely, the artificial steeplechase, arranged on ground within view of the spectators, and the cross country running, about which we shall only touch lightly in this article, as we are afraid that we shall never have a cross country run in this country or even a paper chase. in which most of our readers must have taken part when at school.

The former is a most exciting and interesting The former is a most exerting and interesting sport, requiring asit does in a great degree natural capabilities, and developing the most useful qualities an athlete can possess. The great features of these races are undoubtedly the waterjumps, around which will always be found the greater body of spectators. To them the result of the race is really of small account compared with the advantage of the coverage of the second compared to the second control of the race is really of small account compared to the second control of the race is really of small account compared to the coverage of the coverage with the adventures of the several competitors. He who clears the water jump in good style is greeted with the most applauding shouts, and his approach is looked for with the greatest expec-tation and excitement. But herein lies his whole reward, for should he persevere in simply show-ing his jumping powers, his chance of winning becomes very small.

Unless a water jump is ridiculously easy of accomplishment never attempt to clear it, as the exertion required for the feat is much greater than is generally imagined. In running a steeplechase a man tires himself sooner than in a flat race, consequently he must exercise most extreme care and judgment so as to husband every bit of 900 his strength.

In cleaning a water jump, a gathering up of every muscle and nerve is made prior to the leap, and on alighting no small shock is given to the body which, as is natural, helps to lessen the strength and steadiness of the competitor. This is even supposing the water to be cleared, but as most frequently happens a man alights on the edge of the bank and falls back into the water, the cleaning ground and sometimes inturing him. thus loosing ground and sometimes injuring him-

The only opposition to the plan of running up The only opposition to the plan of running up and dropping quietly into the water, is the extra weight of the costume through getting wet: and this may extend to impeding the action of the limbs. On the other hand, the wetting seems to impart an immense amount of "go" into the running, and gives a feeling of dash and excitement that keeps one moving along at a pace that is felt to be good. The cold water appears to cause a feeling of exhibitation, and, in fact, acts for a time like a strong stimulant. for a time like a strong stimulant.

Therefore never clear the water jump, but running at the usual pace alight, if possible, with the left foot sufficiently ar advanced to step out of the water with the right. Should it be too deep for this, jump so that your hands may be placed on the opposite bank, and use the arms as a lever to raise the body from the water. Do not scramble, as it may cause you to fall back. Directly you are safely out quicken your speed for a short time.

The hurdles are of great importance, when within ten to fifteen yards of the flight lengthen the nurdles are of great importance, when within ten to fifteen yards of the flight lengthen your stride and quicken your pace, jump off the foot most usual to you, don't falter in the stride, and don't take off too close to the hurdle; after clearing these obstacles slightly slacken the speed, so as to rest between them.

The training for this kind of race is the same as that for long distances on the flat.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL NOTES

The bogic man of all London theatrical and music-hall managers, the London County Council, according to all accounts is a unique collection of bumptious individuals, who, not knowing what they require, endeavour to teach the public what is necessary for their, the public's, amusement and enjoyment; they, however, are meek and gentle when compared with some of the people of this happy, free and enlightened city people of this happy, free and enlightened city—all Republican cities are happy, free and enlightened, are they not?—who, having been armed with a little brief authority, appear determined to justify the poet who credited them with tricks fantastic enough to make angels weep. I refer to the Municipality, who, without rhyme or reason, demanded, not asked, for the use of the Odcon Theatre on the 28th inst., the night originally fixed for the performance of "Caste," and this after the Buenos Aires Dramatic Club had not only engaged the theatre, but had their posters out and sold tickets. Might, being stronger than right, naturally prevailed, and the amateurs had to give way.

There were brave doings at the San Martin on Tuesday night, the occasion being the anniversary of Sept. 20th, 1870, the entry of the Italian troops into Rome. The swarthy sons from the land of into Rome. The swarthy sons from the land of the sunny south assembling in their might and overwhelmingly crowde dthe pretty theatre in Calle Esmeralda. For the theatre goor there was not much of interest, the first part consisting of innumerable patriotic anthems and marches, all of which were encored; the second part being devoid of anything calling for special attention except the duety. Delos paraguas, which was deservedly and enthusiastically encored. Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" has so often been noticed in these columns that nothing need be said unless it is that when compared with the be said unless it is that when compared with the Nacional Co.'s. the San Martin can give away a lot in the matter of chorus, but good as Paoli-Borrazzo's Santuzza is, she will never equal Rodriguez.

The programme of the organ recital to be given at St. John's Church, 25 de Mayo, on Thursday evening next, is to hand and appears very attractive, for, in addition to some admirable selections for the organ, figures Mendelssohn's "Hear my prayer," the "Adagio" from Max Brusch's violin concerto, Prof. Pini, and the duet from Rosini's "Stabart Mater," Mdm. Dunand, and Miss Lumb. That it will be a success I do not doubt, certainly Mr. Barnes deserves support, for he has worked hard and with a fair amount of success, to improve the music of the church, and has in return, as he pathetically remarked to me, received the maximum amount of kicks and the minimum quantity of half pence. Thanks to the energy of Miss Lumb and her collecting cards, there is every probability of the instrument being erected by Easter of '93.

Throughout he never lost that lacadasical manner, which suited him so well except when for the moment he showed the real manly feel-

On Monday afternoon an official of the law presented himself at the Apolo Theatre and took possession of the ticket office, where he intends to stay till he has secured some two thousand dollars, for which an embargo has been taken out against the theatre.

What I now want to know is, taking into conwhat I now want to know is, taking into consideration the financial returns of the Apolo, when will the bailiff collect the amount due with costs?—probably not until Dr Saenz Peña becomes President.

The long promised show to be given by the Belgrano Polo Club in Belgrano will, I hear, come off on Monday evening the 11th of next month. The programme has not been quite settled on yet but one item, which will be sure to a tract, will be "Husband in Clover" by Mr Morgan and Miss Webster.

Caste.—With such a caste as the following D'Alroy, Mr Morgan; Esther. Miss Reddall; Miss Webster as Polly Eccless; and Sam Gerridge, her devoted lover, Mr Plews; Mr H. Scott as Hawtrey; Papa Eccles, 'Mr Thompson; and the Marquise, Mrs Tabbutt, I naturally looked forward to something good, and in common with the rest of the audience, on Monday evening, I was not doomed to disappointment; the reception accorded by the large audience left no room for doubt as to the verdict—success amonalified for doubt as to the verdict-success, unqualified success.

Mr Morgan as D'Alroy proved himself a sound and steady actor; he is certainly no novice at this work, throughout he was good, but was at this best in the second and third acts, his scene in the second act, when the ever versatile and irrepressible Polly determined at all costs to see a real live marquise, and unable to realise the gravity of the situation is unceremoniously carried from the window and put outside the door, leaving D'Alroy slightly flushed and breathless to receive his august mother, brought down the house. His touching good-bye to his young wife as the curtain falls at the end of the act formed a fine tableau, the picture being finished with Hawtrey in the back ground, and the drunken Eccles, reeling against the side board.

Miss Reddall's touchingly sympathetic rendering of the difficult part of Esther was distinctly good. The hard working girl trying to keep a home together, the loving and tender wife, the broken hearted widow and proud mother, these diverse characterisations were clearly portrayed from her entrance with Polly in the first act to the finale when, with husband returned, the reconciliation between mother and son effected, the curtain falls. Miss Reddall fully deserves marquise, she indignantly refuses and requests her aristocratic visitor to withdraw.

Miss Webster as Polly Eccles looked charming and acted with great spirit and usefulness a part that was underiably the most difficult in the piece. The audience simply roared at her business, and when on the stage it was difficult to keep one's eye off her charming little figure which true to the character was never at rest.

but that a woman's heart beat beneath the cold exterior was proved by the tender way in which she treated the scene in the second act when wishing her son good by e before his departure for India.

Mr Scott could not be better fitted with a part than that of Hawtrey, he was simply inimitable. The somewhat cynical man about town could not have had a more carefully studied yet natural impersonation, his horror at being requested to fill a kettle in a little back kitchen even though accompanied by such a charming little personage manner, which suited him so well except when for the moment he showed the real manly feelfor the moment he showed the real manly feeling which was in him, upon the appearance of his supposed dead friend D'Alroy, the his tone was quickly altered when our friend "Sam" wished to secure his order in the plumbing line. And Sam as represented by Mr Plews was more than amusing, he was in his very best vein, his capital fooling being irresistibly laughable, his best hit being at the tea-table, not only when handing it the long swell' his bead, but when utterly staggered by the appearance of D'Alroy he suddenly disappeared beneath the table, from which stronghold he assured his lady love that he would protect her. protect her.

Very few men possess the marvellous faculty Very few men possess the marvenous lacenty of manufacturing most excellent material out of almost nothing, but Mr Thompson as Eccles appeared to be equal to the task. As a part, there is not much for Eccles to do, but with good business much can be made of it, and Mr Thompson as much can be made of it, and Mr Thompson has a part of the property of proved his power in the pipe scene, when he held his audience for a space of time that appeared interminable though in reality it was but some few minutes.

Mr Morgan who so ably stage-managed this performance deserves the thanks and gratitude of not only the club, but his audience for giving them far and away the best amateur show which has appeared in this country for, to my knowledge, four years, and I believe the last good performance dates back to 1887.

The amateur orchestra, was to the fore, and appeared greatly improved since I heard them at the Salon "La France." Possibly this was owing to the assistance of some professionals whom I saw fiddling away quite merrily; how-ever I hear that standing alone they are rapidly going ahead, and I am glad of it, for there was room for it.

The 19th of October is coming on apace and up to date I am not in receipt of the programme for the show at the Odeon, but hope to be able to give it in my next issue. The tableaus are, so I am told, going very strong, and will be magnificently mounted and staged, and the orchestra will be composed of professionals.

When is the performance of "Ours" coming off, I shall be glad to receive any authentic information, can any one say?

THE MAN IN THE STALLS.

CANINE ATORRANTES

To one who is in any way attached to animals, the the curtain falls. Miss Reddall fully deserves the comprehensive term of a true artist if for nothing more than her grand dramatic action being these cold nights one may notice these poor little beggars crouched up and shivering in the doorways, herself, and the adoption of her son by the marquise, she indignantly refuses and requests rubbish wholesale on the not over-clean side walks, in raking over the basura boxes searching for their break-

No one takes any notice of them, except perhaps that eccentric individual the "dog doctor," who may occasionally be seen learning on the pick handle he uses for a walking stick, putting plasters on their heads or setting broken limbs. Is it too much to ask the police, or those who are responsible, that these poor brutes be put out of their misery.

A dogs' home, we know, is not to be 'thought of here, but in more civilised countries such institutions have been established for some years. Oute recently the

The stately marquise, Mrs Tebbut had not much to do but what she did was done wisely and well. The strong idea of "Caste" was strongly shewn in the treatment which Eccles received at the hands of this commanding dame, but that a woman's heart beat beneath the cold

SPORTING NOTES

The Buenos Aires Cricket Club have arranged Wednesdays for the Ladies' Tennis afternoon on their ground at Palermo.

The Quilmes Club are sending a polo team to Lezama on Friday to play against the Lezama Polo Club. The team leave on Friday evening at 8 p.m. and will return on Friday afternoon.

I should imagine that Mr Cornwall's twentyone, hitin one over with four fours and five fives, in the Lomas v. Hurlingham match at Hurlingham last Sunday is almost a record.

The Quilmes Club, in order to have their old ground kept entirely for cricket and tennis, have acquired a new polo ground close to Quilmes station. It has taken a considerable amount of work to level the ground, but it is now practically finished and was played on last Sunday for the first time. It now only requires a little rain with subsequent rolling to make it one of the best grounds near Buenos Aires, as it is quite full size each way.

From a telegram received yesterday we are told that Orme won a "steeplechase" at Newmarket. This is hardly probable. The telegram must in reality give the result of the Great Foal Stakes run yesterday. Orme was first, the Prince of Wales' Versailles second, and Mr Houldsworth's Dunure third.

The highest price made at Las Ortigas Stud's sale yesterday at Palermo was $13,500 for which Fine Champagne by Star out of Finesse was secured by Mr J. M. Villanueva. Fine Champagne is as sister to Fraise au Kirsch.

The Flores Athletic Club propose inaugurating their ground on Wednesday October 12th. A cricket match will be played amongst the mem-

The Belgrano Polo Club will hold a tournament on their ground in the beginning of November. Stabling will be provided for the ponics of visiting teams.

Under "Polo" will be found a few suggestions Under "Polo" will be found a few suggestions made by the Buenos Aires portion of the Committee afathe Polo Association of the River Plate, to be sent to the secretaries of all affiliated clubs for approval. With nearly twenty clubs on the list, and fresh ones being formed every day, it is now quite time that a champion cup was established, though at first, of course, the older clubs will have a considerable advantage over the younger ones, but from the way some of the latter have come on in a few months it is more than likely that they will give some of the former hard work to win.

It is proposed to make all tournaments, other than the two held for the championship cup, handicap ones, an idea which I fancy will hardly be practicable, though perhaps one which may attract more entries than formerly.

The numerous members of Hurlingham will be glad to hear that a telephonic communication will shortly be established between town and the club, through the medium of the Sociedad Cooperativa Telefonica.

An Argentine contemporary is publishing a series of articles for the instruction of those who send up horses for sale in town, giving hints by which it is possible, to use the journal's own words, "transformar un mancarron desortijado, en un corcel esbelto y nervioso." Fancy the "Field" publishing "Hints to Copers," or a treatise on "The Use of Ginger."

At a general meeting of the Montevideo Polo Club, called to receive the resignation of their committee, it was unanimously carried that a committee, it was unanimously control and vote of confidence in the committee be accorded, and that the committee be re-elected, and that a conv of this resolution be forwarded to "River copy of this resolution be forwarded to Plate Sport and Pastime."

Wednesday, the 12th of October, has been declared a holiday. The Jockey Club has arranged a race meeting at Palermo, and several other sporting fixtures will be made for the day.

Esmeralda by Earl Clifden out of Deformed, has been sent to the stud. She will be served this season by Gloriation. Havre by Zut-Bianca, has been bought by Mr James Casey for the Cha-cabuco Stud, from Sr E. Casal.

Someone has invented a patent golf ball for practice in confined places. The arrangement is not very complicated; simply a round piece of tin tied to the ordinary ball by a piece of string, so that when the ball is hit in the ordinary way its flight is retarded by the tin disc, and it only travels as many inches as otherwise it would feet travels as many inches as otherwise it would feet or yards. For the purpose of obtaining practice in their back garden, many men might have thought of tieing something on the ball but few would have patented the idea. No doubt the new patent will meet with the success it de-

Carbine, the celebrated son of Musket, and one of the best horses ever seen on the turf, has been sent to the stud in Australia. His service fee of 200 guineas is the highest ever asked for the use of a stallion in that country.

When I wrote of the Las Rosas two-year-olds last week I did not think that San Martin was going to win the Gran Premio de Honor, or I should certainly have taken a better look at General Las Heras, who is the image of his own brother, the hero of Sunday's race. I said at the time that he was a colt that with a little time would do wonders, and it will be astonishing now if he does not make one of the top prices of the year.

a capital idea, as the unloading in town, leading through the streets, and subsequent transporta tion to their training quarters after sale, are all most risky proceedings to be undergone with youngsters, who hitherto had never been off the estancia on which they were bred. The attendestancia on which they were bred. The attendance of loafers at a sale of thoroughbreds at Palermo would probably not be so large as that at one of the yards in town, but those who really mean to buy will go just the same, and will have the additional advantage of seeing the horses properly shown, which is impossible in the cramped space of our Buenos Aires horse marts.

Lord Yarborough, the Master of the Brockles-Lord Yarborough, the Master of the Brocklesby Hounds, has taken the trouble to calculate the amount spent on hunting in the United Kingdom. His lordship finds that keeping up the 330 packs of hounds in England, Scotland, and Ireland caused the expenditure of £414,850, and estimating that a hundred men hunting with each pack, each man having three horses, that meant 99 000 horses were engaged, and puting the cost of each horse at 15s, per week, this that meant 99 000 horses were engaged, and put-ting the cost of each horse at 15s. per week, this came to considerably over three and a half mil-lions, so that the cost of keeping hounds and maintaining the hunts in the United Kingdom came altogether to four and a half millions, inde-pendent of other expenses, such as carriage horses, covert hacks, travelling expenses, etc. * *

Dr. Luro's youngsters will be quartered in the Monte Grande, Petite Ecurie, and Sr. E. Acebal's stables, and are to be sold on the 30th of this

To-day the Santa Rita and San Agustin youns-ters will be sold by Messrs Bullrich before the Curumalan lot, on Monday the 3rd October, Mr Casey's two-year-olds from the Chacabuco stud, and on Wednesday the 5th, Mr Kemmis' forty one from Las Rosas, will be put up by these same auctioncers.

Messrs. Funes and Lages will sell the colts and fillies by Gay Hermit and Keir from the El Ojo de Agua Stud on Friday, the El Carmen half dozen on Tuesday the 4th October, and nine from the San José Stud on Thursday the 29th.

Quite a large number of horses and mares have been taken out of training lately and sent to the Stud. Amongst the marcs are: Reina by Gladiador, Nogoyá by Victor Emanuel, Calandria by Zanoni, Remolacha by Zanoni, Esmeralda by Earl Clifden, besides several others.

Remolacha has been sent, or is going to be sent to Luis Chico to be served by Ormonde, Reina goes to Tissaphernes, Nogová to Gualeguay, Calandria to one of Dr. Ugalde's sires at La Plata, and Esmeralda to Gloriation.

Without wishing to tresspass on the preserves so fully done justice to by my friend "The Man in the Stalls" I must not lose the opportunity of saying how thoroughly the performance of Caste by the Buenos Aires Dramatic Club was enjoyed by the audience at the Odeon Theatre on Monday evening.

Casto is such a heavy order for amateurs that no one would have been surprised at any little deficiency on the part of the artistes interpreting such difficult roles, had there been any, but there was none. Few amateurs there are who could have played Polly Eccles as did Miss Webster—but I am not writing Dramatic and Musical Notes so will go no further except to say that no amateurs or professionals worked harder at rehearsal than did those of who made Caste such a brilliant success on Monday evening.

Great credit is due to Mr Morgan for stage managing the show so well, I wish every one of our Buenos Aires managers could have seen the second act.

HURLINGHAM v. LANUS.

Although a lovely day, a very strong wind during the first part of the match somewhat spoilt the pleasures of the game at Hurlingham on Sunday. The home club won the toss, and elected to bat first. The Lomas men, finding some difficulty in bowling against the wind, were not very successful with the ball, and 200 went up for the loss of only three wickets. At this point Hurlingham declared their innings closed. Out of the total, G. A. Thompson scored 122 by first-class cricket, in which he did not give one chance; he and Lacey were the two not outs. the two not outs.

Lanus commenced their innings well, Cornwall punishing the bowling terribly. He knocked up his 51 in a very short time, scoring no less than 21, four 4's and a 5, in one over. The fifth and six wickets did not stay long but Rath and Jacobs kept their wickets up till time was called, and the match had to be left drawn. Thomson did as good service with the ball as he had dine with the bat, and captured four wickets for only twelve runs. The following are the full scores:

BUENOS AIRES C.C. v. LANUS C.C.

Though a strong wind was blowing most of the day the weather was by no means unpleasant for cricket on the 25th, when Lanus sent a team to Palermo to play the home club. The visitors batted first, but Messrs Knox and Gifford were bowling too well to allow them to score high, and the innings closed for 59 runs only. The home team had no difficulty in beating this score, totalling 182, and winning therefore by 123 runs. Mr B. P. Boyd played a capital innings of 60 runs, beating the Lanus total off his own bat. The secretary of the Association to ask the secretaries of all affiliated clubs the most suitable time of year in which to hold the tournaments.

All ponies playing in a tournament which have not got a certificate of height issued by the Association, according to Bye-law No. 9, to be measured before playing by two members of the committee, and all ponies failing to pass under the 14-hand standard to be barred from playing.

GOLF

Golf was poorly represented at Hurlingham on Sunday. T. Lees and M. G. Fortune played a single of 9 holes, the latter winning by 3 up and 1 to play, the bye falling to Lees.

An indignant friend came to us the other day and said: "You ask the derivation of 'stimmy'—(his pronounciation)—a lady has been nearly killed by one at home, playing your wretched game." It turned out that a lady, while golfing with a friend, somehow got in front, and received the full force of the blow on the forehead. Stimies of this kind are fortunately not frequent. frequent.

From "Golf," we see that the most extraordinary driving was done at St Andrews during the Calcutta Cup Handicap, by Mr E. B. H. Blackwell. Many of his drives being over 300 yards, and his cleek shots 250 yards. From the hill he outdrove Andrew Kirkcaldy, one of the longest professional drivers in St Andrews, by 30 to 40 yards, and when driving against him, the atter, to use his own expression, "just shut his een."

BUENOS AIRES FROM DAY TO DAY

The news of the week has been the supposed conspiracy amongst a number of young officers in the military encampment at Santa Catalina. The truth of the existence of such a conspiracy cannot even be guessed at, as the governmental and military authorities absolutely, refuse to be drawn by the most astute newspaper reporter or interviewer. It is clear however, that a very large number of artests have been made, the number varying from twenty-five to forty-five according to the different sources of information. We shall perhaps know the truth when the inevitable "sumario" appears.

* * What is really serious about the conspiracy is the fact of such a large number of officers being even suspected of such a serious crime, for serious crime it is for military men to conspire against the government they are sworn and paid to serve. It shows a state of demoralisation in the Argentine army that calls for most severe repression, as a military revolution is above all things the least desirable.

hoped that they will let each o'her rest, as the proper place for babies of all ages is the nursery and not the editorial chair.

The Sunday observance question has helped to fill up the papers, and to enable a few anony-mous scribblers to try to put the blame of their own non-attendance at church on the backs of the long suffering and hard-working clergy. The weight of opinions of this description always depends upon the men who offer them, and it is a nity that so much good ink and paper is wasted in vulgar abuse. Let each man mend himself, and then try to mend other people.

On Wednesday last a lecture on "Evolution and Darwinism" was given to a good attendance and Darwinism" was given to a good attendance of members of the Literary Society by our Natural History Correspondent, Mr A. Stuart Pennington. The lecture is being republished in extenso in the columns of the "Herald." After the lecture was concluded an interesting discussion was started by the chairman, Dr Hiron, and Mr A. Watson Hutton. As the latter gentleman proceeded to "extend himself," the discussion was adjourned till to-night, when the ghost of Darwin may be expected to be raised, by the excitement of the debate.

The Fiscal or Public Prosecutor in the case of Brown Arnold has asked the Judge to let him free without punishment, as he was not Brown Arnold at all but some one else when he killed Gennassini. He arrives at this curious result by a process of meta-physical study set forth at length in the document presented to the Court. We need hardly say that such a defence would have been held ridiculous in England, where human life has some value placed upon it.

The Government propose to deal very severely with all concealed cases of infectious disease. Any doctor who conceals or does not report such a case will be fined anything up to a thousand dollars, and any paterfamilias who conceals such a case will decrease his accumulated dollars by some fifty or a hundred. Of course the doctors will add their fines to their fees, so they will be all right.

"This book will serve to put in relief abroad the state of education in the country and the grade of instruction of the schol-ars of each school." We wonder what will be the next? Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings, forsooth, Argentina is going to show herself to no very great advantage.

The National Museum is suffering from want of that liberality in the way of cash which is such a characteristic of the National Government. Dr A worm will turn, much more a newspaper, and we were not surprised to see the "Times" retaliating upon the "Standard" for referring to it continuously as in a moribund condition. They represented to the professional body of the Medical School that they were studying too much, and with that marked deference to the wishes of "the boys" which characterises all wishes of "the boys" which characterises all classes in this country, the subject of chemistry was removed from the list of their studies. We expect that some of these young students will be claiming the various ministerial offices shortly as the only places where their influence and learning can be sufficiently recognised.

Some of our readers will remember the tale of the little girl who, in front of Doré's great picture of the Christian martyrs in the arena being devoured by lions, burst into tears, and on being asked why she was weeping, said because one poor lion had not got a Christian. We felt much like the little girl on reading that Eloisa Soronda, a little girl of eleven years, had been rewarded by the C.P.C.A.. or Zoos, for having rescued from the jaws of a cat which was going to devour it, a pigeon which had been hurt and fallen in the street. How about the cruelty to the cat in depriving it of its natural dinner? in depriving it of its natural dinner?

LOCUSTS AT WORK

The terrible ravages which the locusts are committing in the northern provinces of the Republic are beginning to cause an uneasy feeling as to the results of next season's crops. Telegrams received from Colonia Umberto. Sta. Fé, state that an immense cloud of these pests, so large that they are described as darkening the large that they are described as darkening the sky, making travelling on horseback impossible, and rendering it difficult to see far ahead, even in the broad daylight, settled on the colonists' growing crops, and in half an hour nothing but the bare, black earth was to be seen, not a trace of green anywhere. They even invaded the houses, devouring upholstery, clothing, and bed linen. The populace seems to have gone fran-tic, the women and children crying, and the men mad with rage.

At Esperanza, Santa Tomé, Flores, Ataliva, San Justo, Sunchales, Palacios, Ceres, Arrufo, Libertad, Sauce (Entre Rios), and the Misiones much damage has also been done to the crops, but there is a chance that the threatening rains will cause the crops to shoot up again, and ripen somewhat before the salronas are hatched and on the move. Then, if further flights do not make their appearance, the harvest will be saved.

Meantime the Government has distributed the Meantime the Government has distributed the half million dollars that was voted to make war with this plague, Santa Fé gets $30,000. Entre Rios $20,000. Rioja and Jujuy $5000 each. The amount is small, but in competent hands a little permanent good might be done. At present a few committees are appointed, which consider that part of their duty is to frighten them from one colony to another by mean of smoke and the beating of tinware. No one seems to know the best course to pursue under the circumstances, and the money will probably be wasted.

ces, and the money will probably be wasted.

It seems that the locusts are to be an annual nuisance, and it therefore behoves the authorities to discover their breeding place, repeatedly said to be in the Chaco. The army, then, instead of being camped at Santa Catalina, hatching revolutionary plots, could be sent to this district, and by a system of rewards do something to cripple the power of these undoubted enemies of the country.

The local postmasters might also be requested to follow the example of the official at Concordia who has watched the locust flights in the districts under his control, and reports that their track "forms a triangle which may be roughly drawn from Concordia to Posadas in the Alto Paraná, and thence through the centre of Corrientes to Monte Caseros, which lies on the Upper Uruguay about one hundred miles north of this

The system of appointing district agents to watch the locusts and observe their flights, habits, and natural enemies is being carried out in California under the direction of the United States Entomologist, and these agents furnish some interesting particulars of the natural enemies of locusts. Of course, as ong these were to be found a few of the larger insectivorous birds, among them being the Californian shrike or butcher bird (Lanis indovicianus-gambeli), which in some districts, where thorns were not readily in some districts, where thorns were not readily in some districts, where thorns were not readily available for impaling insects, according to the habit of these birds, had adapted itself to circumstances by decorating the barbed wire feneing with a locust on most of the wire barbs interwoven in the feneing. Among other species of birds feeding upon the locusts are the Arkansas kingbird (Tyrannus verticalis). In confinement one of these birds would eat about 120 locusts in a day. Remains of these insects have been found in the stomachs of the great horned owl. The three-vol. novel, or comedy in a few dozen acts, known as the Tetrazzini-Scalavorni scandal our colleague. The Review of the River appears to have ended. The lady says she won't plate, seems quite shocked at anything in the Bullock's oriole and Californian song sparrow. What struck one inspector especially was the have her at any price, so that as they are both satisfied we hope to see and hear no more of a rise struck on Sunday her comparative scarcity of insectivorous birds where the locusts occurred. This would suggest, that these locust migrations are not so old or regular as supposed; otherwise it is probable regular as supposed; otherwise it is probable that some insectivorous bird would have adapted its habits to keep pace with the locust swarms. There is a lizard found preving upon locusts; it is called Sceloporus occidentalis, or western fencelizard, and also the "Swift." They destroy large numbers of locusts. Among the insectenemies are a black wasp (Priononyx atrata). This wasp makes a burrow in the sandy soil, and providence it with a locust for the benefit of its provisions it with a locust for the benefit of its young, the larvae feeding upon the moribund grasshoppers. The wasp catches these insects grasshoppers. The wasp catches these insects while on the wing, and stupefies them by several stings; the locust becomes motionless, when the wasp drags the larger insect into the burrow by its antennae. She then deposits one or two eggs upon its body and covers up the mouth of the burrow, from which in due course emerges the offspring of the wasp. The wasps thus destroy burrow, from which in due course emerges the offspring of the wasp. The wasps thus destroy large numbers of the devastating locusts. Another wasp also kills locusts; it is Polistes variatus, which feeds upon their bodies; as also does a third wasp, which, like the first species, also keeps the locusts as food for its young. A large two-winged fly feeds upon them; it is named Proctacanthus milbertii. An allied fly (Erax bastardi) feeds on locusts eggs. Several flies feed internally as parasitic larvae on locusts. The perfect flies dart after the locusts so soon as they rise to fly, and then attach their eggs to the they rise to fly, and then attach their eggs to the bodies of the locusts, where they hatch, and the young fly larvae eat their way into the bodies of their hosts. It is doubtful, however, if these flies are sufficiently abundant to really effect much mortality upon the immense swarms of locusts which occasionally appear. A little red mite (Trombidium locustarum) infests some examples, after the manner of an allied species of mite which attacks bumble-bees in England in autumn. Several bee-flies also feed as larvae in the locusts, whilst the young of several species of blis ic beetles feed on their eggs.

It seems almost impossible to stamp out the locust plague by the ordinarily practised methods, for although millions have been spent in various parts of the world to effect this purpose, utter failure has been the result, except indeed in the small island of Cyprus, whose total area is not equal to an average estancia here, and which, therefore, cannot be taken into account. The destruction of eggs at their main breeding places and—if it were possible—the systematic tempt to uproot their eggs wherever l tempt to uproot their eggs wherever laid, would only modify the evil. But even these measures would never be thoroughly carried out A few vigorous spirits, as occurred in Santa Fé recently, would see that their properties were cleared, and then, to their annoyance, find their camp overun by saltonas from the adjoining estancias, whose owners have been too indolent to trouble much about the matter.

We must look in some other direction, then, for relief. One scientific observer suggests that for relief. One scientific observer suggests that country, inoculated with a contagious disease, and set free to carry it among their species. A similar idea was advocated by Pasteur, to destroy the rabbits in Australia, but was rejected. stroy the laboris in Adstrain, but was rejected by a Commission, on the ground that in addition to clearing out the rabbit there was a fair possibility of domestic birds, sheep, and even human beings being cleared off at the same time. The "locust disease," if there is one, may be of a like character, and veritable winged messengers of death earth and the same time. of death sent forth. A disease-remedy is likely to be much worse than the evil from which the country suffers. The risk is too great.

It has been repeatedly noted that when locusts are plentiful their natural enemies are scarce, and vice versa. This seems, on the face of it, cause and effect. What then becomes of mans' boasted triumph over Nature if he will not turn her to account. In other words, why not cultivate and rear in sufficient numbers for our purpose the natural enemies of the locusts. The birds may be difficult to obtain, but the larvae of the wasps and flies previously mentioned should be easily gathered or guarded against destruction by its natural enemies, and for a very small ex-penditure immense swarms of black wasps and Erax bastardi might be reared and let loose to wage war on the locusts.

There is nothing impracticable, nothing even novel about this proposal, when we consider the large quantity of piscatorial eva now gathered in various countries and hatched by artificial means and the small fry resulting therefrom sent forth to propagate their species, the immense majority of which, if left in their natural state,

In considering the organs of locomotion, we find differences between the anterior and posterior limbs which call for explanation. We therefore pass to describe these limbs in detail. In each front leg we find, commencing above, first the bone of the shoulder or 'scapulum," a flat triangular bone applied laterally to the thorax. The outer face is divided by a longitudinal ridge called the acromion. The bone of the arm, or Humerus, is long bent on itself and swollen at its two ends. The upper bears the swollen at its two ends. The upper bears the trochier, a swelling for the insertion of the muscles, the lower a condyle. The bones of the fore arm, the Radius and Cubital or ulva, are united in a part of their length. The latter is terminated above by a proportion furnished terminated above by a prolongation, furnished in front with an articulatory surface coinciding with that of the Radius, and a swelling known as the olecranon. The ulva forms the hinge joint of the elbow. The bones of the Carpus or knee. corresponding to the wrist in man, are seven in number, and are arranged in two rows. They are called the scaphoid, semilunar, triquetrum in the top row and the trapezoid capitatum and tratum in the lower row, and one bone called the sub-carpian or pisiform, juts out behind the first named row. The cannon bone shank or first named row. The cannon bone shank or metacarpus, bears on each side of it two small rudimentary bones, called the splint bones, which become united to the main bone in the adult. These bones terminate above in a slight swelling and below by a small button-like enlargement of their points, which swellings are often confounded with other not uncommon swellings on the side of the cannon bone. The splint bones referred to are the degenerate remains of digits, which existed in the ancestors of the horse, as explained in a former paper in this journal. The bones of the foot are the pastern, coroner, and the coffin bone, the latter protected by a horny covering and by elastic cartilages inside. The hoof is hollowed out behind, and in this hollow is found the small sesamoid or navicular bone, the great sesamoid bones being two small chest bones beand above the pastern.

The joints or articulations are the scapulo-humeral, between the shoulder-blade and the arm, the humero radial between the arm and the forcarm, the carpal or knee joint, and the most curious and most important, the fetlock joint, which is a perfect hinge, formed on the one part by the lower extremity of the cannon or shank-bone, which has two condyles or cylindrical sur-faces and a median ridge, and on the other part by the upper end of the pastern bone, which has two cavities exactly corresponding to the smooth

The two surfaces of the joints are connected by four ligaments, two lateral, one anterior, and one posterior; the last named is very long and strong, united above to the back sinews of the short, and extending the strong content an shaft, and extending between the splint bones to the back of the fetlock joint, where it divides into two branches which are fixed to the great sesamoid bones. This ligament is called the suspender of the fetlock.

The joints between the pastern and the coronet The joints between the pastern and the coronet and between the latter and the coffin bone, are imperfect hinges, the latter being entirely enclosed within the horny part of the hoof. They are connected by lateral ligments only. The muscles of the forelimb are divided into those of the shoulder, the arm, the forearm, and the foot. Anatomically, the foot begins immediated when the correspondences and correspondences.

diately below the carpus or knee, and corresponds to the hand in man.

The muscles on the internal region of the shoulder are called flexors, those on the external, extensors

On the front of the humerus are found two muscles, which are the flexors of the forearm. On the back of the humerus are five muscles, all ending in the elbow and the olocranon, which are the extensors of the forearm.

The anterior muscles of the forearm are e tensors, the posterior muscles are flexors. In all there are nine muscles, which surround the forearm on all sides except in one part where the radius is only covered by the skin. The four extensors are, two for the metacarpur or shaft and two for the bone of the foot. There are five flexors, three of which, the flexors of the shaft, are superficial, and two, viz., the flexors of the foot bones, are placed below them. The tendon of one of the latter muscles is furnished with what is called a synovial sheath, in order to facilitate its movements. It is to a dropsical swelling would never have reached this stage of life. If fishes have been raised so successfully, why not fishes have been raised so successfully, why not gall of the tendon.

The general disposition of the bones, muscles, and tendons of the foot is so delicately adjusted as to furnish a perfect organ of locomotion and at the same time of support to 'the heavy body of the animal, but if by careless shoeing or accident the arrangement of the parts are interfered with then windgalls and other deformities are produced, and instead of havin; a mechanism adapted in every sense for the purformance of its functions, we get a mechanism of another deformations and of pain to the animal itself, to say nothing of the decreased value of the latter. A due knowledge of the anatomy of the foot and of the interdependence of its various parts, is most beneficial pendence of its various parts, is most beneficial in buying a horse.

Comparing the forelimb of the horse with that of the ox and sheep, we find no notable difference down to the carpus inclusive, but below the carpus we find the metacarpals, corresponding to the cannon bone of the horse formed by the union of two separate melacarpus and terminating below in two perfectly distinct articulatory surfaces. There is also only one rudimentary splint bone. Below the cannon bone the foot divides into two digits, each of three joints, of which the first and second resemble the pastern and coronet of the horse, but the third represents he half of the coffin bone of the latter animal. In the joints of the hoof there is not provision for the same elasticity of movement and solidity as in the horse.

In the pig there are four metacar, al bones, two large median and two small lateral, all moveable upon each other at their upper end by means of small jointed facets. There are also moveable upon each other at their upper end by means of small jointed facets. There are also four digits corresponding to the four metacarpals and formed each of three joints. The two lateral ones are not usually in contact with the ground, and are shorter than the median ones which bear the weight of the body.

A FRENCH RAT TRAINER

BY EDMOND RENOIR

By EDMOND RENOIR

All old Parisians remember a queer fellow with a yellowish beard who more than twenty years ago used to give rat shows. He would put his flat basket down at the street corners. With his cage of rats in reach of the street corners. his hand he would hold up two rods fastened together by a cross piece for his "artists" to perform upon. The whole programme consisted of a single exercise.

"Climb!" said the trainer whole programme consisted of a single exercise. "Climb!" said the trainer, opening his toothless mouth; then six or eight rats hegan to run about the flying bridge. But they always returned as quickly as possible and crouched down in the cage. The man with the rats was never seen after 1871. The war was diastrous to so many poor wretches! We thought rat pie a foort in the rate always of the right of Paris!

the rats was never seen after 1871. The war was diastrous to so many poor wretches! We thought rat pie a feast in those days of the siege of Paris!

While intending to tell you about Douroff, the fashionable rat trainer of to-day, I could not forbid myself this touching recollection. Douroff is very interesting when seen at the theatre under the floods of electric light, but he is most attractive as a man, without stage furbelows, and as head of his family—a family of several hundred rats! He has 230 rats on his hand bills. Of course this number is subject to fluctuation. Those that escape or die are made up by new recruits. They are all outdoor rats. He has Russian, German, Spanish, white, variegated and grey rats. After two hours of detention, fasting and caresses, the new rat becomes an approachable subject. Then Douroff studies his character, his talents, his suppleness of mind. Douroff will tell you that it is with rats just as with human beings: some are intelligent and some stupid, some gentle and some fierce, some sociable and some irritable. Douroff sorts his rats, sociate and some irritation. Douron sorts his rats, chooses some and rejects some.

I have seen many things in my life, pleasant, agreeable, brutal or savage; but I have rarely received so startling an impression as when for the first time I entered the restless menageric where Douroff lives with the rife and sharing them. entered the restless menageric where Douroff lives with his wite and charming baby. You can imagine nothing with so much character in a few square yards as Douroff's home, unless it is his den at the Theatre Folies Bergeres. This vivacious little man is a Slavonian. When at home—his home consisting of one room in a large house—he generally lies stretched out in bed, reading some book on training animals and continually passing from theory to practice. It is in bed that he gets acquainted with the new-comers, and cultivates the good will of the whole troupe. Douroff is in bed then—one has to get accustomed to this way of living! All about are cages filled with rats, boxes in which to move them long distances, the trunks of the strolling family, and the "properties," from a train of cars down to baskets and little houses daubed with paint—yes, all the paraphermalia needed by the trainer to keep his legions baskets and little houses daubed with paint—yes, all the paraphernalia needed by the trainer to keep his legions well in practice. On the mantelpiece a bald grey oat sits, and points its ears toward its master in a comical way; a beautiful black cat with long hair has chosen for its resting place the box in front of the bed, and seems clothed with paternal authority over all the rats that run leisurely about the room. To return to the bed Douroff, leaning on his elbow, is making his pupils work; at his side his little girl, scarcely three years old, carelessiy submits herself to the rodents that pass over her pretty and animated little face and among her hair ber pretty and animated little face and among her hair and dispute about the biscuit crumbs on her lips. A large black and white hound takes the place of a down cover for Douroff's feet.

The most important element in Danroff's training is gentleness. When he speaks to his feasts he does so very softly, in caressing tones. He does not touch them, his hand is used only to direct and encourage them. There is a reward at the end of every attempt—a grain of corn, a bit of bread or some dainty. The wildest rat is tamed in a few hours. Very soon also—very soon or never—Douroff will have taught him the most varied exercises, to dance around on his fist, to look smart and to obey him. Bats that cannot be trained are kept to swell the number on the stages.

Rats have very decided characters. There are some that Douroff has never been able to keep shut up. They will not abide a cage. They must roam about the house. They are free poets, sons of the starry night, wishing to live without restraint, and ot their own sweet will. It is often among these that Douroff finds his best subjects—fine artists, graceful and skilful performers. Some rats often among these that Douroff finds his best subjects—fine artists, graceful and skilful performers. Some rats live in families, or groups of 30 or 40, and cannot endure to be mixed with others. A special cage is given to each such group, and they never make a mistake. Each one returns to his own home. There are bad rats that pass their time gossiping or bickering: these are sent to prison! There are invalids; for them a little cage answers as an infirmary, and they receive good care. A milk treatment awakens the gratitude of the patient.

While Douroff is initiating me into these little mysteries, a hospital rat fiercely snaps at his master as he

While Douroff is initiating me into these little mysteries, a hospital rat fiercely snaps at his master as he passes. "Ah!" said Douroff to me, "he wants a little rubbing with glycerine; there!" And the trainer rubbed the little beast, whose expressions of satisfaction were most amusing. Douroff's den at the theatre is on the same plan as his room at home. Rats fond of their liberty are always running freely about or playing on the table; the cats, their strange companions, are always there too. To form an idea of the trainer's patient art, it is necessary to have assisted at a regular stage rehearsal with a company of this kind. Douroff makes all his troupe take a journey in a train of cars run by machinery. This sight astonished me. On the floor of the stage he places a circular road of more thon 20 yards nis troupe take a journey in a train of cars run by machinery. This sight astonished me. On the floor of the stage he places a circular road of more thon 20 yards in circumference, with tunnels, a station, a semaphere or signal apparatus and a train of several cars fastened to a locomotive. With infinitely gentle motions, Douroff directs his rats upon the platform. He carefully drives them out of their cage, caresses them, teahes and persuades them so well that each one keeps to his own robewithout making any confusion among the rest. One rat is taught to go to the locomotive, he is engeneer, his assistant, the stoker, follows him; the tender is filled; the travellers get into the cars. One rat raises the semaphore lantern; other travellers hasten in the direction of the station; the cars fill up, and heads are seen at all the windows; the bell rings, the train moves and, without accident, comes back to its starting place. Wonderful' isn't it? Well, the apprenticeship has been long and wearisome, and the rehearsals difficult. With infinite patience, too, be teaches them to climb poles long and wearisome, and the rehearsals difficult. With infinite patience, too, he teaches them to climb poles inch by inch, patting them with his left hand, with his right offering them morsels of biscuit.

Let us turn to their public appearance. On the stage is an inclined plane, and in the centre of it an extinguished street lamp. The black cat appears alone in the gloom, climbs to the lamp and lights its red flamo with his paw. Douroff enters, dressed in a costume of the middle ages and plays with the cat; then he takes a flute, and draws from it a few simple notes. "A rat!" exclaims some one. Yes, a rat runs out from the side scenes; in a few minutes there are 200 of them. Douroff trusts to the black cat that none escape or are lost. While some are performing in tricks and scenes, others dance about, gombol wildly and climb to the top of the stage. These hundreds of rats, appearing in swarms at the sound of the flute, from one does not know where, disappear suddenly, causing a sort of halknow where, disappear suddenly, causing a sort of hallucinat on.--- "The Asian."

Mr Spofforth the Bowler on his Experiences

Mr Spofforth the Bowler on his Experiences. In the course of an interview with a representative of the Cricket Field, Mr. F. R. Spofforth said:—"When I was a boy at school—at the Glebe, near Sydney—I used to bowl underhand, as nearly everybody did at that time in Australia. It was very first—admost as first as my round—and generally a good length. When I saw Tarrant, who was the fastest bowler I ever knew, I tried to copy him. My one aim was to bowl as fast as possible, without any other idea at all. But when Southerton and Alfred Shaw came over, their bowling was a revelation, and I didn't see any reason why I, shouldn't copy them as well as Tarrant, and try to combine all three. I very soon found that variation in pace was the most important thing of all, and with the object of disguising it I tried various experiments, until I gradually found what seemed to me a style which was the best for disguise as well as for ease." well as for ease.

"There was a good deal of astonishment in England when you did such a wonderful performance in the Marylebone match."

Marylebone match."
"Perhaps there was. But that was only because I was an Australian bowler. If an Englishman had done the same thing against the same team on that wicket mobody would have been in the least surprised. You must remember that we were hardly understood at first; in fact, it is well known that a clergyman was astonished to find that we were not black."
"When you were at the height of your success did you ever find the crowd at all hostile to you?"
"Oute the contrary. They often mobbed me, but only

"Quite the contrary. They often mobbed me, but only in the friendliest way. When we beat Surrey at the Oval by about six runs I was carried into the pavilion, which I reached almost without a shirt on my back; but oval by about six runs I was carried into the pavilion, which I reached almost without a shirt on my back; but it was anything but hostility which caused this. Once, however, we were playing at Keighley, in Yorkshire, on a bumpy wicket. I'm alraid I was bowling very last indeed, and was knocking the men about a little—a fast Winter Pyjamas a speciality.

WINTER SEASON.—"The English," in Calle Cangallo Winter Stock direct from the fit was anything but hostility which caused this. Once, however, we were playing at Keighley, in Yorkshire, on a bumpy wicket. I'm alraid I was bowling very last indeed, and was knocking the men about a little—a fast Winter Pyjamas a speciality.

bowler has to frighten a batsman sometimes. Suddenly an old Yorkshireman rose up among the crowd, and, amid a dead silence, called out in his loudest tones, 'Chain t' long beggar up; he's trying to kill'em! At and a dead silence, called out in his lotdest tones, amid a dead silence, called out in his lotdest tones, "Chain t' long beggar up; he's trying to kill'em! At Sheffield the crowd got over the ropes and took up a lot of space. I was in the long field, and it was often difficult to move. A ball had been hit in my direction, and the people showed no disposition to let me get by, when a Sheffielder constituted himself spokesman, and yelled out. "Mak' way for m, lads—let t'old demon have a chance." They made way at once in the most docile manner."

"Have you any theories as to the way in which a boy should learn to bowl?"

"I have; but I am quite aware that it is heresy, for it is entirely opposed to the advice given in books. A boy is always told to begin by bowling slow, but I am convinced that he ought to do just the opposite. You will understand, of course, that I do not mean that he should always bowl, fast, or that he should strain himself in the slightest degree. But he should, within his strength, learn how to bowl fast, and increase his pace every year. In this way he will have something to vary from, and

In this way he will have something to vary from, and variation is almost everything."

ESTANCIA AND COLONY.

We cordially invite and will be very pleased to receive communications for this column.

Shearing is about to commence in the warmer parts Shearing is about to commence in the warmer parts of the camp, and last season's wool is being rapidly cleared off. From the buyers who are now visiting the various estancias, it is gathered that the yield and quality will be slightly inferior to the previous clip, which was an exceptional one. A partial drought in the west, and scab and losses through liver fluke in the south, will more than counterbalance the increase and improvement in the flocks on the best managed

The published prices in Buenos Aires vary greatly, Southern wools only bringing from $5.50 to $7, others $7.80 to $9.10, while 250 bales of the new clip has been parted with in advance for $6 per 10 kilos. As European demands fix prices in Argentina, holders will do well to note foreign quotation. The Antwerp wool market, from advices by last mail, was very easy, the finer sorts selling well up to 6% d., while the medium down to 24/sd., is not attracting much attention.

 The shipments of stock-from England still continue. From the "Live Stock Journal" we note that the well-known breeder Mr Tom Caswell has despatched fifteen splendid rams from his celebrated Pointon flock to Buenos Aires, and a similar consignment will be made in a few days to another estancia in the same province.

The executive of the Veterinary and Agricultural College, which has been investigating for some time past the diseases from which stock suffer from in this Republic, have drawn the attention of the Government to the importance of the subject, with the result that Dr Zapata has appointed a commission consisting of Don Federico Sivori, anatomical professor of the above institution, and his assistant, Don Rafael Virasoro, to go to the partidos of Castelli, Balcarce, Guamini, Mar Chiquito, and General Lavalle to study the disease which prevails among the animals in those places, and afterwards to issue a report on the results of their labours.

Advices received by this commission from the partido 25 de Mayo state that in addition to the disease known as "darvid" in sheep during the last few years, worms have been very prevalent, as well as tuberculosis and pleuro-pnuemonia, which frequently leaves pleural adherences to the animal which survive the disease. Maggots, developed in the damp grasses, and footrot are also playing havoe, among the flocks. Horses have suffered severely from influenza, while, abortion is still very common. The cattle diseases were pleuro-pneumonia, worms, and tubercles.

The "Jefe" of Valle Fertil sent the Postmaster-general very bad news from that district last Saturday immense "mangas" of locusts, travelling from north to south, and extending over four leagues of camp, were doing fearful damage. The drought is terrible, and cattle are suffering greatly from hunger and thirst. The camps are without grass, and owners of stock disheartened by present and future losses; they are moving their stock from one point to another in the hopes of saving it, but in so doing are experiencing great lossess.

As regards horses and cows, the Azul Fair is said to have carried off the palm. Mr James Schneider's Russian stallion and heavy sires, Mr Church's Clydesdales, and other horses shown, attracted universal admiration as also didsome Durham bulls belonging to Sres J. Salaberri, F. Urioste, F. Urbaco, J. Church, and A. Ginocchio. Mr Church also sent sixty-eight Lincoln-Rambouillet rams of great size. bouillet rams of great size.

Some of the sheep fetched good prices and others very small. Sr J. Lartigues bought a Lincoln ram from Mr G. Bell's estancia for $300, the highest price reached. An imported Durham bull was sold by Mr L. Dhers to Mr C. Bell for $2000, and Messrs Gibson Brothers gave $600 for a Durham bull bred by Mr Church.

More live stock from England is due by the ss Heliopes. They consist of two Clydescale stallions consigned to Imay and Rivero, seven shorthorn cows with calves, twenty-five Lincoln rams to Bullitoh and Co., eight shorthorn bulls, and thirty-one Lincoln rams to Funes and Lagos.

The following statistics, taken from the "Standard," will be found of interest to wool growers. The dard," will be found of interest to wool growers. The prices of wool given below may guide estancieros to a certain extent in their estimate of the new clip.

The total export of wool from all the ports in the Republic is estimated at 148,550,000 kilos, equal to 370,000 bales, and the stock estimated at present on hand in deposit is 1,500,000 kilos, and the stock still existing in the camp is 1,800,000 kilos, which gives a total of 3,300,000 kilos, equal to 8,250 bales, and the following are the closing quotations for last season's wool:

Mr Maciennan has also shipped some valuable shorthorrs which, according to the "Live Stock Journal," "form one of the finest lots ever sent out of the country, and it is the opinion of several good judges who saw them that they had never looked over a more even and meritorious shipment. The selection of so many high-class specimens of the breed must have taken a great deal of time and trouble, as they were all personally chosen by Mr Macleinan in different counties of England and in the north of Scotland.

"The following were the one and two-year-old bulls shipped by Mr Macleilar
"Baron Bridekirk 3rd, roan, bred by Mr Barnes, winner of ten first and four champion prizes in England and Scotland; Launcelot, red, bred by R. Geekie, winner of two first and two champion prizes in Scotland; Excelsior, roan, bred by Mr Robertson, winner of three (including Highland and Agricultural Society), champion, and two second prizes; Frince Alfred, red, bred by Mr Fletcher, winner of three second prizes. The wheat crop, if it were not for the locusts threatening to upset all calculations, would promise to be by far and away the largest on record. On the Pacific line, great tracts are being cultivated for the first time. At Munix, Pilar, Bellavista, Cortinez and Mercedes, the crops look strong and healthy. At O'Higgins about 2000 squares are under first sowing, at Junin 1000 squares and at Alberdi 3000 squares. The whole country round about, if all goes well, will be what President Pelligrini called "a sea of waving corn."

At Rosario last week the first sales of wheat of the future crop took place, 1000 fanegas being negotiated at $9. Wheat should bring a good figure this season, as another famine is threatened in Russia and the English harvest is far from being a bountiful one. Although in another famine is threatened in Russia and the English harvest is far from being a bountiful one. Although in the province of Santa Fe the area under this cereal is 25 per cent greater than twelve months ago, the decision of the Federal authorities that the detestable export tax on wheat is lawful, will do much to depress prices in that locality.

The sugar industry is already an important one in the Republic, but if the bill now before the Chamber of Deputies becomes law, it is probable that not only will the Republic supply its own requirements, but an export trade spring up. The production of beet sugar in this country, according to some shrewd authorities, would be a profitable speculation, and it is to encourage this industry that a proposal is made to set aside $200,000 for this purpose. The Province of Cordoba is mentioued as being specially suitable, and it is asked that the money be spent in that district, one half to be divided among growers and the other half to the manufacturers who produce up to 200,000 kilos annually. Beet sugar being cheaper, although inferior, to cane sugar has the run of the European markets.

Perhaps the most rapidly developing district in the Republic just now is Misiones. The area under tobacco has doubled in a few months, and such is the quantity of the fragrant weed coming down the river that at first it was thought to be smuggled leaf. The tobacco grown in these districts is equal to Paraguayan, but hardly up to Brazilian. However, it is driving both qualities out of the market. According to the Custom-house official at Posadas, chief town of the district, there were about two millions of tobacco plants in Misiones in '91 from which about 380 tons of leaf were produced. In our last issue we published hints on the cultivation of this valuable crop. As curing the leaf is, in reality, of much greater importance than growing it, we will shortly deal with this subject.

In addition to tobacco other products, such as alfalfa, maise, mani, mandioca, &c., are being produced in this fertile district in the same proportion. A correspondent of the "Times" writes that one of the most important of of the "Times" writes that one of the most important of these plantations is that belonging to Messrs Artigas Bros. in concepcion de la Sierra. A ten horse-power engine, 150 labourers, 150 ploughing oxen, two mowers, a thrashing machine, 20 ploughs and 10 harrows do the work. Nearly 150,000 tobacco plants, 30 acres of sugar cane, 10,000 yerbs trees, an extensive vineyard, maize fields, and others are all flourishing on this model farm. Rice of excellent quality was raised last season to the extent of 70 tons, of which ten were reserved for this year's sowing. year's sowing.

The locusts have already caused immense damage to the young wheat in parts of Santa Fé, and unless rain comes shortly in order to make it spring up again the loss to the colonists will be terrible. The Government of Santa Fé have the use of $30,000 ont of the $500,000 decreed by Congress for the destruction of the locust, but we are afraid that the locusts will win the day. We were the only but we are arraid that the locusts will win the day. We were told lately by two estancieros, who were the only ones in their district who made any real fight against these pests last year, that in the end they suffered more than any one. Coming latterly in myriads, they found it impossible to do more than place a few men in their patios killing the locusts with sheep dips, to keep them out of their houses.

The chief sales of stock during the week has been
